"GO AHEAD, MY LORD"

returned several times up to 7 o'clock.

Q.—Well, now, will you be good enough to tell us all that passed between you and Mr. Stratton with reference to the Gamey matter? A.—Mr. Stratton said that he would try and get Mr. Gamey to give an interview with the idea of supporting the Government's position; an interview from Mr. Gamey stating that he would support the Government would have some weight in the bye-elections which were then pending. The rest of the conversation related to where I was to meet him, etc.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Stratton at all on the morning of the 29th? A.—Not that I remember of.

Q.—Then what hour in the afternoon you say was fixed? A.—About two o'clock.

Q.—At two o'clock when you went up to the buildings whom did you see? A.—I am not sure, I think it was Mr. Costello.

Q.—Who is Mr. Costello? We have not heard of him before? A.—He is the messenger in Mr. Myers' office.

Q.—Did you speak to Costello? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you do anything in consequence? A.—I think I went out.

Q.—Was Mr. Stratton there? A.—I did not see him.

Q.—Do you know whether Mr. Stratton was engaged in his private room or not? A.—I do not know.

Q.—Do you know, as a matter of fact, when you went in there, whether Mr. Stratton was there or not? A.—I do not know.

Q.—Do you know whether Mr. Gamey was there or not? A.—I am not sure about that.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—You went up there about two o'clock. How long were you around the buildings on the 29th? A.—I was there until nearly seven o'clock that night.

Q.—Well, then, you say on the first visit you did not know whether Mr. Gamey or Mr. Stratton were there in the private office? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know on the occasion of the second visit whether either or both were there? A.—I think probably on the second visit I did.

Q.—What did you learn then? A.—My recollection is that Mr. Gamey was in Mr. Stratton's office.

Q.—And who was in the outer room? A.—I have not a clear recollection of that.

Q.—Was Mr. Myers there? A.—I think he was, but I would not be sure.

Q.—Then on the second occasion you did not do anything because you understood Mr. Gamey and Mr. Stratton were closeted together? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the result of your third attempt? A.—As near as I can recollect I waited until he had gone out.

Q.—Were you told what time he was likely to return? A.—In the neighborhood of six o'clock.

Interview Was Prepared.

Q.—Did you know whether any paper had been prepared and handed to him? A.—I saw a document on the previous day which I understood would probably be handed to him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then on the 28th you saw a document that would probably be handed to him?

Q.—Who showed you that document? A.—Mr. Stratton.

Q.—When Mr. Stratton handed it to you, did he say anything to you as to who had prepared it?

The Chancellor—I didn't understand you to say he handed it to him.

A.—He showed to to me.

Mr. Ritchie—I understood he handed it to him.

The Witness—He handed it to me.

Q.—Then you read it over? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did Mr. Gamey come back? A.—Oh, it was after six sometime.

Q.—Did you see him come back? A.—I don't think I saw him go in.

Q.—When did you first ascertain he got back, and from whom? A.—Oh, I knew before six or in the neighborhood of six o'clock that he was in the building.

Q.—How did you know that? A.—Mr. Myers told me.

Q.—Did you see Frank Sullivan there that day? A.—I saw him in the corridor. Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—It would be in the corridor of the floor that Mr. Stratton's office is on.

Q.—How close to Stratton's office? A.—Oh, he moved back and forth.

Q.—How long was he around there? A.—He was in the corridor at different times between six and seven o'clock.

Q.—Did you on the 29th see Mr. Sullivan either in or out of Mr. Stratton's office? A.—I don't remember definitely where I saw him.

Arrival of Mr. Gamey.

Q.—About half-past six Mr. Gamey came down and went into Mr. Stratton's office? A.—Yes.

Q.—You waited from half-past six to what hour? Till seven o'clock? A.—For what?

Q.—Before you got this interview? A.—It would be about a quarter to seven, I should think.

The Chancellor—What happened? A.—I got the interview.

Mr. Ritchie—You got the interview from whom? A.—From Mr. Gamey.

The Chancellor—That is, you got a paper? A.—I got a paper.

Q.—Was that the same one which Mr. Stratton had handed to you the day previously? A.—No.

Q.—Was it different, and if so in what respect? A.—It was written on another sheet of paper.

Q.—This one handed to you on the 29th was typewritten, the earlier part of it. Was there something added in ink? A.—There were alterations in pen.

Q.—Any additions in pen? A.—Alterations and additions.

Q.—Who were present when that paper was handed to you by Mr. Gamey? A.—I think Mr. Myers was in the room most of the time.

Q.—Can you also tell us if Mr. Sullivan was there at that time? A.—I don't remember, he may have been in and out of the room, but I was not watching him.

Q.—Do you know whether they left together or not? A.—They both disappeared about the same time.

Q.—After you got this from Mr. Gamey did you have any interview with Mr. Stratton about it? A.—Yes, I saw him.

The Chancellor—When, that night? A.—Yes, sir.

Mr. Stratton Satisfied.

Q.—What was the purport of your interview with Mr. Stratton? A.—He expressed himself as well pleased with getting the interview.

Q.—It had not been signed then, apparently, when it left Stratton's room? A.—No.

Q.—Why did you ask Mr. Gamey to sign it?

The Chancellor—Did you ask him to sign it? A.—Yes; for one reason Mr. Stratton asked me to ask him to sign it.

Q.—You tell us he made certain alterations in pencil, "In matters that I am satisfied with." Did you, after he had signed that, call Mr. Stratton's attention to the alteration? A.—I showed him the interview.

Q.—You showed him the paper? A.—Yes. I showed him the paper, and I think he noticed the change himself.

Q.—Any observation made about it? A.—He did not like the idea.

Q.—How did you know he did not like the idea? A.—He said so.

Q.—Anything further? A.—He wanted to strike that out.

Q.—Why was it not stricken out? A.—Because I said I had acted in good faith with Mr. Gamey, and I would not strike it out.

To Mr. Johnston the witness said that in his experience he found that some public men preferred to prepare their own interviews whenever the matter was important, and there was nothing unusual in this respect about the interview.

The witness stated that he regarded the document, with the changes made in Mr. Gamey's handwriting, as Mr. Gamey's own interview, and there was no question raised as to it being such. Mr. Gamey handed it to witness as his own interview. Witness added that he wanted the interview signed for his own protection—because he thought it wise. The correctness of the interview as printed in the Globe had never been repudiated.

Mr. Crossin Called.

Mr. Edward Crossin, piano manufacturer, said that in September, 1902, during the last Exhibition week, he had several conversations with Mr. Gamey, and on the day he went home he (Gamey) deposited money in the Traders' Bank. The bills were of large denominations, tens and fifties. Mr. Gamey told him where he got the money.

Mr. Ritchie asked where Mr. Gamey got the bills, and Mr. Riddell objected. The objection was overruled.

Mr. Crossin said Mr. Gamey told him it was $1,500 which he had got in a deal; that it was not yet closed, and that more would be heard about it. On Tuesday previous, March 10, he admitted Mr. Gamey, at his request, and three others to the piano factory.

The court then adjourned till 10 o'clock this morning.

The Worship of the Moon.

The Moslem still slaps his hands at the sight of the new moon and mutters a prayer, although the Koran appears to forbid the practice in the words, "Bend not in adoration of the sun or moon." Herodotus accuses the ancient Persians of being moon worshipers, and, though they denied the practice, the following passage from the Zend Avesta would seem to be conclusive: "We sacrifice to the new moon, the holy and master of holiness; we sacrifice to the full moon, the holy and master of holiness."

A Modern Newspaper Evil.

Talking of newspaper headings suggests a protest against the continual breaking of articles to continue on some succeeding or other page; more often other by the same token. Reading a daily journal has come to be very much like reading a weekly or monthly serial, only instead of having one novel to follow, you have half a dozen, the result being that you either overlook something that you would like to know or lose the thread of the argument and have to repeatedly turn back. The tendency is always nowadays to length, and I must confess that I sigh for the good old days of pith and brightness, when, for instance, The New York Sun used to give all the news all the time in concise form. Those days will return, mark my words, and the most successful and most profitable paper of the future will be the one that gives business men the day's information at the breakfast table in concise and easily digestible form. I, for one, never fail to read the summary of the news if one is given, before entering upon a perusal of the main body of the paper. In that way I often get possession of news that in the hurry would be overlooked.—The Captious One, in Toronto Sunday World.

The Eskimos of Canada.

The Census Bureau recently received from Rev. G. Walton, Church of England missionary, at Fort George on the east shore of Hudson Bay, the schedules of an enumeration of Eskimos, in Ungava. The schedules were not sent from Ottawa until the spring of 1901 and did not reach the enumerator until the Eskimos had gone from their usual domicile at Big Whale River to their hunting grounds, a considerable distance north. Mr. Walton had, therefore, to wait until the spring of 1902, before he could take the census and it was not until the subsequent September that an opportunity occurred of forwarding to Ottawa the results of his labors.

One hundred and seventy-four Eskimos, which number only represent one-third of the total, were counted. There were altogether forty-two families. All belong to the Church of England and almost all the adults can read and write. A typical name for the head of a family is Ochaungwak and for a wife Melukto.

Kidney Trouble and Lumbago.

Thirty Years of Backache and Rheumatism—Winter Season's Especially Severe—Attributes Cure to

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

This season of the year is especially trying on the older people. The pains and aches grow more severe in the cold and changeable weather, the kidneys get out of order, rheumatism and lumbago torture their victims, there are aching backs and limbs, stomach derangements, urinary and bowel disorders and serious, painful and fatal maladies.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are particularly suited to the needs of persons of advanced age. They regulate and invigorate the liver, kidneys and bowels and prove effectual when ordinary medicines fail. This letter from Mr. Robert Jackson gives some idea of what this treatment is accomplishing every day.

Mr. Robert Jackson, ship builder, Port Robinson, Ont., writes: "I was afflicted with kidney trouble and lumbago for about thirty years. The winters were always very severe on me, and I was many times incapacited with all the serious symptoms of both troubles. I had backache, biliousness, rheumatism, headache and constipation, and was wrecked physically. I used all sorts of medicines and have been treated by the medical profession to no purpose.

In the spring of 1902 I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and from the start received great benefit. I continued the treatment until I fully recovered good health and vigour, my old trouble being a thing of the past. I am seventy-five years old, and if, at my advanced age, I have received such grand results from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills after years of unnecessary suffering, there can be no doubt of their efficacy in the treatment of younger persons. I recommend them to everyone. I have tried to think of words to express my gratitude, but it is beyond expression for they have done more for me than I would have believed."

Tortured with Pain.

Too Weak to Work.

ULCERS, BOILS AND PIMPLES ALL OVER HER BODY

Such was the condition of Mrs. Samuel Deitz, Zurich, Ont.

She happily found relief from her terrible suffering by using

Burdock Blood Bitters.

A remedy without a rival for the cure of all diseases and troubles arising from bad blood. A record extending over a quarter of a century and thousands of testimonials will prove this. Mrs. Deitz writes: "Too weak to work, tortured with the pain of ulcers, boils and pimples all over my body, especially on my face. I had almost made up my mind to give up trying to have them cured. I was ashamed to have any person come to see me, my face was in such a terrible state. I tried everything I could think of but got worse and worse. I was then led to try Burdock Blood Bitters and was surprised at the wonderful change the first bottle made. Altogether I took seven bottles and am now completely cured and am in perfect health again. I feel that B.B.B. saved my life."

X-RAYS IN PARRY SOUND.

Dyer Ireland, Editor of The North Star, Gets a Treatment, and Interestingly Tells All About It.

A few days ago the Editor of The North Star, Parry Sound, had the privilege of witnessing the workings of the X-rays at the Parry Sound Hospital. The X-ray, he explains, is so called because it is still an "X" or "unknown" quantity. Before seeing it in operation the writer supposed the X-ray to be a very strong light which shone through everything with a blinding intensity, whereas as a matter of fact all that anyone can see is a globe lit up with a dim green fluid, the luminosity of which is insufficient to enable one to read a newspaper.

How It Looks.

The first thing that catches the eye on entering Dr. Stone's office, is a large glass case containing the static electrical machine producing the current which supplies the light. This machine is operated by a water motor of a half horse-power. From the poles of the battery, wires are led to a Crooke's tube, which emits the X-rays. This tube is a glass bulb about six inches in diameter, from which the air or gases have been previously exhausted, thus creating a vacuum. At each end of this tube is fused a platinum wire to one end of which is fixed a flat disc—the anode—and to the other a cup-shaped electrode—the cathode. When the machine is started in action the tube begins to glow with a dim green light. That is the ray. We had, as has been already said, expected to see a light of such extraordinary brilliancy that we instinctively screwed up our optics to the peeping point, and when we were told that this dim glow was the famous Roentgen or X-ray, we were grieviously surprised.

How It Operates.

In examining anything with the ray, the operator has to look through a tube, one end of which is covered with a paste of cyanide of barium and platinum. The person to be operated on is placed between the light and the operator, who places one end of the examining tube to his eyes and the other he places on the patient, and immediately everything becomes visible, according to the relative density of each substance.

The writer had the privilege of looking through one of the gentlemen present, clothes and all, just as he stood, and could easily discern the bones and ribs and the pulsating of the heart was perfectly distinct. One of the doctors took up a book which was from 2½ to 3 inches thick, and placed his hand behind it; we looked through the tube and could plainly see the bones of the doctor's fingers through the entire thickness of the book just as if there had been no book there.

Examined the Editor.

The writer was also put through a thorough examination, but being only a newspaper correspondent, nothing of intrinsic value was found upon him, of course. A demonstration was also given of the use of the X-rays for the cure of cancer, tumors, etc. By simply holding the glass globe close to the part to be operated upon and submitting it to frequent exposures, the penetrating power of the rays has the effect of piercing the growth and gradually disseminating it until it finally disappears.

Can See Through a Man.

After having had a most interesting time with the X-rays, which enables one to "see through a man" better than ever was dreamt of until lately, Mr. Watt removed the Roentgen tube and using the static machine alone, he gave several present a course of treatment in electropathy, which is the treatment of diseases by the use of electricity. The patient is seated in a chair on a platform raised about six inches off the ground. A brass rod, called the shepherd's crook, because it is exactly like one, connects one pole of the static machine with the platform, while the other pole is connected with the floor by a chain. The operator standing on the floor is the medium by which the electricity is carried to the patient. He stands behind the patient and points a rod at him, and whenever that rod comes within a certain distance of the person in the chair—distance dependent on the strength of the current—the fluid passes from the rod to the patient and operates more particularly on the part to which the operator is pointing. Desirous of seeing into everything, and being inflicted with a slight touch of rheumatism, we offered ourselves as a subject.

As to the Sensation.

The first mistake we made was that we did not inform Mr. Watt as to the exact geographical location of the rheumatism, and that gentleman started in with his little stick on an exploratory mission, which kept us guessing lively. He started in with giving us a poke on the shoulder blade, just at that point where scratching is a most difficult operation. The sensation is a sharp tingling one, not at all unpleasant if it were not delightfully unexpected. After giving us two or three playful pokes in the short ribs, he sent a telegraphic despatch up our spine to the base of the skull, which felt just like when we make one step in the dark where no step exists, only 100 times more so. Joking aside, however, the treatment is pleasant and can be varied in strength at will.

Another of the gentlemen present was treated for neuralgic pains. A ring of metal was hung a foot or so over his head and the current was turned on. As soon as this was done each individual hair stuck up on end until the patient looked like one of the pictures we have seen outside the booths of a country show of the ancient Azteca of Mexico, only more so. The sensation was most agreeable, and certainly some of us who were treated that night went away thoroughly convinced of the efficiency of the electropathic treatment for the cure of nervous or rheumatic diseases.

The healthy woman need not fear the change which comes as the beginning of life's autumn. It is the woman who is worn out, run down and a sufferer from womanly diseases who naturally dreads the change of life. This is the critical period of woman's life, and the prevalence of womanly diseases makes it the duty of every woman who would avoid unnecessary suffering to take especial care of herself at this time.

The ills which vex so many women at the change of life are entirely avoided or cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong, and enables the weakest to pass through this trying change with the tranquility of perfect health.

"I have been a very healthy woman, and this time has been very hard with me," writes Mrs. Maggie Morris, of Minson Station, Clearfield Co., Pa., Box 18. "I am come to the time of change of life, and I have been sick a great deal off and on. When Mrs. Hemmis moved beside me I was sick in bed, and when she came to see me and we were talking over our sickness, Mrs. Hemmis told me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' also 'Pellets.' I got her to bring me a bottle of each from the drug store and I used them. They did me a great deal of good, and I got two more bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' I never saw such a wonderful cure. Before I commenced your remedies I was good for nothing; was in such misery I hardly knew what to do with myself, now I can do all my work myself and feel well."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are easy and pleasant to take.

At last I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and by the time I had used two-thirds of a box my back was as well and as strong as ever and has kept so ever since."

The Skin on Fire

So dreadful are the sensations of burning, itching Eczema that victims frequently describe their sufferings by saying that the skin is all on fire. The stinging, biting fires of Eczema are quenched by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. The first few applications may cause a little uneasiness but a cure is sure to result and the skin is healed without scar or blemish.

Beautiful New Leather From India.

Northern India, the storehouse for so many strange articles of commerce has again opened the doors of its treasure chambers to put a new product on the market.

When the nabobs, rajahs and potentates gathered at Delhi from all over India to attend the durbar, to hear Edward VII. of England proclaimed Emperor and to join in the celebration of the great event there came one rajah from the back of beyond, bringing presents of all manner of strange things to the Viceroy, Lord Curzon. Among other gifts were a large number of whole skins of beautifully tanned leather.

The source of the supply was not then divulged; neither was the process by which the skins were prepared explained, and the mystery altogether created a great deal of interest. Tough, and at the same time almost as flexible as rubber, the quality of the skins denoted the highest perfection of the tanner's art. Belts and other articles used for wear or ornament were made and extensively worn, while the product was named, in honor of the Viceroy, Curzon leather.

By some art in the tanning the outer surface of the skin is colored in a great variety of tints. The basic color is pearl grey, while little corrugations on the surface reflect, when a piece of the goods is moved about in the light, a dozen different colors. At one time the piece will take on the coppery tints of the sunset, at another brilliant greens show up, then copper green and gold intermingled, and still again the appearance is similar to that of a piece of frosted silver.

The possibilities offered for making the beautiful stuff into wristbags, belts, automobile bags and other articles for feminine use are unlimited, and already manufacturers are taking advantage of their opportunities.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Bill to Permit Skilled Workmen to Be Imported—Ontario Estimates—Canal Improvements—Railway Horrors.

Ottawa, April 16.—Among the bills introduced in the House yesterday was one by Mr. Charlton to allow skilled workmen to be imported into Canada for industries already established, if such labor could not be got in the Dominion. The bill was read a first time.

Among the questions answered was one by Mr. Blair to the effect that the trackmen of the I.C.R. have received two increases in pay within six years. In 1900 the track foreman was given $1.65, instead of $1.60, and sectionmen $1.20 instead of $1.15; in 1902 the trackmen were given $1.75 and the sectionmen $1.30.

Sir Wilfrid told Mr. Tarte that the Order-in-Council appointing the Transportation Commission has not yet been signed.

On motion to go into supply, Mr. Clarke (Toronto) brought up the question of a Government officer to enquire into the causes of the recent railway wrecks, and a general discussion ensued. Mr. Blair, in replying, said the Government was considering the appointment of an officer, specially qualified, to investigate all railway wrecks and accidents.

The Georgian Bay Canal scheme made its annual appearance, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he thought the country was not prepared for such an enormous expenditure as would be required. Mr. Charlton advocated the Government ownership of the canal. Several members spoke and the matter was dropped.

A number of votes for harbors and wharves in Ontario were passed, and the House adjourned at 11 o'clock.

TOBACCO TRUST EXISTS.

Report of Judge MacTavish Who Was Appointed to Investigate.

Ottawa, April 16.—The findings of Judge MacTavish, the alleged tobacco trust commissioner, as presented to the House yesterday, along with a voluminous amount of evidence, were as follows:

(1) That the contract system complained of by the petitioners does, in fact, exist, and is in general use in the cigarette and tobacco trade in Canada.

(2) That the provisions of the contracts are not illegal, either under any stautory law heretofore enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

(3) That the manufacturers of cigarettes and of Canadian tobacco other than the American and Empire Tobacco Companies, are at a disadvantage in the distribution of their goods and in the prosecution of their business generally by reason of such contract system.

Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., Stock Brokers, Toronto, write as follows:—

New York, April 15, 1903.—To-day's market showed an extremely strong undertone after some hesitation around the opening, due to profit taking. Prices resumed their upward course all along the line. During the noon-day session market became quite dull and early purchasers took the opportunity to realize profits, causing recessions to about opening prices. The market apparently is not quite ready for an extended upturn although do not look for any decided decline. A fair reaction will be perfectly natural and may extend to the low prices of this week and would advise purchases on any decline. Afternoon session was inclined to dullness with prices holding firm. There was good demand for good securities by London and Amsterdam. Near the close prices worked lower on profit taking.

Chicago.—Wheat very strong to-day. Think pool in May wheat will try and put it to 80 this week. Closing prices.—Wheat, May, 77 3-8; corn, May, 44 1-2; oats, May, 33 7-8; pork, May, 17.97 1-2; lard, May, 9.90.

IN THE SPRING

Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—They Enable Nature to Right Itself and Thus Dispose of the Objectionable Lassitude Naturally and for Good.

You know it's Spring. That tired feeling tells you that. You are not sick but you have little inclination to eat and still less to work. You just want to do nothing and feel miserable.

Do you know why? Do you know that the stomach has been working hard with fatty food all winter supplying the different parts of the body with both heat and food—that the stomach's work is doubled in the winter?

Do you know that the stomach after its double work is tired? That when tired it fails in its duty of supplying the different parts of the body with food. That when the parts do not get food they are starved and weak.

Your stomach needs help! It needs Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will digest the food while the stomach rests. They will not only ensure a food supply to the starved organs and muscles, but they will rest the stomach and put it in shape to do its work well. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are what the stomach needs in the spring time. They are a natural cure because they enable the body to right itself. When the body is right there can be no weary, dispiriting spring feelings.

COW CASE SETTLED AFTER MUCH LITIGATION.

Magistrate Flint, of Belleville, Gives Judgment in an Interesting Case.

Magistrate Flint has given judgment in the famous cow case that has caused such interest among the Indians on the reservation. Seli Brant charged Abraham Baptiste with appropriating a calf. While the case was in chancery the calf grew to be a cow, became a mother and Seli had to change his case around to meet the new conditions.

Years ago before our Mohawks began to wear store clothes and have consumption Seli would have been able to demand another wife after winning this case as he is richer by two cows. The Esquimaux counts his wealth by the number of fish hooks he has hid in his hut and the Indian by his cows and ponies.

The defendant in the case Abraham Baptiste, had the cows long enough to make him think he owned them, but he has to give them up and pay $25.50 which was the amount of the fine and costs. Mr. W. Carnew appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. Geo. Denmark for the defendant.

IT'S A GOOD SIGN.

When you hear of noted food experts and able physicians recommending the use of Malt Breakfast Food instead of oatmeal, rolled oats and other preparations, it is a good sign; it means that Malt Breakfast Food stands first in nourishing and building up virtues.

When you are assured that Malt Breakfast Food is taking the place of oatmeal preparations in thousands of our Canadian homes, it is a sure sign that our people have found Malt Breakfast Food all that it is represented to be—nutritious, healthful, appetizing and delicious.

When you, by experience, find that one package of Malt Breakfast Food will make a meal for twenty-five people, it's a good sign of economy. If you are a stranger to Malt Breakfast Food get a package from your Grocer and test it.

We Must Move Them.

If you have any idea of the trouble and expense of moving granite and marble monuments and tombstones, you will understand our anxiety to sell what you see standing in our yard rather than have to move them to another stand. Our landlord is preparing to erect a new brick block on our corner, and rather than move our stock, we are asking but a fraction of what our monuments are worth to save moving. THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

The T. A. S. Team May Enter the C. L. A.

The Trent Valley Canoe Club Held a Meeting Last Night—Other Notes.

LACROSSE.

St. Peter's T.A.S. Lacrosse Club held a business meeting last night to consider the advisability of entering a team in the junior series of the C. L.A. The proposed Trent Valley Lacrosse League does not give promise, from present appearances, of developing into a live organization. Campbellford is experiencing difficulty in getting together a team, and Hastings, it is said has lost several of their men. Besides the baseball fever has struck that burg and the outlook for lacrosse is not of the brightest.

Taking all these facts into consideration, the T.A.S. boys decided to identify themselves with the Junior C.L.A., providing, of course, the Trent Valley League does not materialize and that Port Hope II, Lindsay, Uxbridge and other near-by towns are grouped in a district, thereby lessening railroad travel to a considerable degree.

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the C.L.A. in reference to the matter, and also to arrange for a game in town with an outside team on the morning of Victoria Day, May 25th. In the afternoon they will battle for a trophy with a team from the district, at Rev. Father Phelan's picnic in Lakefield.

The executive gave a very encouraging report as regards the improvements being made on the school grounds, and everything is being put in ship-shape.

The team has been very fortunate in securing the services of Billy LaPierre, who last year figured on the Young Capitals, of Ottawa. He is a splended player, and will strengthen the team materially. Another valuable acquisition to the team is Tommy Rappell, of Montreal, a clever stick handler and highly spoken of by the knowing ones as a good all round man. It is said he figured with the best of them in his career as a lacrossist.

* * * *

Port Hope, according to the Guide, will probably associate with senior company in the C.L.A. this season.

* * * *

Dade and Hendry, who figured on Brantford's aggregation last summer, will battle for the Montrealers this season.

* * * *

Percy Quinn, the star goal keeper of the Shamrocks will reside in Winnipeg in future.

* * * *

Fred Lynch is expected in Peterborough on a visit to his mother before going to Montreal to play with the Shamrocks.

* * * *

The Campbellford Despatch says: We have material in town for a couple of good lacrosse teams and could enter one in the C.L.A. junior series but as yet the sporting element has not been sufficiently aroused to take any active steps in the matter. There has been some talk of entering the T.V.L., but nothing definite has been decided on. The boys have been practicing and are anxious to play. The citizens are expected to take an interest in the game and not allow outside men to take our men and then wake up to the fact that we had the proper material for a good team.

WRESTLING.

Art Edmunds, the clever little local featherweight wrestler, has been matched to wrestle Dave Simon, of Montreal, at Peterborough, on Monday, April 27th. Simon is a welterweight and recently threw Gauthier, at Peterborough. Edmunds will give him about twenty pounds and the match will be a handicap affair. Simon has agreed to throw Edmunds twice in an hour, the winner to take the entire purse of $200. Edmunds is in fine form at present and believes he can easily stay the distance.

Edmunds is going on a tour of the big cities on the other side of the line in June. Harvey Parker, the crack wrestler, who failed to throw Edmunds here some time ago, wants the Toronto lad to join him, and it is more than probable that Edmunds will do so. Parker thinks that there is championship material in Edmunds. The latter will meet all comers at his weight with Parker. — Toronto News.

HOCKEY.

The St. Peter's T.A.S. hockey team will be banquetted by the society in their rooms next Wednesday and the affair promises to be a decidedly interesting one.

CANOEING.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Trent Valley Canoe Club, which was held last night in the Y.M.C.A. parlours, at which Commodore Stock presided.

The Club decided to hold an illuminated parade on the Little Lake on May 1st, at which there will be music. Commodore Stock and Howard Taylor were appointed to interview the Engineer of the Trent Valley Canal for the construction of a slide at the locks below the cemetery. The meeting then adjourned.

Bicycle Improvements.

Bicycle making has made such strides in the past few years and the improvements have been so many and of such considerable importance that the pleasure of bicycling has been greatly increased. These improvements in making have also reduced the cost of a bicycle to such a low figure that no one need deny themselves this most healthful of pastimes. The pleasure of riding is increasing every year and with it the health and strength-giving qualities. There is certainly no exercise like it.

The Fraser Mission Band of St. Paul's Church, will present the 'Story of Kardoo," a service of song, on Thursday evening, April 16th, at 8 o'clock, in the Sabbath School Room of the church Tickets 15c.

REMARKABLE TESTIMONY.

Light Thrown on Gamey's Story by Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, K. C.

HE THOUGHT MR. GAMEY WAS FOR SALE.

Interview at Crossin's Told by the Price Brothers.

SCOPE OF INQUIRY BROAD.

Mr. Aylesworth Suggested the Letter That Gamey Signed—Stratton Prepared the Draft and Gamey Added His Signature in Aylesworth's Office—Gamey Told Aylesworth He Wanted to Borrow Money.

Toronto, April 17. — Yesterday morning on the opening of the Royal Commission hearing the Gamey charges A. B. Aylesworth, K. C., was the first witness sworn. He was examined by Mr. S. H. Blake, K.C.

Mr. Aylesworth said that after the general elections in May last he received a retainer from Alexander Smith, secretary of the Ontario Liberal Association, under which he undertook not to act for any petitioner against a supporter of the Government without leave. The opening of the present matter, so far as he was concerned, was a chance interview with Hon. Mr. Stratton in the corridors of the Parliament Buildings on Tuesday, Sept. 9.

Stratton said: "Gamey is going to support us!" Aylesworth said: "How do you know?" Stratton said that was the point, and wanted to know how he could be held. The lawyer suggested a letter which could be held over his head, and Stratton asked him to draw one. Aylesworth said: "You know what you want, draw it yourself." Stratton then asked whether he might send Gamey to him, and Mr. Aylesworth assented. Next morning when the latter was in the Court of Appeal at Osgoode Hall, Mr. Stratton came to him and handed him a typewritten letter, and told him Gamey was coming to see him.

Aylesworth Met Gamey.

Shortly after his return to his office, Gamey and Frank Sullivan, neither of whom he had ever seen before, came into his office. The conversation was opened with regard to the election petition, and Mr. Aylesworth explained that under his retainer he could not act for Mr. Gamey unless he were a Government supporter. Gamey said that was all right, and Mr. Aylesworth gave him the letter to sign. Gamey read it over once or, perhaps twice, and signed it. Some discussion arose as to who should hold the letter and Mr. Aylesworth offered to keep it in the vault of his firm, subject to his order.

He then said, "Well, I was wanting a small loan." That was the first I had heard of money in any shape. I said, "A loan?" I thought, honestly though, possibly the man wanted a few dollars to get home with, or something; and I said, "Why, what do you mean?" He said, "I wanted to get a loan." I said, "How much?" He said, "Either three thousand or four thousand dollars"— I don't remember which at all. He may have put it in that way, "three or four thousand dollars," I said, "What security have you got?" I then thought that he meant perhaps a loan on real estate. I said to him, "I don't know anything about that part of the business in our office, I do not attend to it, but if you have got security I suppose you can arrange a loan. He said—I think he said—"Goods."

Difficulty in Getting Loan.

Chancellor Boyd—Q.—Goods? A.—Yes, my Lord. He conveyed certainly to my mind the impression of goods and chattels; because I answered, "You will have difficulty, I think, in finding any money lender who will invest in a chattel mortgage on goods in Manitoulin Island." But I have, of course, read his written statement in the House and such portion of his evidence here as related to myself, and I observed his use of the word "shares" or "stock" so that it is quite possible he said "a stock of goods," but he never conveyed in the least degree to my mind any impression of shares in a stock company. If he said "stock of goods," as he may have done, the only impression conveyed at the time to my mind was goods and chattels—merchandise. I made that remark that I have stated, that I thought he would have difficulty in finding anybody to lend him that amount on such security as that; and then I put an end to the interview; I thought it had gone far enough; and I said, "Mr. Gamey, I think you had better keep that letter." I pushed it towards him. He did not take it.

Thought He Was For Sale.

"I said, "You keep it, do what you please with it; I will have nothing to do with it."

Mr. Blake—Q.—You became suspicious? A.—I thought he was for sale. I said, "I don't think there is anything more I can do for you gentlemen;" and I bowed them out.

Q.—Did Sullivan say anything? A.—Yes, they both talked. I do not distinguish between what one said and the other said, because I cannot.

Q.—And anything more that you can recollect? A.—No; I did not pay much attention to him. Gamey sat between him and the window, in a stronger light, opposite me, and I remember I was looking at him all the time; because the whole thing impressed itself upon me—a member of Parliament behaving as he was doing, when, according to The Mail newspaper he was attending the convention of Mr. Whitney's supporters that very day.

Q.—The whole thing impressed itself upon you in the way that you have described? A.—Yes.

Chancellor Boyd—Q.—Did he take the letter? A.—When I pushed the letter to him, and said, "You keep that," Mr. Gamey took it, folded it up, and put it in his pocket; and I never saw it or him afterwards until I saw him in the witness box here.

Q.—Did they leave then, so far as your memory serves? A.—Immediately. I bowed them out of my room, and returned to Osgoode Hall.

Q.—Had you any conversation with any person after that as to the interview? A.—Yes.

Q.—With whom was that? A.—It was with my partner, Mr. Barwick. Oh, it was the merest word; it was not material. I had no conversation with Mr. Stratton, which is perhaps what you had in mind.

Made No Report.

Q.—You made no return or report of the conversation? A.— I never mentioned the matter to a human being until the 14th of March, with the exception of a conversation I had with a friend in Chatham after the matter appeared in the newspapers a month ago, until the 14th of March, when returning from the Assizes at Chatham Mr. Stratton saw me and asked me what had happened between Mr. Gamey and me on that day.

Chancellor Boyd — The 14th of March? A.—The 14th of March; when Mr. Stratyon asked me what had taken place between Gamey and me that day. That was the first I had ever told anybody, except the conversation in Chatham that I referred to.

Mr. Blake—Q.—Did you make a report to him? A.—I told him then what I have told you now, as near as I could remember it.

Q.—And that is really all that is material? A.—That is the whole of my connection with the matter.

Mr. Blake—You will understand, Mr. Aylesworth, unnecessary to say, that in any questions I have asked you, I think you quite incapable of having any part in any scheme such as that described.

Mr. Aylesworth—Thank you, sir.

Cross-examined by Mr. Riddell:

Q.—It was according to your suggestion the letter was got? A.—I would not be absolutely sure about that. I suggested the letter as the only possible thing he could have in the way of an assurance.

Mr. Gamey Contradicted.

Q.—And then I see Mr. Gamey in QUESTION OF THE CUTTING OF TREES.

Vandalism Said to Exist in Ottawa—Is it Criminal?

Ottawa Journal.

This question of the cutting of trees by persons who do not own the trees, grows more and more interesting the more it is looked into. First the Journal made out that no one had a right to cut a tree growing in the streets without a permit from the City Engineer. Then arose a citizen who showed that by the statutes of Ontario no one had a right to mutilate a tree, permit or no permit—except in the single case where trees might too thickly overshadow a street, in which case the city corporation might have them trimmed. And now comes another piece of information from a valued reader of the Journal, who shows that to cut a tree in the street is a criminal offence by Dominion law:

Editor Journal. — Referring to your remarks upon "Vandalism in Ottawa," in to-day's Journal, and to the statements in "Citizen's" letter, I notice that all mention of the laws of the Dominion is omitted, yet the Criminal Code of the Dominion must surely override municipal bylaws and provincial enactments.

"Every one is guilty of the indictable offence of mischief who wilfully destroys or damages any of the property hereinafter mentioned, and is liable to the punishment hereinafter specified:—

"D. To five years' imprisonment if the object damaged be (a) a tree, shrub or underwood growing in a park, pleasure ground or garden, or in any land adjoining or belonging to a dwelling house, injured to an extent exceeding in value five dollars."

(508, page 166). "Every one is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding twenty-five dollars over and above the amount of the injury done, or to two months' imprisonment with or without hard labour, who wilfully destroys or damages the whole or any part of any tree, sapling or shrub, or any underwood, whereseever the same is growing, the injury done being to the amount of twenty-five cents at the least."

ANOTHER CITIZEN,

Ottawa, April 7th.

It is very evident that any person who has been cutting a tree in Ottawa, not his own property, has been lucky in not getting into jail. It is extremely clear that no electric or other company, no employee of any company and not even the employees of the city corporation itself, except in one special case, can lawfully cut any tree in the city in the slightest. This is an excellent state of the law.

SOMETHING OF INTEREST REGARDING OUR CANALS.

The United States Government is Spending Millions.

Canals not Necessarily Antagonistic to Railroads—Interesting Facts.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Canadians will be wise if they keep before them the fact that the bill granting $100,000,000 for the construction of a waterway between Buffalo and New York became law this week, having been signed by the Governor of the State. Our neighbours mean business and their chief business is to head off if possible our carrying trade. At present there is much agitation as to the extension of railways. Well and good. The country needs them and must have them. But the waterways must not be neglected. The idea seems to prevail in many circles that that the railways have superseded waterways. Examination of the subject shows that the traffic on the Great Lakes has increased in greater proportion than that of the railroads of Canada and the United States. The development of water transportation has been much greater than that of rail transportation in the countries of Continental Europe. In France over 7,000 miles of internal waterways are in use, and within a year the amount of $132,500,000 has been appropriated by France for the construction of canals and the improvements of rivers and harbours. In Germany these internal improvements consist of 9,000 miles of canals and canalized rivers. New canals are being built and a project is now under contemplation for the construction of a canal connecting the Rivers Rhine and Elbe, the cost of which, it is expected, will be nearly $100,000,000. Belgium has expended $50,000,000 since 1860 in the enlargement of canals, and Russia has spent the sum of $40,000,000 from 1891 to 1896 for the development of her waterways and is now contemplating the construction of a canal connecting canalized rivers to create a waterway between the Baltic and Black seas. It may be that people need "educating up" to the principles of canalization, and the relation it bears to railways. The people across the lines seem to think so and a Canal Association is carrying on a powerful missionary work. In its last bulletin reference is made to the expenditure on canals in the Dominion, and special reference to the possibility of a new route from Parry Sound to the St. Lawrence by way of Ottawa, which is regarded as the greatest menace to United States carrying trade, a fact which should be duly regarded in this country. Those who seem to think that railways and canals are naturally antagonistic cannot do better than read the purport of a report recently sent to the French Senate by its chairman, M. de Freycinet, who says in summing up:—

It is conceded that waterways and railways are destined not to supplant, but to supplement each other. Between the two there is a natural division of traffic. To the railroads goes the least burdensome traffic, which demands regularity and quick transit; to the waterways gravitate the heavy freights of small value which can only be transported where freights are low. Waterways, by increasing traffic, are rather the auxiliaries than the competitors of railroads. In procuring for manufacture cheap transportation for coal and raw materials, they create freights whose subsequent transportation gives profit to the railroads.

The whole question will be threshed out in the House of Commons in a few days, and it is to be hoped that members will make themselves conversant with the issue which is one of vital importance to the entire Dominion. That we must fight for the supremacy in the carrying trade is proved by the vote of the New York Legislature. We have the start—let us keep it, assume the aggressive and strengthen our position, which can be made impregnable. We are glad to see that the contention of the Free Press, oft repeated, is becoming more and more approved. Those who have been lukewarm are now strong supporters of the project, and the indifferent are becoming interested. Good omens of success.

CANADA'S TRANSCONTINENTAL

Where it Will go and What it Will Open up.

In the April issue of the American Review of Reviews, Mr. E. T. D. Chambers presents a most interesting sketch of the Canadian Transcontinental Railway system.

After outlining the great success achieved by the C.P.R., the progress of the Great Northern, and the needs of the country, he points out that the proposed line of the Trans-Canada Railway is one of the most direct that can span the continent. Starting from deep water terminus at Chicoutimi, the head of navigation on the Saguenay River, at Quebec, and at Montreal, it is destined to traverse and develop the best part of the newly discovered wheat and timber lands of northern Quebec, in the James Bay District, to tap the whole of the James Bay and Hudson Bay trade, to open up the valuable mineral country of northern Ontario, to cross the centre of the rich wheat lands of the Peace River valley, and finally to reach one of the finest ports on the Pacific coast by a pass in the mountains only 2,000 feet high, as compared with 4,425 at Crow's Nest, and with 5,400 at Kicking Horse Pass.

From Quebec to Port Simpson via the Trans-Canada Railway, will be only 2,830 miles, all of the route south of the northern limit of wheat while the difference between the same points via the Grand Trunk Railway, will be about 3,400 miles, and that from Quebec to Vancouver by the Canadian Pacific Railway is 3,078 miles. The expected saving in both distance and gradients by the proposed road over existing routes from Manitoba to the Canadian seaports on the St. Lawrence is so great that the promoters have already undertaken to carry wheat from all points on its line in the province of Manitoba to the ocean steamer at Chicoutimi, Montreal or Quebec, at rates which will save the farmers of Manitoba and the Northwest about seven cents per bushel on the present cost of transportation to the seaboard. It is claimed that this saving alone will much more than pay the total interest upon the cost of the road's construction.

It is admitted on every hand that the terminal seaports of the Trans-Canada leave nothing to be desired. The harbour of Port Simpson is said to be the finest on the Pacific coast north of San Francisco. It has the additional advantage of being much nearer to Yokohama than either Vancouver or San Francisco. Chicoutimi Saguenay, can be reached by vessels of any draught, and Quebec has magnificent docks,, which have cost the government millions of dollars, with deep water berth and elevator facilities for steamers of any draught. The new bridge now building over the St. Lawrence at Quebec will enable the Trans-Canada road to make use of St. John and Halifax for winter ports, if ever those of Quebec and Chicoutimi should be blocked by ice.

Perhaps the strongest claim which the promoters of the Trans-Canada are urging upon the Government of Canada is that their line is destined to serve Canadian ports exclusively at all seasons of the year, whereas the rival projects which are also asking Government aid and recognition are using Portland, Boston, New York, and other American ports for their winter terminus.

EXPERIENCE OF THE TOWN OF BRACEBRIDGE.

They Control Their Public Utilities and Have Been Successful.

Mayor Smallfield of Renfrew, is still investigating the municipal ownership experiences of the smaller towns of Ontario. From Bracebridge he sends to the Renfrew town council and the Renfrew Mercury, a report of excellent things. The northern town has water, light and power plants, which are operated by the municipality with great success. Until two years ago the water and light service paid the town about $2,000 a year. Of late the town has installed a plant which by utilizing the local waterpower has enabled the municipality to offer electrical energy to manufacturers at $12.50 per year per horsepower for a ten hours' service. At present the yearly expenditure is $8,000, and the cash receipts are over $7,500. Estimating the street lighting and fire protection at slightly under $2,000 a year, Mayor Smallfield reckons the plant to yield a profit of $1,500 a year. In addition the town has cheap power for sale.

Mayor Smallfield attributes the success achieved in Bracebridge to continuity of management, readiness to pay salaries large enough to attract good men, and the fact that the business men of the town are willing to serve in the municipal council. In connection with the latter feature he remarks that canvassing for office has practically disappeared in the town. The electors seem willing to elect a good business man who is prepared to serve the public.

The farmers have began seeding.

The roads are in bad condition.

The Sugar Beet Seed Co., of Peterborough, will soon distribute for the acreage taken. Jas. Keith, the veteran Secretary of the Victoria Co. Agricultural Society, pronounces it A 1 seed.

There were a large number of former residents here during the Easter holidays from Toronto, Peterborough and other cities and towns.

The services and music in the different churches were very excellent and interesting.

A large number of our citizens attended Peterborough markets on Saturday.

One of the best entertainments of the season produced by our amateur musicians of a chorus of 25 voices was given in aid of the Public Library. Selections from the best operas of the season were rendered besides The Old Maids' Convention, as put on at Peterborough some time ago, gave great satisfaction and amusement. Drawing an $80 house in aid of our Public Library.

Farmers are very busy selling their surplus stock and very large shipments have been made here for North-west and other markets.

Times were never better and the most enthusiastic politicians declare we have things well enough without trying to find or sift out any difficult fault with the government or their ministers.

Division Court sittings here on the 8th May.

Farm help is very scarce and prevents many of taking the large acreage for the Sugar Beet Co. commencing with from 1 to 5 acres will increase to 10 in future.

Q.—Can you tell what bank these bills were on? A.—I think they were on the Ontario Bank. A parcel of $1,500 was sent into the Ontario Bank from the clearing house the next morning.

"Deposit Is Proved."

The Chancellor—That is just another piece of evidence that the money went into that cash book. I think we can say the deposit is proved.

The Chancellor (noting)—That is the transmission to Sudbury of the $1,500 to the credit of Gamey?

Mr. Ritchie—Yes, my Lord.

The Chancellor—That was on the 11th? A.—Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Strathy also admitted having recently obtained details of Mr. Gamey's private accounts for Mr. Johnston, Mr. Stratton's counsel.

Mr. W. R. Smyth, M.P.P.

Mr. W. R. Smyth, who represents Algoma in the Legislature, then took the stand. He said that on March 8 on the Pullman car running between North Bay and Toronto, Gamey told him what he was going to do. On the night of March 10, unknown to the member for Manitoulin, he followed him when he left the Walker House and, hiding behind a pile of bricks on Adelaide street, saw him meet Frank Sullivan and go into the factory of the Crossin Piano Company.

Mr. Johnston—Q.—You were engaged in this interesting occupation about how long? A.—Oh, I should judge about an hour.

Mr. Ritchie—What time was it that you saw them enter the factory together? A.—Ten minutes after eight exactly.

A Hidden Witness.

Mr. Ritchie, K.C., then called Mr. W. H. Price, one of the hidden witnesses in the Crossin piano warehouse on the night of March 10.

Mr. Price described the arrangements made with Mr. Gamey for the night of the 10th March, and the disposition of the room in the Crossin piano factory and the pianos. His brother, Percy G. Price and Arthur J. Kinney, also law students, went into the room on that evening and they were ready for business sitting behind the pianos just as the city hall clock struck eight.

Q.—After Mr. Gamey locked the door, how long before anyone came back? A.—We heard the City Hall clock strike eight. It was some time after eight.

Q.—Who came up? A.—We heard the noise of people coming upstairs, and the unlocking of doors, apparently, and some people entering the room—unlocked this little office and entered.

Q.—What was the first thing you heard? A.—I heard some person, who apparently was Mr. Gamey, from his voice.

Q.—Did you know his voice? A.—I knew his voice. He said, "Take off your coat and sit down, Frank."

Mr. Riddell raised objections on the ground that the scope of the enquiry was limited to charges against members of the Government. The Commission could not, he argued, investigate the conduct of Frank Sullivan.

Not an Agent of Stratton.

Chancellor Boyd—Suppose it is established that Frank Sullivan is the emissary or agent of Mr. Stratton?

Mr. Riddell—As regard that, there is no evidence so far that Stratton made Sullivan an emissary; and even if he were an agent of Mr. Stratton he is not an agent of Mr. Stratton for the purpose of making admissions of something that had been done. The particular matter of making admissions came up on a commission in 1885, and there the evidence was ruled out until such time as it was established that the admissions were made by a person authorized to make such admissions. I press that upon the court

Wide Scope Allowed.

The Chancellor took the ground that, in view of the scope given to them by the commission, questions in regard to these conversations should be allowed to be answered, and that in every aspect of the case this evidence should be taken.

Mr. Price then proceeded. He stated that he and his companions could hear all that was said, but took no notes, as they were afraid the pencils and paper would make a noise. His evidence was precisely on the lines of the synopsis filed with the court and already published.

He told what took place between Sullivan and Gamey as to Messrs. Stratton, Myers and others at the buildings, the money that was paid, the deals in which they might engage, etc. It was all told in a manner more amusing than complimentary, as instance:

Then Gamey apparently found out what he wanted to about Stratton just then, and he said, "How about that fellow Myers, Stratton's private secretary, does he know very much about this?" "Oh," Sullivan said, "he didn't think he knew very much about it, he was rather a good sort of chap, he thought he was rather frightened."

No Joint Statement.

To Mr. Riddell:

Q.—Did you give Mr. Gamey a statement at all of what you could say? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see the statement which was given to him? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you take any part in writing it out or composing it. A.—No.

Q.—It is not the case then that you three men combined in giving a statement to Gamey of what had taken place? A.—No, sir.

Made Notes From Memory.

He made notes from memory the following day, and added afterwards as parts occurred to him. He talked with the others about the matter, but they never went over the whole story together. He produced a report of the proceedings written by his brother, which was filed, but he did not know why his brother had not put in the statement all he himself said. Pressing him for a reply, Mr. Riddell said, "I am afraid you will never pass your law examination unless you answer questions better." "I will attend to that," replied the witness. "There is no onus on you."

The cross-examination was at first directed to show that Sullivan was trying to get Gamey to agree upon a story about the whole transaction, but the witness insisted that they referred only to the parcel of money brought to the smoking-room, and that they should agree it was Chase, and not Myers, who carried the parcel. The court then adjourned for luncheon.

The Factory Episode Again.

In the afternoon Percy G. Price also testified as to the Crossin piano factory episode, to the same effect as his brother, whose evidence, he said he did not hear given. In referring to one timber deal which they proposed to put through Gamey suggested that to avoid suspicion in Manitoulin they should do it under another name. Sullivan suggested a name, and in reply to Gamey said, "Oh, he will be all right if there is $8,000 in it for him."

Mr. Johnston took the witness in hand for cross-examination, and questioned him closely as to whether the word money was used in the Stratton-Chase-Myers connection and Price said it was. When asked about Mr. Gamey's statement that it was the word parcel and not money, he hesitated and said parcel might have been used. When asked how he remembered so accurately a conversation five weeks old he said it was because he went there to hear and "It will be of interest to the people of Ontario" he added "when they mark their ballots next time."

A Ripple of Laughter.

The remark caused a ripple of laughter, which increased when he added, "It was useful for the people of Ontario, who should have known it before." This led Mr. Johnston to ask if he thought the Ross Government was corrupt, and the witness promptly replied: "I have lived long enough in New Ontario to know it is pretty corrupt." The uproar which followed led Chief Justice Falconbridge to threaten to clear the court.

"Was it corrupt a year ago?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"I did not think it was very virtuous," he replied, with a smile. Asked as to his age, he said he was 21. In the statement prepared for Mr. Gamey he wrote that Sullivan said Myers did not know there was money in the parcel. This sentence he struck out afterwards, and he explained he was not sure of it. He could not recollect the statement of his brother that Sullivan had said he could get $100,000 from the Government if he wanted it. To test the witness' memory, Mr. Johnston picked out an item and asked what subject immediately preceded or followed. The witness failed to do so three or four times, and then stated that he never pretended that the subjects mentioned in his main examination were in regular sequence. The witness said that the story was true in a general way. The court then adjourned.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. REMARKABLE TESTIMONY.

his account in the court here has said that Mr. Sullivan introduced me to Mr. Aylesworth, and Mr. Aylesworth said, "I understand, Mr. Gamey, you want me to act for you in the dismissal of your petition." Is that the fact? A.—It is not the fact that I opened the conversation that way. That in substance passed between us, but I may have, after he had said something about the petition, remarked to him, "I suppose you want me to act, or I understand"——

Q.—He goes on further and says, "That is the first time I heard these words from anybody." Then he said, "I said in a rather surprised way, I suppose something like that." Then he—that is, Mr. Aylesworth—said, "I have a letter for you to sign." Is that correct? A.—There is a very great deal omitted. The discussion about the petition and about the possibility of his being taken by surprise if it should be pressed against him, and whether the petitioners, who were, of course, constituents of his, would or would not drop the petition on his announcing his intention to support the Government, were matters of discussion. He didn't exhibit any surprise, to my eye.

Q.—And then further on I see he says that "after the letter was signed," he says—that is, Mr. Gamey says—that you said you would keep the letter, and then Mr. Frank Sullivan said, "No; there is some question of stock consideration to be dealt with before we give up that letter"? A.—That is not correct. It was certainly my suggestion in regard to the disposition of the letter in the form I have stated—what do you want done with it?—and there was no objection on anybody's part to the proposition that it should be put in the office vault subject to Mr. Gamey's order, except the hesitating non-assent.

Q.—He said that after you had said you would keep that letter, then Mr. Frank Sullivan said, "No, there is some question of stock consideration to be dealt with before we give up that letter." Will you address your mind to that? A.—That was not the way it took place.

Q.—Was there anything said about stock consideration at all? A.—Nothing about consideration. There was the mention of a desired loan, and it may have been coupled with the mention of stock as security; but if the word "stock" was used, it certainly was used in such connection that it conveyed to my mind the impression of stock of goods.

Q.—Upon which a chattel mortgage could be taken? A.—Yes, because I immediately made the reply I mentioned about chattel mortgage.

Q.—Then you said, "I know nothing of any stock proposition at all." Is that true? A.—Not in those words. I very possibly said, "I don't know anything about that in the connection I have described, that I had nothing to do with that part of our office business."

Erroneous and Untrue.

In that connection let me say that in Mr. Gamey's statement made in the Legislature he stated that I said I had nothing to do with that part of it. That conveys an utterly erroneous impression, an utterly untrue impression, "that part of it" was that part of our office business, the money lending branch of the office.

Q.—Then he said that after you said that "I knew nothing of any stock proposition at all," you went on further to say, "I will give you my word that letter will not pass out of my possession until you are satisfied?" A.—Substantially that is correct that I said, "I will give you my word that letter will not leave my possession until you are satisfied it should, or until you direct me to do something with it."

Q.—Then he goes on further and says "Until Frank Sullivan and I were satisfied. Then he goes on and says, "Sullivan then explained to him about the stock proposition." Then Mr. Sullivan said, "No, we will take the letter with us." Is that true? A.—I don't remember that Sullivan took any part in the discussion. He may have. I would not contradict Mr. Gamey if Mr. Gamey says he did.

Q.—But that is not how he put it. He says, "Sullivan explained to him about the stock proposition?" A.—He certainly did not explain to me anything which conveyed to my mind the slightest idea of shares in a stock company.

Q.—Of a stock proposition other than you have been telling us about? A.—Precisely. I never had the slightest idea of shares in a company in connection with the matter until I heard the statement Mr. Gamey made in the Legislature.

Q.—Was there anything said about holding the letter until the stock question was settled? A.—No.

Q.—Then the statement is, "The lawyer said he knew nothing of the question and had nothing to do with that?" A.—That is what I referred to. I said, I had nothing to do with that part of our business.

Q.—But that he would give us his word if we would leave the letter with him that it would not go out of your possession until they were satisfied. We have your answer as to that? A.—That is true.

Q.—But Frank refused to do so? A.—That is not true.

Q.—And took the letter with him? A.—It is possible that the letter was taken by Mr. Frank Sullivan, though I believe it was by Mr. Gamey.

Q.—There is no doubt about that date being the 10th, Mr. Aylesworth? A.—No doubt whatever; September 10th.

This concluded Mr. Aylesworth's direct examination.

Mr. Blake—That is all, thank you, Mr. Aylesworth.

Mr. Strathy's Evidence.

Mr. H. S. Strathy, manager of the Traders' Bank, was then called, and produced the books of the bank to prove the deposit of $1,500 by Gamey on Sept. 11 last.

Mr. Strathy produced the deposit slip in question.

Q.—Can you tell from that, the denomination of the bills deposited? A.—Ten one hundred dollar bills and ten fifties.

Bicycles in Convalescent Homes.

All the principal London hospitals have convalescent homes in the country or at the sea side to which inmates from the hospital are transferred when they are nearing recovery for the change of air and surroundings to complete their cure. All these institutions own bicycles for the use of the inmates who can ride. The marked difference in the rapid improvement in the condition of the men who use the wheel over the rest is surprising. As one of them remarked: "The worst of this riding is that I'm getting all right so quick that I shall be discharged very soon." There is nothing like bicycle riding to pull a man together who has lost his grip on health. It gives every part of the body healthful exercise.

MR. A. W. CRESSMAN'S GRAND RE-OPENING.

His Clothing Department was Thronged Last Night.

The re-opening of Mr. A. W. Cressman's clothing store at 385-387 George street, which took place last night, was attended by a somewhat brilliant ceremony. Amid the sweet strains of music, the glow of electric lights and the bustle of several hundred men, women and children, he made his bow to the public. Indeed Mr. Cressman has reason to be satisfied with his grand re-opening and he is to be congratulated upon the despatch in which his premises have been renovated since they were gutted by fire a few months ago, and the manner in which he has replenished his stock. Mr. Cressman has now one of the finest clothing stores that can be found in the district. Fresh and clean, splendidly laid out and stocked with a line of goods that can compare favourably with that to be seen in any of the stores of our leading Canadian cities. From 8 o'clock until ten the store was crowded with people who viewed with apparent interest the handsome display of goods and appreciated beyond a doubt the very excellently rendered music of the orchestra, which was stationed to the rear of the store. The orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Butcher, was composed of five pieces and they were generous beyond measure with their music. Mr. Cressman and his corteous staff received the visitors and were indefatigable in their efforts to show the people the sights to be seen, not only in the clothing department, but the drygoods establishment as well. Altogether Mr. Cressman's re-opening was attended with eminent success.

A GRAND MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT

Given in T.A.S. Hall by Notre Dame Pupils.

And Assisting Artists—A Delightful Evening Enjoyed.

"Musical entertainment, given by the pupils of Notre Dame Convent, in the T.A.S. Hall," last night was the title of an interesting programme. It was evidently a blending of a musical review and a musical entertainment. While there might be doubt as to the literal correctness of the former there is none as to the latter—it was a delightful musical entertainment, giving not only enjoyment but satisfying evidence of the thorough and excellent musical training received by Convent pupils.

The hall was well filled with relatives and friends of pupils, and the general public. The clergy were represented by Rev. Father McColl, Rev. Father John O'Brien, and Ven. Archdeacon Casey of Lindsay. The latter had come down for the occasion and at the close of the entertainment expressed himself as delighted with one of the best entertainments of the kind ever presented under Convent auspices.

The programme opened with a rendering of Schubert's "March Heroique," performed on three pianos by Misses A. Doris, N. Lewis, H. Dean, E. Kelly, M. Brown and M. Harrison. In this the tempo shading, etc., were in fine accord, and altogether the ensemble was charming. The next number was vocal, a chorus contributed by Misses N. Lewis, N. Carney, M. Harrison, A. Dorris, S. Wyer and Messrs. J. Wyer, F. Pope, J. Dorris and V. Greenslade. This was a pleasing sample of good concerted singing, excellent harmony and good expression. To this followed a charming little piano performance in unison on two pianos, by two little artists, Misses G. Rudkins and P. Morgan. The title was "Cabaletto" and it was indeed a pony piano performance very creditable to the little players. A double piano number, a Mendelsshon duetto, "Simple Aveu," was well played by Misses B. Wyer and B. Flynn. In a solo and chorus, "Silver Bells of Memory," the solo was sweetly taken by Miss Annie Simons, and the selection was so well rendered that a repeat was responded to, Miss Lewis taking in good style the solo. A delightful contribution to, and variation of, the programme, was a violin solo, De Beriot's Seventh "Air Varie," artistically presented by Mr. Gilbert Markle, a very promising young violinist, who plays with a fine musical spirit and very capable technical facility. He performed the last two movements, the last especially, in a very brilliant and musicianly manner. He was enthusiastically recalled and responded with a graceful performance of a Godard cradle-song. Misses Hazel Dean and E. Kelly gave a piano performance in unison in a very capable manner. The "Solfeggio Lesson" was a charming bit of musical divertissement creditable to both "teacher" and "pupils." As teacher Miss Carney showed a voice of excellent quality which is worthy of development. This selection was very heartily applauded and as an encore little Carrie White gave a cunning little recitation though it was "grator" than was expected. "Belisario" a composition for two pianos, was performed with splendid spirit and execution by Misses Harrison and Kelly. A duet on two pianos performed by Misses Lewis and Dorris, and Misses Harrison and Brown, was brilliantly performed both as to the robust Tannhauser march and the weird Greig Norwegian Dance. "Yesterday or Grandma's Dream," was a charming little scene. Miss A. Simons, made up as "Grandma" sat dreaming in her rocking-chair and group after group of youngsters trooped in and surrounded her with a very amusing and life-like by-play. Carrie White presented a very pleasing little recitation in answer to a recall. Mr. Markle rendered as a violin solo a Gavotte by Ries. It was performed in a very spirited and taking manner and he was compelled to appear again—in a sweet playing of "Traumerei." Very special mention should be made of the pianforte double number by Miss Mabel Harrison, of Keene. She gave a splendid interpretation and brilliant execution of Lisst's Hungarian Rhapsodie, No. 8. She showed a decidely large appreciation of the spirit of the piece, and her interpretation was marked by a vigour as well as facility of execution, such as the varying moods, so to speak, of the selection demanded. She was equally happy in the other part of this number in contrasting style of composition, Henselt's "Si Oiseau J'Etais." It is no disparagement of other contributors to the programme to speak warmly of Miss Harrison's musicianly work. She has the true spirit of music, and her every move, her confidence, the surety of her execution, testifies to this. She also deserves credit for the excellent and sympathetic accompaniments she supplied for Mr. Markle's violin numbers. The other accompaniments were also excellent; they were supplied by the senior pupils of the Convent.

With the beautiful chorus by Franz Abt, "Good Night," beautifully sung, and the spirited rendering on three pianos of the Coronation arrangement of "God Save the King," as a Grand March, a delightful musical entertainment was brought to a close. The Convent is to be very cordially congratulated upon the evidences the entertainment afforded of the thorough musical training pupils, from the most rudimentary to the most advanced, very evidently receive.

During the evening Mrs. Killin-Keough delighted the audience with a superb rendering of a charming French chanson by Madame Chaminade, "L'Ete"—summer. She very kindly responded to a most enthusiastic encore. Mrs. Killin-Keough's magnificent soprano voice was used with the ease and effectiveness which only thorough culture and knowledge of its use can give. Peterborough is indeed fortunate in having added to its musical forces a vocal artist of this lady's rare ability.

The programme given last night will be repeated this evening, with the exception that Mr. and Mrs. Killin-Keough will sing a duet. Any who could not be at the T.A.S. Hall last night will be amply repaid by attendance to-night, for excellent as the programme was, it is sure to be enhanced by the help of the experience of last night.

SMALL-POX OUTBREAK IN HARVEY TOWNSHIP.

Six or More Residents of Lakehurst are Down With it.

It is stated that a rather serious outbreak of small-pox has occurred at Lakehurst in the Township of Harvey. The outbreak, it is generally considered, had its origin from the same source as the Warsaw and Burleigh cases which, it is believed, were taken from a traveller who was passing through that section of the country.

The Burleigh and Warsaw cases have quite recovered, but if the information of a resident from Lakehurst can be relied upon, the disease in that neighbourhood has not been treated with the precaution that its deadly contagion requires. There are at least half-a-dozen cases of small-pox at Lakehurst, and little more is being done towards preventing the spread of the disease than merely placarding the houses.

The Examiner was given the above above information by a reliable resident of Lakehurst.

ASHBURNHAM AND THE STREET RAILWAY.

A Citizen States That the Village's Interests Should be Considered.

An Ashburnham citizen in writing to the Examiner re the street railway says:

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir, — Kindly allow me space in your estimable paper for a few remarks and perhaps a question or two, with regard to the all-absorbing question of the day, viz., the five miles of street railway which the American Cereal Company have offered to build.

Now, if as is currently reported, Ashburnham is to become the bride of our great neighbour, Pete, in the near future, are there no interests of the bride to be considered? Or is the prospective groom to have all the advantages? It reminded me of the saying, "What's your's is mine, and what's mine is my own." I would like to hear what our village fathers have to say on the subject. So many of Peterborough's employees have homes in the village that a mile or so of street railway on this side of the river would be very acceptable to the Ashburnhamites.

THE FRASER MISSION BAND'S ENTERTAINMENT

Last Evening Was a Very Great Success.

Mrs. Adam Ferguson's Oration — Some Excellent Singing was Heard.

The Fraser Mission Band in connection with St. Paul's church has many objects in view, all of which are very laudable, and not only do they promote social intercourse and advance the spiritual life of their denomination, but every once in a while present the citizens of Peterborough most entertaining entertainments. And last night's presentation of the "Story of Kardoo" was no exception to the previous ones. The hall was fairly filled with an appreciative audience who warmly endorsed the performance.

The stage was beautifully decorated, red ensigns making a very pretty back ground to the twenty pretty faces of the Mission Band, who were arranged on the stage.

Mrs. Adam Ferguson took the role of "Kardoo" a young Hindoo girl, while at frequent intervals during the recitation of her life the chorus sweetly sang some sacred song. Miss Ethel White and Miss Effie Best sang solos. The chorus was composed of the following:—The Misses M., F. and A. Hamilton, F. Cameron, A. Bradd, M. Meldrum, M. Paterson, Eva Carey, J. and L. Hall, A. and M. Macdonald, M. Hall and the Misses Shackley, while Miss G. Dennistoun presided at the piano in her usual excellent manner.

Becomingly dressed in red, "Kardoo" gave her oration, telling how at the age of eleven years she became married to a full grown man, as is the Hindoo custom; how her father killed his own wife, her mother, because her face was seen by men, the punishment for which in Hindustan is death, and how her husband was killed. Mrs. Ferguson then went into the awful details of the events which took place at the funeral bier, for as her husband had predeceased her she had to be buried with his body. By what was little short of a miracle she was saved and found herself into the house of a missionary, who taught her to worship the one true God, and to forsake the idols of her race.

The very pleasant evening was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

A SPECIAL MEETING

Of the Peterborough Presbytery was Held Yesterday.

A special meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough was held in Norwood yesterday afternoon, its main object being to consider a call from Norwood to the Rev. G. A. McClellan, late of Jarvis and Walpole.

There were present Rev. Dr. Torrance, D.D., in the chair, and Rev. Messrs. J. G. Potter, Wm. Bennett, D. A. Thompson, Hastings, McFarlane of Warsaw, Atkinson of Warsaw, A. E. Camp, Havelock. The elders present were Messrs. R. Harrison, Peterborough, and W. A. Roxburgh, Norwood.

The call was unanimous, and was accompanied with a promise of a salary of $800 and a manse.

The call was ordered to be forwarded to Mr. McClellan for his consideration.

The Presbytery agreed to grant the translation of Mr. Kannawin from Omemee to Woodville, in the Presbytery of Lindsay. The Presbytery then adjourned.

LACROSSE OUTLOOK IN PETERBOROUGH.

Two Strong Teams Will be Placed in the Field.

May Enter the C. L. A.—Many Players Have Located in Town Lately.

The indications are that lacrosse will be quite popular in Peterborough this summer. The game for some years past in town has been practically dead, and a lacrosse stick became as rare as a golf stick was in Peterborough twelve years ago. The two or three young men who clung to the game and handled the hickory and cat-gut, generally loaned their services to Port Hope, and assisted in bringing glory to that town. Times have changed, however, and once more Canada's national game will flourish in Peterborough — at least present indications point that way. The game took a great spurt last fall, stimulated by the formation of the City League, with the result that this year there is a fine lot of material to select from. No longer will the old time enthusiast pine for bygone days, or be content to talk over gallant victories of years ago; he can watch with interest the progress of Peterborough's teams this season, and assist in a material way, perhaps, towards helping the boys on to victory.

Last year Peterborough had three fairly strong lacrosse teams; this year we will have only two, but they will be two excellent ones. The Y.M.C.A. team has disbanded, and the majority of the players have cast in their lot with the two remaining clubs. In addition to this fact, there have been many players locate in the town during the past eight months, whose services will be fully appreciated. Peterborough has not been shouting from the house tops of what they are going to do this summer, like most towns have been doing, but when the time comes this town will be to the fore.

The two teams that will figure in local lacrosse circles are the T.A.S. and the Athletics. The best of good feeling exists between the two organizations, and may it continue to be so. The town is large enough to support two teams, and this is just what will be done.

The matter of what leagues to play in has been a perplexing question for the management of both teams to deal with, and the general opinion is that if a league could be maintained with six or eight clubs from this district the arrangement would be most excellent. However the teams outside of Peterborough have shown a hesitancy towards entering such a league, so that the prospects in that regard are not any too rosy. The only alternative is to join the C.L.A. It is not divulging any secrets to say that the Canadian Lacrosse Association does not find many admirers in Peterborough. The management of it in the past, particularly in regard to professionalism, has been such as to shake the confidence of the true lover of amateur sport, in the association, and afford little encouragement to a team whose management has as its ideal, amateurism, in the proper sense of the word.

But there can be no rivalry, or enthusiasm, friendly or otherwise, without a schedule, and there can be no schedule with a league, or association, so that it may not be improbable that both the Peterborough teams may figure in the C.L.A. That being the case, every possible effort will be put forward to land a championship.

IT ENDANGERS THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Careless Physicians Ought to be Severely Punished.

The efforts taken by the local Board of Health to stamp out contagious diseases deserve the highest praise. With the co-operation of the local physicians, the work of the executive members of the Board would be greatly diminished, but a member of the board says such is not wholly the case for, instead of helping to stamp out the disease, at least one physician seems, he says, to be doing all in his power to increase rather than decrease, the number of his patients.

The following will illustrate the gross carelessness This morning a case of contagion in a house in which there were four boarders working in local factories, was reported to Dr. Young, the acting Medical Health Officer. The attending physician told the "lady of the house" not to say anything about it, and to let the boarders go to work as usual. Had it not been for the prompt action taken by the officers of the local Board of Health, the employees of the factories would have been subject to great risk.

It is hardly credible that a qualified physician could act in such a manner. If this sort of thing prevails, a large outbreak will not be a surprise. The good work carried out on the suggestions of the Health Board are completely upset by such actions as the above, and the sooner those concerned do all in their power to stamp out those prevalent contagious diseases the better it will be for the town, commercially, and from a sanitary point of view.

A PRETTY WEDDING.

Nuptials of Miss Alice Forsyth and Mr. James Griffin.

A very pretty ceremony took place at the home of Mr. George Forsyth, in the Township of Smith, on Wednesday evening, April 15th, when his second eldest daughter, Mary Alice, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Griffin, of Hamilton township, formerly of town.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of cadet blue and white silk, trimmed with applique and Valenciennes lace, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses and carnations. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Etta, who wore a gown of cadet blue which was trimmed with all over lace and applique; she carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. Percy Pallin of Otonabee, supported the groom. Rev. Mr. Robertson, of Peterborough, tied the nuptial knot.

After the ceremony the guests to the number of fifty, sat down to a sumptuous wedding dejeuner. After the supper the evening was spent in singing and parlour games. The presents received were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the contracting parties were held by their many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin will take up their residence in Hamilton.

Sir Oliver Mowat Lingers Between Life and Death—End Now Hourly Expected

Family's Ceaseless Vigil.

Toronto, April 17.—When the first glimpses of daybreak stole through the heavily curtained windows of the dying statesman's room yesterday morning, the watchers at the bedside noticed a slight improvement in his condition. The improvement continued until 8.30. Then suddenly a change came. Sir Oliver lapsed into unconsciousness again. Powerful restoratives were applied. Oxygen was administered freely and morphine was injected to ease the violent pain. In his conscious moments the aged Lieutenant-Governor cried aloud in his agony.

Sir Oliver's condition was critical throughout the day, and as night approached it was found that he could not survive. The doctors were constantly at his beside. The family, worn out with their ceaseless vigil, snatched a few hours sleep. At 5 o'clock this morning he appeared to be sinking rapidly.

Irishmen in Convention.

Dublin, April 17.—The National convention, convened by the United Irish League, met yesterday in the Mansion House. About 2,000 delegates assembled. John Redmond opened the proceedings with an impressive speech in which he said: "Whatever defects Mr. Wyndham's bill has, and I am inclined to minimize them, its object is the complete and final abolition of landlordism in all its essentials. Ireland is united as she never was before."

Mr. O'Brien urged that the bill be accepted in principle.

Patrick White, M.P., moved the rejection of the land bill. The motion was rejected by an overwhelming majority.

Mr. O'Brien's motion was carried unanimously, and the convention adjourned until Friday, after six hours' continuous sitting.

IN THE SPRING

Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—They Enable Nature to Right Itself and Thus Dispose of the Objectionable Lassitude Naturally and for Good.

You know it's Spring. That tired feeling tells you that. You are not sick but you have little inclination to eat and still less to work. You just want to do nothing and feel miserable.

Do you know why? Do you know that the stomach has been working hard with fatty food all winter supplying the different parts of the body with both heat and food—that the stomach's work is doubled in the winter?

Do you know that the stomach after its double work is tired? That when tired it fails in its duty of supplying the different parts of the body with food. That when the parts do not get food they are starved and weak.

Your stomach needs help! It needs Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will digest the food while the stomach rests. They will not only ensure a food supply to the starved organs and muscles, but they will rest the stomach and put it in shape to do its work well. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are what the stomach needs in the spring time. They are a natural cure because they enable the body to right itself. When the body is right there can be no weary, dispiriting spring feelings.

Finance Minister's Budget of Canada's Prosperity.

MOST MAGNIFICENT SHOWING

Retaliatory Tariff Against German Imports—Duty on Steel Rails—Sugar and Gold Mining Machinery Free—Duty on Ships Abolished—Increased Dominion Note Issue—Loans to Be Retired.

Ottawa, April 17. — Immediately upon the opening of the doors leading to the galleries yesterday there was a great rush of visitors, and within a few minutes the galleries were filled. The Speaker's Gallery was crowded to excess. Even the Senators' Gallery was not sacred from the invasion of the ladies, and for this occasion the members of the upper Chamber were deprived of their accustomed seats. When Hon. W. S. Fielding entered the Chamber he was greeted with enthusiastic cheers from the supporters of the Government. He took the seat usually occupied by Sir Richard Cartwright, and was joined by Hon. Mr. Paterson, who sat beside him and, as the Finance Minister proceeded with his speech, arranged and handed to him the voluminous notes which he had prepared. When Mr. Fielding rose to move the House into Committee of Ways and Means for raising the supply to be granted to his Majesty the cheering was renewed, and sustained for some minutes.

A Budget of Prosperity.

Mr Fielding's seventh budget speech in the House of Commons yesterday, will easily take rank as the most satisfactory statement of affairs yet presented to the people of Canada. The national treasury is full to overflowing, there are no clouds on the financial sky, and the tax burden is not grievous.

The following are some of the features of the speech:—

Revenue for 1902-3, closing 30th June, $65,000,000, an increase of $7,000,000. Mr. Fielding anticipates an expenditure chargeable to income for 1902-3 of $51,650,000, an increase of $890,000.

The estimated surplus for 1902-3 is $13,350,000, far ahead of any previous surplus in our history.

Public Debt Reduced.

The anticipated reduction in the public debt is $5,650,000, after providing for all expenditures.

The average increase of debt per year during the seven years of Liberal administration is $1,097,879. The average increase per year in eighteen years of Conservativ e rule was $6,560,000.

Four Years' Pay as We Go.

On the operations of the last four years all expenditures have been paid and not one cent added to the public debt. The public debt per head in 1891 was $49.20. In 1896, $50.96. It is estimated for the current year at $48.51 per head.

More Dominion Currency.

It is proposed to issue, if there is a demand for them, Dominion notes or currency notes to the amount of $80,000,000, the present maximum being raised by increase in issue to be used to provide reserve of 10 per cent. for security of $60,000,000 in Government savings banks.

No General Tariff Revision.

As to the tariff, there is nothing in the condition of the country, in the Government's opinion, which requires a general revision of the tariff. Manufacturers have held the home market, and their shipments to foreign countries have increased. It may be at an early date desirable to make further changes than are now proposed, but the character of these changes will depend on the attitude of certain other countries towards Canada.

In view of the duty on breadstuffs imposed by the Imperial authorities, the Canadian Government have pressed for a reciprocity in preference, intimating that if Great Britain recognized the principle, Canada would concede a further preference, without, however, jeopardizing the position of the Canadian manufacturers. Such a concession, if granted, must be as between the British and foreign manufacturer.

Awaiting British Answer.

The Government is not prepared at the present moment to say what may be the answer of the British Government to the view the Dominion Ministers had placed before them. Sufficient time must be allowed the British Government to consider the matter. Then, if the British people, Government and Parliament should not show any appreciation of the value of the preference, they could not complain if Canada saw fit to modify or change the preference. There was no great anxiety on the part of Canada for reciprocity with the United States, but a strong feeling had been manifested in the latter country for closer trade relations.

The Tariff Resolutions.

Resolutions moved by Mr. Fielding in Committee of Ways and Means on tariff:

That it is expedient to further amend "The Customs Tariff, 1897," to the following effect: That the following sections be added to the said act:

"The Governor-in-Council may by order-in-Council direct that a duty of seven dollars per ton be imposed in schedule A on all iron and steel railway bars, or rails in any form for railways, imported into Canada, and from and after the publication of such order in The Canadian Gazette such duties shall be levied, collected and paid on all such rails; and thereafter item 238 in schedule A and 565 in schedule B shall be repealed;

"Provided, however, that such order shall not be passed until the Governor-in-Council is satisfied that steel rails of the best quality, suitable for the use of Canadian railways, are being manufactured in Canada from steel made in Canada, in sufficient quantity to meet the ordinary requirements of the market."

Item 238 in schedule A, referred to in this resolution, reads as follows:

"Iron and steel railway bars or rails of any form, punched or not, n.o.p.; for railways, which term for the purpose of this item shall include all kinds of railways, street railways and tramways, even altho they are used for private purposes only, and even altho they are not used or intended to be used in connection with the business of common carrying of goods or passengers, thirty-eight per cent. ad valorem—thirty per cent."

Item 565 in schedule B places on the free list the following:

"Steel rails weighing not less than 45 pounds per lineal yard for use only in the tracks of a railway which is employed in the common carrying of goods and passengers and is operated by steam motive power only; provided that this item shall not extend to rails for tracks of a railway which is used for private purposes only, nor shall this item extend to rails for use in the tracks of any electric railway, street railway or tramway."

The meaning of the new provision is that power is given to the government to impose a duty of $7 per ton on iron and steel rails; and that when this is done, the old tariff, imposing a duty of thirty per cent. on some steel rails and admitting others free, is repealed.

The next resolution reads:

"Articles which are the growth, produce or manufacture of any foreign country which treats imports from Canada less favorably than those from other countries, may be subject to a surtax over and above the duties of schedule A, such surtax in every case to be one-third of the duty as fixed by such schedule A. Such surtax shall apply to any article the chief value of which was produced in such foreign country, altho it may have been improved or advanced in value by the labor of another country, notwithstanding the provisions of the British preferential tariff and regulations thereunder.

"Any question arising as to any foreign country or goods coming under the operation of this section shall be decided by the Minister of Customs, whose decision shall be final.

"The Minister of Customs, with the approval of the Governor-in-Council, may make regulations for carrying out the purposes of this section.

"Such surtax shall not apply to any goods actually purchased on or before the 10th day of April, 1903, by any corporation, firm or person in Canada, for immediate transportation to Canada.

"That the period of exemption from duty of machinery of every kind and structural iron and steel for use in the construction and equipment of factories for the manufacture of sugar from beet root be extended to the 30th day of June, 1904.

"That machinery and appliances of a kind not made in Canada for exclusive use in alluvial gold mining be added to the free list until 30th June, 1904."

Vote in the Commons.

A resolution moved by Mr. McCarthy to have the cattle guard question incorporated in the bill for a railway commission was carried after a debate by 70 to 39.

Lloyds in Time of Anxiety.

Only recently a great Atlantic liner was announced to be three days overdue. On the third day there was no noticeable advance in the rate charged for those who had neglected to insure property shipped upon it, but on the fourth day, when anxiety as to both the passengers and the property on board had increased, it was ominously announced from Lloyds that the rate of insurance upon that particular vessel had been advanced to $10 in $500. This was on Tuesday. On Wednesday, when no further news had been heard, the rate had jumped to $25 in $500. On Thursday it reached $50 and by Friday the enormous sum of $100 in $500 was declared to be the rate in any and all manner of insurance upon the missing vessel. It is needless to say how horribly these announcements confirmed the anxious fears of of those most deeply concerned in the arrival of the vessel, for all the world knows that if there is any hope it will be longest found at Lloyds. It is also needless to say that when the great liner in question finally reached her dock in New York, nowhere was there greater rejoicing at the announcement than in the room where it was tolled out by the bell of the Lutine and read by the crier to the assembled crowd at Lloyds.—The World's Work.

Bronchial Colds and Chest Pains

Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs and Colds Yield Promptly to

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

There are many reasons why you should use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in preference to any other treatment for diseases of the throat and lungs. Of these the most important one is the fact that it has been tested for years and absolutely proven its right to first position.

Nearly everybody knows of the remarkable value of turpentine and linseed as remedial agents. They have been so combined with half a dozen other ingredients in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as to form a most thoroughly effective and at the same time pleasant medicine.

As is frequently the case with an unusually successful article, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is imitated. There are now hosts of preparations with names similar to this, and some even go so far as to imitate the bottle and wrapper. It therefore becomes necessary for you to be very careful when buying. Insist on seeing the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase on the wrapper.

We know that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine will not disappoint you, because it has stood the test of time, and the sales, which are at least triple that of any similar preparation, are steadily increasing year by year.

As a positive cure for croup, bronchitis, asthma, throat troubles, and severe cough and colds, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has a reputation which cannot be stolen by the cheap and oft injurious cough mixtures which are offered in place of it by some dealers.

Even the consumptive, who has reached the latter stages of his insidious disease, finds ease and comfort in the use of this preparation, while it is impossible to estimate the countless number of less severe cases which it has actually cured. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle. Family size, three times as much, 60 cents. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 3

Holbein's Training Methods.

In view of Holbein's fine exhibition of endurance in the Channel—the great swimmer, by the way, was born near Twickenham Ferry, and educated at Manchester Grammar School—it may be interesting to note his opinions on training. Holbein deprecates fast work, and advises plenty of walking, and steady, slow practice, distributed over a considerable period; the distance practiced to be lessened and done at a faster pace as the day of the competition approaches. He swam an hour in the bath three times a week, and walked eight or ten miles every day from February to May. After that date he walked thirty miles a day on Monday, Wednesday and Friday; doing sixty miles on a cycle, instead, on the other three days, with three hours swimming in the river on Tuesdays, four on Thursdays, and six on Saturdays.—London Telegraph.

IMPERIAL LIFE.

A Year of Unexceptional Prosperity and Achievements.

Toronto * * The Executive Officials of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, report that the year just ended has been one of exceptional prosperity and achievements. It is a well known fact that the Imperial Life's past record has been unequalled in life assurance experience in Canada, but the most sanguine of its numerous policy-holders and active representatives throughout the Dominion will be surprised to learn of the following magnificent results:—Applications for assurances aggregated over $4,500,000; the policies actually issued exceeded the large amount of $4,000,000; cash income totalled over $500,000; the accumulated assets reached $1,650,000, while the entire policies of assurance in force exceed $13,500,000. It was also stated that the interest income from investments was again more than sufficient to pay all of the death claims of the year.

FARRAR'S LIFE OF CHRIST.

Significant That the Late Dean of Canterbury Is Best Known by a Non-Controversial Work on Religion.

The best known work of the late Dean Farrar is his Life of Christ. He declared that his object in writing it was to fill the mind with solemn and not ignoble thoughts, to encourage the toiler, to console the sorrowful, to point the weak to the one true source of moral strength. In 1870 he visited Palestine in order to complete his equipment for the work. He returned, as he said, confirmed in the wish "to enable the simple and the unlearned to understand and enter into the human surroundings of his subject." He warned his readers not to expect new theories, or "brilliant combinations of mythic cloud, tinged by the sunset imagination of some decadent belief." His work was that of a believer, but was not controversial, not written with any direct and special reference to the attacks of sceptical criticism. The following passage from the preface will give a fair idea of Dean Farrar's style and method of treating the subject:

"We read the systems and treatises of ancient philosophy, and in spite of all the great and noble elements in which they abound, we see their total incapacity to console, or support, or deliver, or regenerate the world. Then we see the light of Christianity dawning like a tender dayspring amid the universal and intolerable darkness. From the first, that new religion allies itself with the world's utter feeblenesses, and those feeblenesses it shares; yet without wealth, without learning, without genius, without arms, without anything to dazzle and attract—the religion of outcasts and exiles, of fugitives and prisoners—numbering among its earliest converts not many wise, not many noble, not many mighty, but such as the jailer of Philippi, and the runaway slave of Colossae—with no blessing apparently upon it save such as cometh from above—with no light whatever about it save the light that comes from heaven—it puts to flight kings and their armies; it breathes a new life, and a new hope, and a new an unknown holiness into a guilty and decrepit world. This we see; and we see the work grow, and increase, and become more and more irresistible, and spread 'with the gentleness of a sea that caresses the shore it covers.' And, seeing this, we recall the faithful principle of the wise and tolerant Rabbi, uttered more than 1,800 years ago—'If this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found to fight against God.'"

Dean Farrar's "Eternal Hope," in which the doctrine of everlasting punishment was impugned, aroused a good deal of criticism, but his temper though firm was not pugnacious, and it is significant that he is now best remembered by a work of a non-controversial character.

Mr. St. John Brodrick.

Member of Parliament at the age of twenty-four, Financial Secretary to the War Office at thirty, Privy Councillor at forty, and Secretary of State for War at forty-four, Mr. St. John Brodrick's career illustrates the opportunities which open before the fortunate scions of the governing houses of the United Kingdom. He is not a man of any remarkable brilliance of intellect; his oratory is of the plain and halting type, with no exuberance or fire of rhetoric; his debating powers are not out of the common; he has been known to fail on occasions in tact; and he is perhaps not altogether a persona grata in the House of Commons. But if he lacks some of the qualities of a House of Commons statesman, he possesses an earnestness and an industry which go far to compensate for his defects. The fact that he sincerely believes the War Office to be ideal, and the existing organization of the British army to be the best conceivable, makes him formidable, for he speaks in their defence with the voice and the air of entire conviction. . . . In his personal appearance Mr. Brodrick is tall and slim, with a bustling air of importance. He is somewhat careless in his dress; his voice is not a pleasing one; he produces the impression of stiffness and obstinacy, but underneath this exterior lie valuable qualities.

Carlyle on Gladstone.

The late J. E. Boehm, the sculptor, once met Gladstone at a country house, and was immensely impressed by the extent and diversity of the stateman's knowledge, as revealed in his conversation. Boehm was still full of the subject when the morning arrived for Carlyle's sitting for a bust, and to the philosopher the sculptor poured forth his admiration for Gladstone's intimate acquaintance with subjects so far apart as gardening and Greek. Carlyle listened for a time in scornful silence. Then he said: "And what did he say about your work?" "Oh, nothing," said Boehm; "he doesn't know anything about sculpture." "Of course," growled Carlyle, "of course, and he showed his knowledge about things that you didn't understand. No doubt if you asked Blackie he'd say that Gladstone knew nothing about Greek, and the gardener would tell you that he knew nothing whatever about gardening."

An English Millionaire's Books.

A story which is perhaps not altogether new is told in quite a new way in connection with the supposed book by John Milton, now just appearing. The story is about a millionaire who gives a bookseller orders to compile a fine library for his London house. He is not particular as to the books, but he insists upon those of Shakespeare and Milton. "And look here," he emphasizes, "if those fellows publish any more, be sure and let me have the volumes." "That bookseller," says the Rev. Walter Begley, who has discovered and translated the work attributed to Milton—"that bookseller can not execute part of his commission."—London Chronicle.

Neuralgia

is Rheumatism of the face. Uric Acid left in the blood by disordered kidneys lodges along the nerve which branches from the eye over the forehead, and across the cheek to the side of the nose. The cause is the same as in all Rheumatism—disordered Kidneys. The cure is likewise the same—

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

Effected a Complete Cure in the Case of MRS. CAROLINE HUTT, Merrisburg, Ont.

She says: "It affords me great pleasure to speak about what your Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. About a year ago I was taken ill with heart trouble and got so bad that I was unable to do any work for four or five months. I got so weak and miserable that my friends thought I was going to die. The doctor attended me for some time but I continued to grow worse. At last I decided to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking two boxes they made me well and strong again. I cannot praise them too highly to those suffering from nervous weakness and heart troubles."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 for $1.25 at all dealers, or

"Character Reading by External Signs" at Royal Institution, London—Prof. Pearson's Method Explained.

Prof. Karl Pearson's recent address on "Character Reading by External Signs" at the Royal Institution, London, as reported by The Daily Graphic, must have been extremely interesting. What his method was he explained. It was the only way by which a scientific conclusion could be arrived at regarding the relation between features, color of eyes, color of hair, shape of hands, lines of hands, shape of heads, etc., and character—and it was the statistical method, the conclusions being reached by examining very large numbers of persons. This method had been in operation some six years, and in that time, 6,000 boys and girls in schools have been examined, and the results carefully synthesized and analyzed. Of the 6,000 half were boys, half girls; and as yet only the results for boys have been put into tables. Prof. Karl Pearson showed that in many instances the statistical results bore out old proverbs, such as those which attributed quick temper to red-haired people, and which invariably put 'blue eyes on a higher plane of morality than dark ones. Some of the results were extremely curious. They often contradicted the conclusions of the old empirical philosophers, and even the conclusions of the great Lavater; but though they did not always confirm the old proverbs, they seldom were at direct variance with them. Most of the results presented last night had as their basis of inquiry the question whether the boys examined were of keen conscientiousness or dull conscientiousness, conscientiousness be ng the postulated index of character. Taking the case of eye color first; 71 per cent. of light eyes were keenly conscientious and 29 dully so; but in the dark eyes the figures were 61 keen and 39 dull. In hair color the percentages for red hair were 71 keenly conscientious and 29 dull—exactly the same as light eyes; but in the case of people with jet black hair there was a considerable drop of relative conscientiousness, 50 being keen and 50 dull. Coming to "temper," the reds had 65 good-natured, 26 quick-tempered, 9 sullen; while the black had 64 good-natured, 18 quick, and 13 sullen—not much to choose.

Burns and Shakespeare.

Scotland is naturally proud of Robert Burns, whose birthday it celebrated a few days ago. It has not as yet, I think, claimed that Burns was as great a man as Shakespeare, but James Dewar of Belfast sends me a claim for Burns that has an interest of its own. It is that more people pay an annual visit to the places associated with Burns than pay an annual visit to the places associated with Shakespeare. Here are the figures that Mr. Dewar supplies. They are for one year:

—Shakespeare's Shrines.—
Shakespeare's house at Stratford	31,745
Shakespeare's Museum at Stratford	20,144
Shakespeare's Tomb in Stratford Church	25,731
Ann Hathaway's Cottage	18,652
Total	91,275
—Burns' Shrines.—
Burns' Birthplace at Ayr	50,092
Burns' Monument on the banks of the Doon	66,158
Total	116,250

This shows, as Mr. Dewar proudly reminds me, that 24,975 more people did homage to Burns than did homage to Shakespeare by way of pilgrimage in the year—London Sphere.

ONE STEP MORE

Will be fatal to the sleep-walker. Will he draw back or will he take the final, fatal step? A great many people are in peril like the sleep-walker. They are diseased. The disease is progressing day by day. The time comes when one more step away from health is fatal. The man who has suffered from indigestion or gastric trouble goes some night to a dinner and returns home to find he has taken that last step from health which can never be taken back.

To neglect the cure of indigestion or some other form of stomach trouble is dangerous. It is also inexcusable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood, stimulates the liver, cures biliousness, and eliminates bilious poisons from the system.

"The praise I would like to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' I cannot utter in words or describe with pen," writes Jas B. Ambrose, Esq., of 1209 ½ Middle St., Huntingdon, Pa. "I was taken with what our physicians said was indigestion. I doctored with the best around here and found no relief. I wrote you, and you advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I felt so good that I stopped—being cured. I have no symptoms of gastric trouble or indigestion now."

If you ask your dealer for "Golden Medical Discovery" because you have confidence in its cures, do not allow yourself to be switched off to a medicine claimed to be "just as good," but which you did not ask for and of which you know nothing.

You can get the People's Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, paper covers, free by sending 21 one-cent stamps, to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

MONKEY-LIKE MEN.

Race of Savage Swamp Dwellers Found in New Guinea.

The Acting Administrator of New Guinea, Sir Francis P. Winter, in a report to the Governor-General of the Australian Commonwealth, describes a curious people who live in the swamps in New Guinea.

They are called the Ahgaiambo, and have lived in swamps for a period which goes back beyond native tradition. They dwell in houses raised on piles about 12 feet above the surface of the water, which they traverse in canoes dug out of logs. These they propel standing up with a pole.

In addition, they are expert swimmers, gliding through beds of reeds or over masses of floating vegetable matter with ease. They never leave the morass, and their mode of life has reacted upon their physical character, with the result that they are not able to walk properly on hard ground, their feet bleeding if they try to do so.

Sir Francis Winter describes two of the tribe—a man and a woman—as follows:

"The man would have been a fair-sized native, had his body from the hips downward been proportionate to the upper part of his frame. He had a good chest, and, for a native, a thick neck, and his arms matched his trunk.

"His feet were short and broad, and very thin and flat, with—for a native—weak-looking toes. This last feature was still more noticeable in the woman, whose toes were long and slight, and stood out rigidly from the foot, as though they possessed no joints. The feet of both the man and the woman seemed to rest on the ground something like wooden feet would do. The skin above the knees of the man was in loose folds, and the sinews and muscles around the knee were not well-developed. The muscles of the shin were much better developed than those of the calf.

"In the ordinary native the skin on the loins is smooth and tight, and the anatomy of the body is clearly discernible; but the Ahgaiambo man had several folds of thick skin or muscle across the loins which concealed the outline of his frame. On placing one of our natives of the same height alongside the marsh man, we noticed that our native was about 3 inches higher at the hips.

"I had a good view of the man while he was standing sideways towards me, and in figure and carriage he looked to me more apelike than any human being that I have seen. The woman, who was of middle age, was much more slightly formed than the man, but her legs were short and slender in proportion to her figure, which, from the waist to the knee, was clothed in a wrppaer of native cloth."

Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., Stock Brokers, Toronto, write as follows:—

New York, April 16th.—After a fair show of atcivity and strength during the first two hours the list was inclined to dull price movements being very narrow. Amal. copper was one of the prominent leaders selling up over 64. Sentiment favouring the bull side is growing.

Shortly after noon market again became quite active, prices still advancing higher. Around one o'clock the advance was met by some considerable profit-taking, causing slight declines. Strong support and good buying orders appeared during the last hour which caused rally to best prices. Market appears to be in a strong position at present; but caution should be used in trading and do not think this market is going to have a boom right away as in order to have a good strong market money must be plentiful.

Chicago.—Wheat opened about one cent under close last night. The market is purely a manipulative one. Would take profits around 78 for May.

Closing prices.—Wheat, May, 77 1-2; corn, May, 43 3-4; oats, May, 33 1-2; pork, May, 17.95; lard, May, 9.82 1-2.

Messrs. Haight & Freese, Stock Brokers, submit the following:—

New York, April 17.—We see no reason why some further improvement should not occur in the stock market to-day. These issues that have been quiet are likely to be taken up. It is a market in which one group is made prominent and then made to rest while another is pushed forward. There ought to be some reaction in the market between now and next Wednesday when it is planned that the new stock exchange will open. It is regarded as almost a certainty that prices will rise on the first day the members do business in their new home. We are conservatively bullish. We should not be surprised to see the market spring into bullish activity any hour. The market yesterday was satisfactory as absorbing power was good.

M. C. is likely to be taken into hand any day. We believe R. I. will have a good rise soon.

TOPICS.

New York, April 17.—There will be no strike on Manh. Insiders are predicting big figures for St. and Sanf. com.

There is positively no pressure of stocks on the market. Take on some B.O. Do not confound the present upward movement with a rally it is made of sterner stuff and B.O. will sell at par again.

This is the day that Morgan celebrates. He is 66 years, but feels younger. He is bullish on steels, Eries, Readings and S.R. and he is doing something besides recommending purchases. The bears on Met. are losing ground and will lose money. Specialties, sugar wil work higher. Hold some A.C.P. Take on some P.O.

POLICE COURT.

Man and Wife in Trouble for Neglecting Children.

At the Police Court this morning before Police Magistrate Dumble, Mortimer Mowry and his wife were charged with gross neglect of their children. It transpired that in September last both of the accused were drinking to excess, consequently making their home a very undesirable place for children. The children were consequently taken to the Shelter. In January last, they were returned as Mr. and Mrs. Mowry had promised to abstain from drinking intoxicating liquor. This week, Mr. Cochrane, agent for the Children's Aid Society, received word that Mr. and Mrs. Mowry had been drinking continually for some time past. He and Constable Adams went round to the house, which they found in a shockingly filthy condition, and again took the children to the Shelter. Mrs. Mowry was at the time very much the worse of liquor and strenuously resisted the officers. After some further witnesses were examined the Police Magistrate enlarged the case for one week.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun conducted the prosecution, while Mr. E. B. Stone defended.

The Skin on Fire

So dreadful are the sensations of burning, itching Eczema that victims frequently describe their sufferings by saying that the skin is all on fire. The stinging, biting fires of Eczema are quenched by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Miss Florence and Evelyn Dormer spent Easter with their brother, George, and friends in Hespeler and Buffalo.

Capt. W. V. Reynolds, of Lakefield, returned home on Friday of last week, from Bartlesville, I. T., where he had been for the past three months engaged in looking after the interests of the Ontario Osage Illuminating Oil Co. The Captain reports everything booming in that part of the country.

The Millbrook Reporter says: — The singing in all the churches on Sunday was of a special Easter nature. The choirs had made careful provision and their selections were very suitable to the day. In the Presbyterian Miss Knox, of Peterborough, a young debutant as a vocalist, sang with excellent acceptance and we predict for her a successful future.

THE STAKE RACES.

Entries Closed on Wednesday Last at 11 p. m.

The entries for the Stake Races of the Peterborough Turf Club, which are to take place on August 5th and 6th, closed on Wednesday last at 11 p.m. There are 20 entries in the 2.50 pace and 2.47 trot, while there are 15 entries for the 2.30 class.

The purse for each of these events is $500.00. The horses names are not as yet known, but will be by July 1st.

The Association has the best half mile race track in Canada; twenty acres of good grass, good spring water and ten miles of good sand road. Mr. George Powell, the well known and competent trainer, will be present on the track.

There are many entries and these races should be a great success.

Wheeling Tours.

In Great Britain they have a better appreciation of the bicycle, because they have found wherein its greatest charm lies—touring through the country districts. Why there is not more of this done in Canada is astonishing for certainly there are many beautiful districts through which these tours may be taken, and without doubt the best way to take in their beauties is on a wheel. A vacation of one or two weeks used in this manner will have a lasting beneficial effect on one's health. It will be a holiday to remember through the winter months.

IN MEMORIAM.

Lines addressed to Mrs. Richard P. Sheehy on the death of her son, William Joseph, who departed this life on Easter Sunday, April 12th, 1903, aged twelve years.

Chide thy sorrow, loving mother,
For thy darling one that's gone;
He who took him from among you,
Claims him now just for His own.
Only for a time has lent thee,
To engage thy care and love;
He hath this affliction sent thee,
To transfer thy heart above.

'Twas, indeed, an earthly treasure,
Yet 'twas His, by claim divine,
And His holy will and pleasure
Should submissively be thine.
In the Saviour's crown this jewel
Was preparing to be set,
And to take it was not cruel,
Nor should cause thee deep regret.

In the heavenly choir some chasm
May have walked to be filled,
And life's momentary spasm
Soon by angel lyres was stilled.
Have you never heard him saying,
Music stole into his ear?
Were they not those harp chords playing
That so soon he learned to hear?

Thou art richer for the riven
Ties that grew around thy heart;
Treasure thou hast now in heaven,
Painful tho' it was to part.
Music there for thee has wended,
Sweeter far than earth can know;
And with thine again once blended,
Shall not cease henceforth to flow.

Hush, then, all thy bitter weeping,
Think thy Father's will is best;
William Joseph, in His keeping,
Early lost is early blest.
He has reached a better care,
And upon a bosom fonder
Than thine own—is safer there.

PAPER EXPERTS' TESTIMONY

Two of Them Pronounce Upon the Quality and Markings.

THE LETTERS SCRUTINIZED.

The Material Might Have Been Bought by Anyone Anywhere—More Testimony About the Piano Factory Episode—An Important Ruling—Exclusion of Evidence About Approaches Made to Gamey.

Toronto, April 18.— There were several important features at the Gamey investigation yesterday. One of these indicated that the case would be considerably shortened. At the opening Chancellor Boyd suggested that they might get along a little faster. Later all evidence in corroboration of Mr. Gamey's testimony as to the approaches made to him last August was ruled out, and the counsel on both sides intimated that the attendance of a number of witnesses would no longer be necessary. On the other hand, there may be a few days' delay should the Lieutenant-Governor die. Another feature was the indentification by means of watermarks of the paper on which certain anonymous letters to Mr. Gamey were written as the same as that of certain acknowledged documents from Mr. Stratton's office. The bearing of this however, was weakened by the admission that such paper was not made exclusively for the Government, but was sold to the public generally. The attendance was smaller than usual, indicating a falling off in interest, but among those present were Hon. Raymond Prefontaine and Mr. Geo. D. Grant, M.P.

Couldn't Give It in Sequence.

Percy G. Price was still in the box, when the Royal Commission began its work yesterday morning. He was examined by Mr. C. H. Ritchie:

Q.—Will you toll us in giving your evidence, whether you pretended to give in sequence or consecutive order the different matters happened at the interview at the piano factory? A.—I didn't pretend to give it in sequence at all; if I gave some parts in sequence because the natural thought followed——

Q.—You didn't pretend to be able to give it in sequence? A.—No. I didn't pretend to; I couldn't do that. Q.—All these subjects you have said were discussed you have a distinct recollection of, and the only one you have not a recollection about is about the use of the expression "$100,000?" A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, I see that on the second page of the statement which you handed to Mr. Gamey, and which was put by him in the sealed envelope, these words are stricken out, "Sullivan said that Myers did not know there was money in the envelope." You had evidently written that there in the first place? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you strike it out?

Mr. Johnston—I object to that. Mr. Price has already explained this, and that it is not open to re-examination.

The Chancellor states that the witness has explained it, but he may, perhaps make some change. He then amplified the explanation of the day before.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—You struck it out because you thought you couldn't swear to it as a fact? A.—Certainly.

Third Student Appears.

James Arthur Kinney, the third of the hidden witnesses at the Crossin piano factory, followed. He is a young man now studying law, but who was formerly a school teacher in Manitoulin. His evidence on the whole was substantially the same as that of the others. This was a new point:

Q.—Any further that you recollect? A.—They talked of the by-elections—spoke of Mr. Davis. Sullivan said that he wouldn't mind if Davis had been defeated, he said, he didn't think very much of him, and he said there were a good many others that had the same opinion; but, he said, the way it was with such a small majority, of course it wouldn't do to lose any of their supporters.

Cross-examined by Mr. Johnston:

Q.—Were you ever engaged in this class of work that you have been describing before? A.—This was my first detective work.

Not Proud of It.

Q.—And of course you are rather proud of your success? A.—Not at all.

Q.—A little ashamed of it? A.—That is, perhaps, my own business.

Q.—You need not be afraid to answer. Where you a little ashamed of the work that you were doing? A.—I don't know as I was.

Q.—You feel quite satisfied in your own mind that you are acting the part of a patriot? A.—Quite satisfied.

In answer to questions, he said he went there just to hear what was going on, that Mr. Gamey had asked him to, that he was under no obligations to Mr. Gamey, that he could not say that he had an inkling of what the meeting was between Gamey and Sullivan was to be about.—

Mr. Johnston—Q.—You know you were going there to play the part or a spy? A.—I was going there—call it a spy ——

Q.—Is that correct—you were going there to play the part of a spy? A.—Call it what you like.

Q.—And if necessary to turn informer? A.—I never thought of that.

Q.—Had you taken part in elections before this? A.—I have.

Q.—Did you use any language condemning the Ross Government before you went up there? A.—Certainly, talked about politics; I spoke of what I thought was out of place.

Q.—And condemned them as being corrupt? A.—I don't know as I used the word corrupt.

Q.—Condemned them of being what, if not corrupt? A.—Didn't suit my line of ideas.

Testing His Memory.

The cross-examiner demanded that Kinney recall any other conversation in the course of his life, this week, this month, last year or any time. The witness appeared at a loss, but finally named three conversations he had had with fellow students on various topics of this week.

Q.—Will you swear on that occasion you heard every word of both parties? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And you swear it as a fact? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did Sullivan at any time say to this man, "You want to be careful to get things right?"

After a moment or two of cross-firing on the part of Mr. Johnston, in an effort to confine the witness to the point and eliminate explanation, the witness finally said: "I do not think that Sullivan did."

Q.—Did Sullivan say "You have not got that down right?" A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did he say "You must get things right?" A.—Gamey said that.

Q.—It would indicate they were concocting a story? A.—I do not know that they were concocting a story.

Q.—I am asking if it indicated that there was a story being planned? A.—It indicated that Gamey and this man wanted to have this thing right.

Q.—Young Price said these words were used by Sullivan to Gamey? A.—I cannot help that.

Q.—And you contradict that? A.—I think Gamey used the words, and they both joined in and said they wanted to have the words right in case of future trouble.

Minister of Mines.

Q.—Now was anything said with regard to Mr. Gamey being Minister of Mines? A.—I didn't hear it.

Q.—If it had been said, was there any reason why you should not have heard it? A.—No reason why. I might not remember it.

Q.—Would it be a matter of surprise to you to hear Mr. Gamey talking about being made Minister of Mines? A.—Yes.

Q.—And being a matter of surprise you would have likely noticed it if it had been said? A.—There were so many matters of surprise I couldn't keep track of them all.

Q.—You think you would have remembered it if such a thing had been said? Because Mr. Gamey says he never said it to anybody? A.—I don't remember it.

No Shorthand Notes Taken.

Mr. Johnston here made another point in contradiction of Gamey's statement in the House, when he asserted that the conversation had been "taken down by three shorthand writers." Witness is not a shorthand writer and no notes were taken. It was not, he said, Mr. Gamey who saw him about going there.

Q.—Did Mr. Gamey in talking about Myers say that he had rather a peculiar looking face when he took the money from Stratton? A.—He spoke about him having a peculiar looking face; I don't remember the other.

Q.—Sullivan talked as if he could do what he pleased with the Minister? A.—The inference I drew was that he could do pretty well what he liked.

Q.—Was there any statement made by Sullivan that he could get $100,000 from the Minister if he wanted it? A.—I don't remember $100,000.

Q.—Was it stated that the money was taken down to the smoking-room? A.—Yes.

Q.—You remember the word money"? A.—Yes.

Q.—You forget $100,000, and the million feet and the Minister of Mines, but you remember distinctly the word "money"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Gamey says that the word "money" was not mentioned, that the word "parcel" was what was said? A.—I never heard "parcel."

Q.—Put it as if Gamey were speaking to Sullivan? A.—Gamey asked Sullivan if Stratton would pay him the rest of the money.

Q.—'Do you think Stratton will give us the rest of that money?' Do you think that is it? A.—Yes.

Neither did he remember hearing anything of the Nobles, Clapperton Island, or Minister of Mines.

No "Minister of Mines."

Re-examined by Mr. Ritchie:

Q.—You heard what the last witness, Mr. Percy Price, said in the box as to his recollection about "Minister of Mines" being used? A.—Yes.

Q.—And notwithstanding what you heard him say, you yourself do not recollect it? A.—Yes.

Q.—My learned friend asked you if Sullivan said that they wanted to be careful to get things right? A.—I never heard the words used just that way.

Q.—Tell us just what it was you heard in connection with "getting things right"? A.—Gamey mentioned about this Myers bringing down the money, and Sullivan spoke up and said, "Why, it wasn't Myers; it was that fellow Chase." Gamey said, "I'm very glad you mentioned that; I will make a note of that; we want to have things right."

Q.—And you heard the whole conversation from beginning to end? A.—Yes; they were near enough to hear all that was said by Gamey and Sullivan. The room was not very large, and they were afraid to move, lest Sullivan should hear them. Mr. Gamey had to keep scraping his feet, in order to give them a chance to breathe without being heard.

Q.—But can you swear positively that you recollect all that passed, all the words? A.—No. I couldn't catch it all at that time. There was lots of names that I didn't know—lots of people.

Mr. Crossin was recalled and agreed to permit the defence to inspect his books at any time. An appointment was made for after court adjournment.

Evidence Not Admitted.

An important ruling was then given by the commission, shutting out a lot of evidence which the prosecution wanted to introduce. Mr. J. M. Might, directory publisher, was called, and Mr. Ritchie said he proposed to ask what Mr. Gamey told him last August as to the approaches made by Sullivan.

The Chancellor—I do not see how you can make evidence of that. You had Mr. Gamey's oath upon that point. It is not proper to give evidence of what he may have said to some person else. You see what danger would arise, a man might fabricate a story and go and tell it to fifty people, and then call them to corroborate him.

Mr. Ritchie—That is quite true.

The Chancellor—I do not think you will press it when you come to consider it yourself. This ruling will apply to all evidence of a kindred nature. I do not know whether there is any more or not.

Mr. Ritchie—Yes, my Lord, and we will send the witnesses home.

Mr. Johnston—Of course, I assume your Lordships' ruling covers the case in which we propose to call evidence in reply to that character or class of evidence.

The Chancellor—If you want to call evidence for instance, after examining Mr. Sullivan—if you do examine him—call witnesses to say what Sullivan said to him, that would be subject to the same ruling.

Mr. Johnston—We will send our witnesses away.

The Chancellor—You, of course, Mr. Johnston, and the other side have a right to examine these people as to statements Gamey made to them, if you choose to do it.

Mr. Johnston—Quite so.

The Chancellor—They cannot do it, but you can, if you like.

Miss Durkin's Evidence.

Mr. Blake called Miss Margaret Durkin, a stenographer, in the Provincial Secretary's Department.

Q.—Have you anything to do with the copying of letters? A.—No.

Q.—Who attends to that work? A.—Well, my letters were always duplicated.

Q.—Your letters were always duplicated and were not entered in a letter book? A.—No.

Q.—Were you the stenographer who took Mr. Stratton's letters? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was any other stenographer there who took his letters? A.—Yes, the private secretary, Mr. Myers.

Q.—And were there duplicates kept of the letters that were taken by Mr. Myers, as well as by yourself? A.—I think so.

Q.—Then where are those copies kept of the letters? A.—In the files.

Q.—And you have those files, or in whose charge are they? A.—They are in the office.

Q.—Then you were subpoenaed to produce the books in which you wrote? A.—Well, I never kept them.

Q.—What did you do with them? A.—I always destroyed them.

Q.—And you say that for two years that has been your practice? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who instructed you to do that? A.—Well, it was the rule of the office where I was.

Q.—How was it the rule of the office where you were? A.—Well, I think I have just got the impression.

Q.—How, then, did you gain the impression that the rule of the office was to destroy the books of the stenographer? A.—Well, it was the other office I was in; it was the distinct rule.

Q.—Whose office was that? A.—In the Assistant Secretary's, Mr. Lumsden.

The "X. Y. Z." Letter.

She stated that she did not write the "X.Y.Z." letter giving advice to Mr. Gamey about his attitude to the dissatisfied Conservatives in February, and never saw it before. She was closely questioned about the notebooks and letters, and denied that, within three months, she ever missed any from her drawer, or that she ever complained to anyone to that effect. She never prepared nor saw the interview with Mr. Gamey given in The Globe, and could not recognize from the typewriting where either document was done. She operated the Densmore typewriter herself, while Mr. Stratton's private secretary used the Remington.

Mr. Johnston promised to produce the duplicated letters if Mr. Blake would give him a list of those he required.

Experts on Paper.

Mr. W. P. Ryrie, of Toronto, was then called as a paper expert, and examined the exhibits presented to him by Mr. W. D. McPherson. His testimony was technical and interesting. He testified that the "X. Y. Z." letter, the letter signed by Mr. Gamey in Mr. Aylesworth's office and drawn by Mr. Stratton, and a specimen letter from Mr. Stratton's Department relating to patronage, were all on one kind of paper. "Stock Brokers' Bond," manufactured by Rolland & Co., of St. Jerome, Quebec, and handled by Buntin, Reid & Co. The enclosure, apparently a speech for Gamey to deliver, and The Globe interview, handed to Mr. Hammond, were also, Mr. Ryrie testified, on precisely the same paper, the "Cowan" brand, made in Valleyfield, Scotland. Taking up a blank sheet enclosed with the "X.Y.Z. letter, apparently to conceal the contents of the envelope, Mr. Ryrie swore that it was the same paper as that on which a letter from Frank Sullivan, signed "F. J. S." was written. This brand was "Earnscliffe Bond," signed by Rolland & Co.

Edmund L. Young, another paper expert, of Toronto, gave similar testimony. The witnesses also testified to similarities in various envelopes used.

Might Be Bought Anywhere.

In cross-examination the two paper witnesses admitted that there was nothing to prevent anyone from buying this kind of paper from those who sold it. It was all sold in the open market, and could be bought by anyone who had the money, knew where it could be got, and wanted it.

The Exhibits Made.

The following are the documents which came under the review of the two previous witnesses:

Series 1—This consisted of three letters, first a copy of the letter produced by Hon. J. R. Stratton as having been written by his private secretary to Mr. Gamey, dated the 15th of January. This bears the watermark "Stock-brokers bond."

The second is Exhibit "3," letter dated 10th September, seen by Mr. Gamey in Mr. Aylesworth's office, written on the same stock of paper as last Exhibit.

Third, part of Exhibit "29," the "X.Y.Z." letter dated February 11th, 1903, also on Stock-brokers' bond.

Series 2—First, the Globe interview, Exhibit "17" on imported paper, double sheet, manufactured by Alex. Cowan & Co., Valleyfield, Scotland; watermarked "C. & Co."

Second, typewritten letter of instruction accompanying the "X.Y.Z." letter, same kind of paper, containing same watermark.

Third Series—First, letter Exhibit "30," dated 20th February, Frank Sullivan to Gamey, signed with initials, "F. J. S.," paper ordinary foolscap size, watermarked "Lion rampant" with "Earnscliffe linen bond."

Second, blank sheet, part of Exhibit "29" in which the "X. Y. Z." letter and the typewritten enclosures were wrapped up.

Fourth Series—These include the envelopes containing Exhibits "30" and "31," letter "30," having been registered at Yorkville, P.O., on the 20th February. This contained the typewritten letter signed "T.J.S."

The other envelope is the one in which Exhibit "31" was contained. It was registered at Yorkville also on the 27th of February, is addressed in Frank Sullivan's handwriting, and contained the letter of the 27th of February, addressed from 14 Linden street. The paper bears the Public Works Department crest, is in Frank Sullivan's own handwriting, as was the letter.

Then there was the additional letter in lead pencil, contained in the same letter, and which is practically a postscript. This was also in Sullivan's own handwriting.

And finally there was the large envelope which had contained the "X. Y. Z." letter and other enclosures. This is an imported English linen cloth-lined envelope, such as is used in official correspondence.

Mr. Gamey's Brother.

Wilfrid Gamey, sworn, said he lived in Perryville, in the Township of Campbell, about seven miles from his brother, Mr. R. R. Gamey. He was at his brother's place in August last. About 11 o'clock, his brother having gone to bed, a rap sounded on the door and he answered the call. He addressed the man as Mr. Jackson, supposing him to be Sheriff Jackson. He refused to come in, and said he wanted to see Mr. Gamey. He called his brother down, and he saw him speak to the man, when he went upstairs and finished dressing, and came down and went out with the man. He didn't know what time he returned.

Q.—Do you know from anything that happened since who that man was? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who was the man? A.—Captain John Sullivan.

Witness said he saw Capt. Sullivan at Gore Bay the next day, and that along with Mr. R. R. Gamey to whom he was talking on the journey, he was a passenger with the party on boat and train as far as Sudbury, when Capt. Sullivan parted from them. He had no means of fixing the exact date. It was the only time he was at his brother's when anyone called at night.

Produced a Telegram.

D. G. Sturrock, local manager of C.P.R. Telegraph Co., produced a telegram dated Jan. 27:

"Robert Gamey, Gore Bay, Ontario. Important that you be here on Thursday or Friday. (Signed) Frank."

The message was received at 7.56 p.m., and the sender left no address. The message was written on a blank piece of paper and pasted on one of their forms according to rule.

Bank Manager Next.

George P. Reid, sworn.

By Mr. McPherson—Q.—What is your occupation? A.—General manager of the Standard Bank, of Toronto.

Q.—You have been summoned to produce certain documents, books and papers here? A.—Yes.

Q.—What do you produce in compliance with the summons? A.—I produce an account of Messrs. Kerr, Davidson, Patterson & Grant, and an account of R. A. Grant.

Q.—Are they copies? A.—Yes.

Q.—Will you permit us to make comparisons to verify your copies?

Mr. Riddell objected that Mr. R. A. Grant was not here and he should have some notice. It was finally agreed to notify Mr. Grant, and make an ex parte examination of the originals and copies at the bank this afternoon.

Production Witnessed.

Accountant Murray of the Supreme Court next put in some documents showing the payments to Messrs. Kerr, Davidson, Patterson & Grant of the $1,000 at the Gamey protest proceedings on order of the petitioner, James F. Fraser, by cheque on the Standard Bank, 31st Oct., 1902.

George Armstrong, with register of Ocean House, Gore Bay, testified that Cap. J. Sullivan was registered by the proprietor of the house there on 21st August last. He knew Capt. Sullivan and saw him there that day. He arrived at the House after 6.30, and went away the next morning.

Adjourns Till Monday.

Because of the absence in Ottawa of R. A. Grant and the unwillingness of the prosecution to break their chain of evidence, the judges consented to an adjournment of the Gamey Commission at 2.40 yesterday afternoon. To-day being Saturday it will not meet again until Monday.

Positive Proof of Pinkham Cures

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant,—not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the whole uterine system, positively CURING disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

One of Many Women Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Without Submitting to an Operation, Writes:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was a great sufferer for three years, had some of the leading physicians, and they all said nothing but an operation would cure me, but to that I would not submit.

"I picked up a paper and saw your advertisement and made up my mind to try your medicine. I had falling and inflammation of the womb and a flow of whites all the time, pains across small of back, severe headache, did not know what it was to be without a pain or an ache until I used your medicine. After three months' use of it, I felt like a new woman. I still sound the praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. WM. A. COWAN, 1804 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.

A Graduate Nurse, Convinced by Cures, Endorses Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She Writes:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ministering to the sick I have had numerous chances to compare Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with other medicines in cases of diseases of women, and the number of cures recorded where your medicine was used convinced me that it is the safest and surest medicine for a sick woman. Doctors certainly must know the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am convinced that you deserve the splendid record you have made.—Yours very truly, MRS. CATHERINE JACKSON, 769 Beaubien St., Detroit, Mich." (Graduate Nurse and President Detroit Emergency Association.)

Many Physicians Admit that no Medicine Known to the Profession Equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound for the Cure of Woman's Ills, and We are Permitted to Publish the Following:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to state that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and have often prescribed it for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for uterine trouble some two years ago, and my youngest daughter is using it for female weakness, and as a tonic, and is slowly but surely gaining strength and health.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all disorders which women are subject to, and give it honest endorsement.—Yours very truly, SARAH C. BRIGHAM, M.D., 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass."

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it can be relied upon to effect a cure.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhœa, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had such a vast and successful experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice.

A TRIUMPHANT BUDGET.

The budget which Mr. Fielding presented to Parliament Thursday may without exaggeration be so designated. It is little to say that such a financial statement was never before made to a Canadian Parliament. It would be nearer the mark to say that nothing approaching it in its story of material growth and assertion of national power has been listened to by a gathering of Canadian public men.

Mr. Fielding's voice was the voice of a young people modestly insisting on being treated fairly, even by the proudest nations of the earth. His narration of the negotiations with Germany, the Government's disposition not to act hastily, but to appeal respectfully to the reason of the German Administration, and, finally, in default of obtaining justice, striking manfully back, was listened to with unaffected interest and received with satisfaction by both sides of the House.

The firm though perfectly friendly attitude towards the United States was equally approved, and again both sides of the House showed appreciation of the determination to meet the Philippine export tax on manilla by legislation intended to prevent the injury that such a discriminatory policy would inflict on the binder twine industry.

The Canadian Government had no idea, when granting a preference to British goods, of gaining an advantage in the British market by pressing th British people to impose a tax on their breadstuffs. The situation was changed, however, when the Imperial Government voluntarily imposed that tax as a part of their own financial policy. While the Canadian Government were not prepared to urge on the mo herland the imposition of fresh taxes on the bread of her masses, they had no such delicacy in regard to the proposal to remit such taxes in favour of colonial products. The British Government had refused the suggestion as to this remission, and under the circumstances the Canadian Government felt free to take at any time, with respect to the preference, whatever course appeared to be in the best interests of the Canadian people.

The part of Mr. Fielding's statement, however, which aroused the greatest enthusiasm among the members supporting the Government was the announcement that in 1903 he hoped to be able to reduce the public debt by $5,500,000. "I am able," he affirmed, "to say that for the past four years we have not increased the public debt by one cent." When it is added that only four times has a Finance Minister been able to announce a reduction in the debt, and that it has fallen to Mr. Fielding's lot twice to do so, he well deserved the hearty plaudits which his statement elicited.

He laid down a broad principle with reference to the Government's fiscal policy. He said the future of Canada was bound up with the growth of the west, and no Government could afford to promote a policy that would set up an antagonism between eastern and western Canada. The more this doctrine is examined the more it will commend itself as a statesmanlike standard by which to measure a real national policy.

Other notable passages in Mr. Fielding's eloquent statement were the announcement of a three and a half per cent. popular ten-year loan, to which the people of Canada will be invited to subscribe; a duty of $7 per ton on steel rails when the Canadian mills convince the Government of their ability to supply the demand in Canada with a first-class rail; the increase of the Government issue of paper money from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000, and the abolition of tolls on the canals. This last was by no means the least gratifying of the Finance Minister's announcements, and when he said, "for the next two years the canals of Canada will be as free as the ocean," the applause was as hearty as any that had been heard during the delivery of his statement.—Globe.

HERALD'S SEIVE MAN WITH GAMEY.

The man on the Montreal Herald, who puts things through his seive in a very amusing way, thus pshodles the evidence of Mr. Gamey, evidently pointing out its wide range and the independence of connecting circumstances with each other:

"Toronto, April 14.—(By Airless Wind.)—The investigation into the Gamey charges began here to-day.

Council for Mr. Gamey asked: "How do you pronounce your name?"

Mr. Gamey—"Just like 'Game.'"

"What kind of game, wild duck or ping pong?"

Mr. Gamey—"I think so."

"How did you feel when you got so much money?"

"Like J. Pierpont Morgan."

"Did Mr. Stratton hand it to you?"

"No, but I saw a man, who saw a man, who saw another man, who said he saw another man who saw Stratton."

"That's pretty convicting. Now, what are the prospects?"

"Well I think the Shamrock III. can trim the Shamrock I. in any kind of weather."

"Did Mr. Stratton tell you that?"

"Well, er-er-er-er."

"Answer to the question, sir."

"No but Mr Stratton said it looked like rain."

A DOURO WEDDING.

Mr. Charles Wellington Garbutt Married to Miss Ethel Jane Charlton.

On Wednesday evening "Cedar Grange," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Charlton, of Douro, was the scene of a very interesting event, the occasion being the marriage of their youngest daughter, Miss Ethel Jane, to Mr. Charles Wellington Garbutt, of Douro. The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock, by the Rev. C. A. Campbell, in the presence of about seventy guests. The bride, who was attired in a very becoming costume, was assisted by Miss J. Hendren, while Mr. Samuel Charlton, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. After the ceremony the assembled guests sat down to a most inviting wedding dinner, the evening being spent in games and social intercourse. The bride was the recipient of a large number of presents, amply testifying to the esteem and respect in which she was held by her many friends. The happy couple will take up their residence in Douro.

STAFF OF SURVEYORS ARE AT BELLEVILLE.

The G. T. R. Officials are Giving Some Attention to Midland Railway.

It is believed that before long there will be important changes in the G.T.R. circles here, says the Belleville Ontario. A staff of surveyors has been engaged for a couple of days making a survey of Coleman's flats, next to the G.T.R. line and where the old targets used to stand. Manager Hay in speaking to some prominent railway men here said that he was greatly impressed with the preparations that were being made at Midland for handling grain, and the prospects were that the Grand Trunk would do a much larger business from lake ports than ever before. The grades along the line have been considerably reduced and the locomotives were now hauling much longer trains. On an average an engine could now haul fifty cars. The grain business is so rapidly developing that additional facilities in the shape of double tracking would have to be afforded at an early date. The line between Midland and Belleville is now the leading grain route of the Grand Trunk system. The great influx of settlers into the Northwest with the consequent enormous increase of grain output, will tax to the utmost all the transportation facilities of the country.

MR. SANDERSON PRESENTS A CURLER'S "STOUP"

That was Carried all Through Canada on Curlers' Tour.

The Leith Observer of a recent date contains a cut of a curlers' "stoup," with the inscription quite legible thereon. It also contains the following reference thereto:

"The above is a representation of a quart pot, which has something of a history. It formed part of the stock of the Atlantic steamer Bavarian, and during the voyage to Canada of the Scottish curlers' team it was utilized as a 'stoup' at the Curlers' Court held on board. The 'stoup,' it may be explained to the unitiated, is used to hold the fines exacted from members during the sittings of the court. As fines are imposed for many things, such as crossing the legs, using the right hand instead of the left, etc., the money accumulates rapidly. At the close the 'stoup' and its contents were put up for auction and it was secured by Mr. Mark Sanderson, Leith, a prominent and popular curler, who was a member of the team who went to Canada. Mr. Sanderson resolved to present the 'stoup' to the Royal Caledonian Curling Club as a memento of the voyage. The presentation took place on Wednesday last at the dinner given to the Scoto-Canadian team in the Royal Hotel, Edinburgh. As can be seen from the above photographic reproduction, the 'stoup' has been suitably engraved and no doubt it will be preserved among the cherished 'relics' of the Royal Caledonian 'Curling Club.'"

SOME STOCK NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Anderson Bros., of Highland Home, South Monaghan, Make a Purchase.

Anderson Bros., of Highland Home, South Monaghan, have just purchased the imported three-year-old Clydesdale stallion Sir Launcelot, vol. XXV., foaled June 4th, 1900. Sir Launcelot was bred by John Craig, Bellsfield, Blantyre, Lanarkshire, Scotland, and imported by William Isaacs, Ontario. Sir Launcelot is sired by Hiawatha, (10067), the most noted prize winner in Scotland. Hiawatha has won the Candor Cup four times at the Glasgow Stallion Show, no other horses ever having done this in Scotland. He also won the championship at the Highland Show at Edinburg in 1900 over all the best sires in Scotland. In 1902 at Glasgow, a draw for the cup were Hiawatha and his two sons Laboria and Marcellus; this was the finest sight ever seen in a Scotch show ring, and when the old war horse won there were shouts of applause. No Clydesdale that has ever lived has won such a show record as that of Hiawatha. Hiawatha was bought by Mr. Pollock in 1898 for $1,050. His service fee is now $30. Jeanes, (1906) the noted dam of Sir Launcelot, Jol, has also been a great prize winner. In 1896 she won first at Cambuslang, in 1897 first at Hamilton; at Glasgow, in 1900 she won first prize as best brood mare and foal.

The Grand Trunk picture exhibit illustrating the many tourist districts throughout Ontario, and which has been doing exceptionally good work in advertising this province in several of the large cities in the Southern States, completed last Friday, an eleven days' display at the First Annual Sportsmen's Show of Ohio, at Cleveland, and left on Saturday for Knoxville, Tenn. During the time of the Sportsmens' Show, over 50,000 people attended, and the Grand Trunk exhibit was a source of much interest. Illustrated descriptive literature and all information as to the different regions in "The Highlands of Ontario," was given out by a representative of the Grand Trunk. After exhibiting in Knoxville, the collection of pictures will move on to Richmond, Va., and thence proceed to several cities in Pennsylvania and New York States, going out of commission about May 15th. This is probably the greatest advertisment that Ontario has ever had south of the International Boundry.

Canada's Onward March.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

Mr. R. L. Borden Replies to Mr. Fielding and Makes Best Speech of His Life According to Conservatives.

Ottawa, April 18.—Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Opposition, yesterday replied to Mr. Fielding's budget speech. He spoke for about two and one-half hours, and was repeatedly applauded by his followers and by Mr. Tarte. Conservative members generally declared that it was the best speech Mr. Borden had ever delivered. At the close of his address, Mr. Borden moved an amendment, calling for revision of the tariff during the present session, which would afford adequate protection to all Canadian industries. Sir Richard Cartwright adjourned the debate until Monday, after which day the debate will have precedence of other business.

The House in Supply.

The House went into supply at 6 o'clock, but after passing a number of items a deadlock occurred over an item for the building of a wharf at Grand Vallee, Quebec, which the Opposition declared was built solely for the benefit of timber limits in which Mr. Lovell, member for Stanstead, is interested. They demanded that the item should stand, but Mr. Sutherland would not accede to the demand, as he had an agreement with Mr. Borden that the Quebec items should be allowed to pass with a proviso that they should all be open for discussion at a later stage. It was nearly 1 o'clock before the item was carried on a vote.

The following bills were introduced:—Respecting the Canadian Northern Railway Company—Mr. Davis. Respecting the Edmonton, Yukon & Pacific Railway Company; to incorporate the Canadian Industrial Corporation, Limited—Mr. Thompson. To incorporate the St. Louis Light & Power Company—Mr. Campbell. Respecting the Nipissing & James Bay Railway Company—Mr. Erb.

SIR OLIVER MOWAT.

Remarkable Vitality—Still Lives, But in a Very Weak State.

Toronto, April 18.—At 3.30 this morning Drs. Temple and Primrose issued a bulletin from Government House, saying the patient continued to sink and that the end was expected momentarily. The condition has been practically unchanged all night, with the slightest sign of life remaining. It could not be more critical.

During yesterday all the reports indicated that there had been little change in the condition of the distinguished patient during the last twenty-four hours, although at times he appeared conscious of his surroundings.

During the day there were many anxious callers at Government House, and the officers of the household were kept busy answering calls over the telephone. Among those who called yesterday were:—Hon. Geo. W Ross, Sir John Boyd, Chief Justice Falconbridge, Hon. R. Harcourt, Senator Melvin Jones, Lady Kirkpatrick, Miss Eva Booth of the Salvation Army, Lady Gzowski, Lady Howland, Hon. J. M. THE IRISH CONVENTION.

Home Rule Resolution Moved and Carried—Land Bill Amendments.

Dublin, April 18. — The national conference called by the United Irish League to consider the new land bill, reconvened early yesterday. There was a smaller attendance. In view of a misunderstanding in the case of certain English papers, John Redmond, the chairman, introduced a strong home rule resolution, declaring that the Irish nation never would be satisfied until it shall have obtained a full measure of self-government.

Michael Davitt briefly seconded the resolution. Mr. Redmond's resolution was carried by acclamation.

An amendment of Mr. O'Brien providing for extending financial assistance to the evicted tenants was carried, and several important amendments to the land bill were suggested in other resolutions which passed.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism.

"For years, when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Jouis Macdonald, of Man, Logan County, West Virginia. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment. One man was drowned and several persons, including Sir Thomas, who was knocked down a hatchway, were bruised or otherwise injured.

HEALTHY WOMEN

Praise Pe-ru-na as a Cure for Colds and a Preventive of Catarrh.

MRS. M. J. BRINK.

FIRST STAGE OF CATARRH.

A Serious Mistake Which Thousands Are Making.

The first stage of catarrh is what is commonly known as "catching cold." It may be in the head, nose, throat or lungs. Its beginning is sometimes so severe as to cause a chill and considerable fever, or it may be so slight as to not hinder a person from his usual business. In perhaps a majority of cases little or no attention is paid to the first stage of catarrh, and hence it is that nearly one-half of the people have chronic catarrh in some form.

To neglect a cold is to invite chronic catarrh. As soon as any one discovers the first symptoms of catching cold he should at once begin the use of Peruna according to directions on the bottle, and the cold is sure to pass away without leaving any bad effects.

Unless this is done the cold is almost sure to end in the second stage of catarrh, which is making so many lives miserable. If Peruna was taken every time one has a cold or cough, chronic catarrh would be practically an unknown disease.

Miss Elizabeth Uber, No. 37 Bassett street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"I have always dreaded unsettled weather because of my extreme liability to catch cold, when a catarrhal trouble would quickly develop through my entire system, which it would take weeks to drive away. I am thankful to say that since I have taken PERUNA I do not have any reason to dread this anymore. If I have been at all exposed to the damp, wet or cold weather, I take a dose or two of PERUNA, and it throws out any hint of sickness from my system."—Miss Elizabeth Uber.

Mrs. M. J. Brink, No. 220 Michigan avenue, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"This past winter during the wet and cold weather I caught a sudden and severe cold, which developed a catarrhal condition through my entire system, and so affected my general health that I was completely broken down, and became nervous and hysterical and unfit to supervise my home. My physician prescribed for me, but somehow his medicine did me no good. Reading of PERUNA I decided to try it. After I had taken but three bottles I found myself in fine health."—Mrs. M. J. Brink.

Sibyl A. Hadley, 36 Main street, Huntington, Ind., writes: "Last winter after getting my feet wet I began to cough, which gradually grew worse until my throat was sore and raw. Ordinary remedies did not help me and cough remedies nauseated me. Reading an advertisement of what PERUNA could do, I decided to try a bottle, and you can imagine how glad I felt when it began to relieve me in a very short time. In less than two weeks I was completely cured."—Sibyl A. Hadley.

MISS SARA McGAHAN.

Miss Sara McGahan, No. 197 2d street, Albany, N. Y., writes:

"A few months ago I suffered with a severe attack of influenza, which nothing seemed to relieve. My hearing became bad, my eyes became irritated and feverish. Nothing seemed right and nothing I ate tasted good. I took PERUNA and within two weeks I was perfectly well."—Sara McGahan.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be glad to give you his valuable advice gratis.

How 1,000 Chicagoans
Got Well at My Risk.

On Jan. 11, 1903, I published in the Chicago papers the names and addresses of one thousand people in that city alone whom I had cured of chronic diseases in just the last six months.

Since then several thousand other Chicagoans have written for help. The offer I made to all of them is the offer I make to you.

Simply send me this coupon, or write me a postal stating which book you need. I will then mail you an order, good at any drug store for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month on trial. If it succeeds, the cost is $5.50 If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself. And your mere word shall decide it.

My Restorative is the remedy that cured those thousand people in one city in one-half year. And I have in my office the records of nearly 500,000 sick ones whom it has cured in the past twelve years.

And my Restorative is the only remedy so sure, even in difficult cases, that anyone dare offer it on terms like mine.

If you need help—whether the trouble is trifling or severe—you need the best help—this help.

The usual way for treating weak vital organs is to doctor the organs themselves. My way is to strengthen the inside nerves—to bring back the power that makes the organ do its duty. This nerve power alone operates the vital organs, and it is nerve weakness alone that makes the organ weak.

I treat the weakorgan like a weak engine—I give it the power to act. The result is always a cure, save when a cause like cancer makes a cure impossible. Such causes are so rare that I willingly take the risk.

CUT OUT THIS COUPON.

TAPS FROM THE WIRES.

Brantford.—The trial of Thomas Elliott, president of the Ontario Coal Dealers' Association, for conspiring to lessen the competition in the purchase and sale of coal, was brought to a conclusion by Justice Meredith, holding that the charge was proved. He advised appeal to settle the important matter fully.

Toronto.—John Walker, an old man was instantly killed by a team of runaway horses on the railway crossing at the foot of Yonge street Thursday afternoon. The body was badly mangled.

JUST WHAT YOU NEED.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets.

When you have no appetite.
When you have a bad taste in the mouth.
When your liver is torpid.
When your bowels are constipated.
When you have a headache.
When you feel bilious.

They will improve your appetite, cleanse and invigorate your stomach ,and regulate your liver and bowels. For sale by all druggists.

Children's Teeth.

Premature decay of the children's teeth is due more to constitutional defects or derangements than to any localised condition. It means that the teeth are not well organised because of defective nutritional processes which may or may not be hereditary. In either event treatment instituted early enough will help if not entirely stay the progress of the difficulty. To retard these processes is worth a good deal, while effectually to check them is a wealth of good. Give enough granular phosphate of soda, which may be well taken in milk, to keep the bowels open. Give also three times a day after food sirup of lactophosphate of lime. Dose for a child of five or six, one-half teaspoonful; for a child of ten, a teaspoonful, and for younger children in proportion.

Glassware.

An authority says that glassware will last longer and look better if the following hints as to its care and preservation are regarded: Tepid water, the best castile or other pure soap and a stiff brush are the first essentials. After washing and rinsing place the cut glass in boxwood sawdust. This will absorb the moisture in the cutting. Next remove the sawdust from the plain surfaces with a soft cloth. By following these directions the original clearness and sparkle of the glass will be maintained.

A Window Seat.

An acceptable window seat which most girls crave for their rooms starts with one of the low rattan seats without backs that may be bought at any shop offering an assortment of this ware. They come in different lengths, so that a little care in selection secures one to fit almost any window space. They may be left the natural color, or, preferably, stained to match the finish of the woodwork of the room. A loose cushion adds to their comfort, and a valance may be used if liked.

Good Health for Capital.

Maintaining good health is to the majority of people the most vital question in the world and nature affords no more efficient strengthener for the system and restorative for the nerves than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Naturally, gradually, and certainly it forms new, red corpuscles in the blood, creates new, healthy, nerve cells, and puts into the system the snap, energy and vitality that defies disease.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

An interlining of asbestus paper in the carving cloth or in doilies to use on polished tables will protect the table top.

A temporary relief for a squeaky door is to rub lard or butter on the parts that come in close contact with each other.

Our grandmothers used tansy leaves to aid in keeping moths out of clothing, and today they are just as effective as moth balls.

If lamp chimneys are held over steam for a few minutes, then polished with a dry cloth, they will not break so easily as when washed.

Before hemming tablecloths and napkins the edges should be cut perfectly straight. This can be accomplished easily by drawing a thread.

You can tell if a bed is damp by laying your hand glass between the sheets for a few moments. If the sheets are not properly dried, the glass will be clouded.

CLEAR THE WAY!

Men of thought! be up and starting,
Night and day;
Sow the seed—withdraw the curtain—
Clear the way!
Men of action, aid and cheer them
As ye may,
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a flower about to blow;
There's a midnight blackness changing
Into grey!
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Once the welcome light has broken,
Who shall say
What the unimagined glories
Of the day?
What the evil that shall perish
In its ray?
Aid the dawning, tongue and pen,
Aid it, hopes of honest men;
Aold it, paper—aid it, type—
Aid it, for the hour is ripe,
And our earnest must not slacken
Into play.
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!
Lo! a cloud's about to vanish
From the day;
And a brazen wrong to crumble
Into clay.

Lo! the fight's about to conquer,
Clear the way.
With the fight, shall many more
Enter, smiling, at the door;
With the giant Wrong shall fall
Many others, great and small,
That for ages long have held us
For their prey.
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

—Charles Mackay.

The Woman Peddler.

"Any woman who can talk at all," said a schoolteacher who had tried book canvassing and given it up in despair, "can interest a housekeeper in labor saving appliances. The woman who does her own housework will give attention to anything that will save her a pain in the back or aching arms. But she will not talk to men about such things. When I lost my place as teacher in a public school, I tried book peddling. Oh, the women I called upon would invite me in and talk to me readily enough. That was the trouble. They would tell me their family history and their troubles and then lead me to the door with the sorrowful assertion that they never had any time to read, they were so busy. So I gave up books and took up little time and labor saving articles in the way of egg beaters, potato parers, can openers and cheap little articles such as women seldom see except at food shows. A stove lifter is a most salable article. I keep watch for anything new in this direction and then go the rounds. I have several regular customers who bring me a good commission on things that I buy for their dining room and kitchen."—New York Times.

Scorched Goods.

What to do with scorched places on cloth is a question that sometimes puzzles the careful housewife. If the scorch is not too bad, dipping the article in soapsuds and hanging it in the sun for some hours will be likely to remove it. If the day is dull, hang the piece before a grate fire.

Scorched spots that are very bad and yet have not consumed the fiber of the goods are said to be restorable by repeated dippings in a saturated solution of borax. The saturated solution, as the chemists call it, consists of as much salt or crystal as the water will dissolve. It is always safe to put in a little extra. If the borax stands undisturbed in the bottom of the bottle, one is sure of the full strength solution. Repeated dippings of this, with exposure to sun or fire light, will remove what are by most housekeepers considered hopeless discolorations.

Sunshiny Women.

There is a charm which compensates so much for the lack of good looks that they are never missed, and when combined with good looks it doubly enhances them. The name of this charm is a sunshiny disposition. If things go wrong, as they will go once in awhile, does it mend matters to cry over them? Sensible women will say no, but women who do not know how to control themselves will say: "Yes, it does me good to cry. I feel better after it." There are times when tears must come, but these are beautiful, holy tears. Quite the contrary are the tears shed over selfish, petty annoyances "to relieve nerves." The grandest quality of the human mind is self control. Why? Because it is the mastery of the soul's divine nature over the body's human nature and therefore imparts that nobleness to the mind from which beauty gains its soul.

Bacon Grease.

Bacon grease, by the way, should never be thrown away, as it is useful in a variety of ways. Cabbage chopped very fine and boiled until tender is good seasoned with hot bacon grease poured over it after it has been put in a deep dish. Slices of bacon may be used to garnish this homely, but excellent, dish.

THE WELL BRED WOMAN.

She Is Marked by the Posture She Assumes When Sitting.

Nothing points out the well bred woman more quickly than the position she takes when she sits down. The stamp of vulgarity is marked upon the woman who sits with her knees spread far apart, lack of refinement is shown by knees crossed offensively, lack of ease by stiff and constrained position of the shoulders, a general carelessness and indifference by the very common fault of "sitting in the shoulders"—that is, of doubling the spine so that the upper part rather than the lower part of it rests against the back of the chair, says the New York Herald.

The body should be placed well back upon the seat, chair, sofa or whatever it may be. The feet should rest on the floor, one somewhat in front of the other, because it is easier to rise from that position. The head must be kept well up and the chest poised slightly forward.

The lower part of the spine may be pressed against the frame of the chair, but if one, after sitting awhile, should need to rest a little more the shoulders may also touch upon the same support. The hands should remain as they neutrally fall from this position, hanging at the side, or they may be placed easily over the arms or back of the chair or allowed to lie reposefully on the lap.

To rise properly from a correct sitting position there should be several preparatory movements.

The chest is first poised far forward, and at the same time the foot is drawn back under the seat. The foot drawn in should be the one opposite from the direction to be taken in starting up.

As you rise throw the weight firmly upon the foot in the rear. As the body comes to its full height change the weight to the forward foot, so that the other foot merely touches the floor very lightly. This brings you to a standing position, ready to walk easily in the direction you are going.

Ugly sitting position and awkward movements in rising will disappear if these principles are followed.

Combined Desk and Bookcase.

If you have books and a desk and no bookcase, it is an easy matter to evolve the latter. Make two upright rows of bookshelves far enough apart to allow the desk to be placed between them. Shut off the lower part of the shelves on each side with a door, which may be decorated with iron hinges or blackened metal. These false hinges are, of course, placed against the real ones on which the door swings and are purely ornamental. These little closets make fine places in which to keep unsightly books and magazines which look untidy, but which one always wants to keep. There is a shelf over the top of the desk, on which could be placed a row of plates or photographs, and a nice little etching would give interest to the big panel. This panel, by the way, need not be made of wood, but could be closed in by a piece of colored burlap or buckram. The case would then have to be braced by three slats of wood nailed across the back behind the buckram.—Harper's.

REST FOR TIRED MOTHERS.

How many babies wake up just about the mother's bedtime and keep her busy for a good part of the night. The mother may not see anything apparently the matter with the child, but she may depend upon it that when baby is cross and sleepless there is something wrong and the little one is taking the only means he has of telling it. Baby's Own Tablets will make him well and cheerful right away. There are no opiates in this medicine—they send baby to sleep, simply because they remove the cause of his sleeplessness and make him feel good and comfortable. The Tablets are good for children of all ages and they cure all the minor troubles of children. If you know a neighbour who is using the Tablets for her children ask her what she thinks of them, and we are sure she will tell you that they are the best medicine in the world for the little ones. Mrs. Jas. Levere, Spencerville, Ont., says, "I believe Baby's Own Tablets saved my baby's life, and I would not be without them."

The Otter in England.

The otter is having a hard life of it in England. A sporting journal says: In these strictly utilitarian days there are leagues for the suppression or encouragement of almost everything, but as yet there is no body which has taken up the cause of the otter, the prince of river poachers. The question arises, Is he worthy of protection? Certainly he helps himself to a large number of fish in the course of a year, and this alone has made him an odious beast to the unthinking angler. It is also true that he has a predilection for the fattest and biggest fish in our rivers and streams. Moreover, he is dainty in his feeding, and after taking a couple of good mouthfuls out of the back of his prey, he is generally content to leave the rest of the carcase to the rats to finish off. If we could only make some sort of compromise with the little brown or grey coated fellow by which he confined his depredations to the smaller fish, how happy we should all be. In trout streams he is ruthlessly hunted and slaughtered. In many parts of the country he is nearly extinct. Yet with it all, give him a few months' respite and back he comes, no one knows whence. One morning the ever-watchful keeper sees the tell-tale evidence of his misdeeds, and the otter's days are numbered. Close and steady watch is kept on his haunts, and one morning a report is heard. Those who hear it know that a charge of buckshot has ended the poacher's days.

The recent hard frost was fatal to several otters who, finding a greater difficulty in obtaining food, became too venturesome and paid the penalty with their lives. In the Gowy meadows, near Chester, no fewer than five were shot at close range, while two were clubbed to death near Lancaster.

Wash greasy dishes, pots or pans with Lever's Dry Soap a powder. It will remove the grease with the greatest ease. 26

M.P.'S WHO ARE DOUBLES.

Several Couples in the Dominion Parliament Who Bear a Very Strong Resemblance to Each Other.

Though nature never repeats a human face or figure, absolutely line for line, it would be strange indeed if there were not some startling resemblances. The House of Commons contains two hundred and thirteen members, and at least eight pairs of likenesses striking enough to be noted by the most casual observer.

First on the list is the likeness between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Talbot, M.P., who sits for Bellechasse. It cannot be said that they are as like as two peas, for they are not. Seen together they have many points of difference. The Premier is cast in a large mold; Talbot in a small one. The Premier's proportions are heroic; Talbot's are "what artists call academic.

Looks Like the King.

In a loyal colony there must be somebody of course who looks like His Gracious Majesty King Edward VII. This honor in the House of Commons goes by general consent to Ross of South Ontario. Ross, M.P., has the same pointed beard sprinkled with grey, the same contour of head, and arrangement of hair, the same dull blue eye that we associate with pictures of the King. He is a bit taller, but seen in his seat in the House, the resemblance is close enough to arouse lively feelings of homage. Ross, M.P., however, says that people take him often for Joseph Seagram than for King Edward, the reason being, of course, that Mr. Seagram is known to be doing business in this country, while His Majesty's business confines him chiefly to Great Britain. Mr. Ross has become so accustomed to compliments on his whiskers that he takes them as if they belonged to him. He has also given many anxious enquirers valuable tips as to what his horses may be expected to do at the spring meeting. Another representative of Royalty in the House is the Minister of Agriculture. Since the Royal visit last summer it has been generally recognized that Mr. Fisher is a "ringer" for the present Prince of Wales.

Pretty Nearly Dromios.

Another case, not of two Dromios, but pretty near it, is the likeness between the Minister of Militia and Harty of Kingston. Dr. Borden is a tall man, with a clean shaven upper lip and chin, and flowing whiskers. Mr. Harty is not so tall, more florid, but his arrangement of whiskers is the same, with the exception that his are more of the mutton-chop variety.

McCreary of Selkirk would pass for Dr. Montague before the ex-member for Haldimand shaved off his moustache. Mr. McCreary brings to the House the same fluency in debate and the same acquisition of general information that made Dr. Montague a prominent figure. The difference is that the member for Selkirk is "wid the Government, not agin' it."

The likeness between Emmerson of Westmoreland and the late Clarke Wallace has often been noticed. The ex-Premier of New Brunswick, however, goes in for soft hats, while the late member for West York largely affected the silk tile. Like Clarke Wallace, Emmerson, M.P., is a darkavised man, with a thick tangle of hair and a triste moustache.

Wright and Snetsinger.

Wright, who sits for South Renfrew, is such a good second for Snetsinger, who sat in the last Parliament for Stormont, that even the attendants of the House were deceived by the likeness. Mr. Wright has the flowing beard that went with the member for Stormont, and to complete the confusion he sits at the same desk that his prototype occupied two years ago." He has been taken, he says, at least a hundred times for Snetsinger of Stormont. He relates with a great deal of gusto the story of a commercial traveler who interviewed him one afternoon at the Windsor in Ottawa as Mr Snetsinger, and called on him the next afternoon at his office in Renfrew, and addressed him as Wright.

"You're wrong," said the member for South Renfrew.

"But you're Wright, aren't you?" asked the puzzled drummer.

"Don't you think I'm the wrong Mr. Wright? You know I was Snetsinger yesterday."

Then the explanations followed.

Ontario people who have seen the Minister of Finance have been pleased to detect a likeness between him and Sir William Ralph Meredith. Mr. Fielding is, of course, not as tall a man as the Chief Justice, but now that he is putting on flesh the resemblance is more marked than ever.

Like Joe Chamberlain.

They do say that W. F. Maclean affects a general likeness to Joseph Chamberlain, but until the member for East York is willing to adopt the monocle the likeness will not take anybody's breath away.

Fraser of Guysboro, the biggest man in the House next to Mackie of North Renfrew, is telling this story at the expense of the Red Chamber. In all fairness it must be said that the story refers to a period when the Senate didn't have as much young, new blood as it has now. It was some years ago that the member for Guysboro was showing an American visitor over the Parliament Buildings. The stranger had been introduced to No. 16, the smoking room, and other places of resort, and had seen the Commons in session from the Speaker's gallery.

"Now," said Fraser of Guysboro, "we will go and see the wax works,"

The American was taken to the gallery of the Red Chamber, and for some time looked down on the decorous but deliberate proceedings there. He was a sharp Yankee, and fell in with Fraser's joke.

"I say," he said, as they prepared to leave, "if you hadn't told me I'd have almost believed some of those fellows were alive."—H. F. G., in Toronto Star.

THERE'S HEALTH FOR YOU.

There's health for you in the dish of Malt Breakfast Food that you use at the morning meal. If you have dyspepsia ,indigestion or a deranged stomach, sure relief is found in Malt Breakfast Food, the only cereal food made according to nature's plans. The action of the Malt on the starch of the Wheat supplies the action in which the weakened stomach is defective, and the result is restored digestive vigour, regained health and growing strength. There is no other cereal food that goes so far to satisfy the needs of the body and brain. One package makes a meal for twenty-five people. Your grocer will strongly recommend Malt Breakfast Food.

Matching In Furnishings.

Too much matching is not considered desirable in house furnishing, as it is apt to result in a tiresome lack of variety. One authority says, "Anybody can match, but it takes a master hand to introduce the proper color touches and produce harmony."

MUNYON'S FREE DISTRIBUTION

10,000 Vials Of His Famous

RHEUMATISM CURE

TO BE GIVEN AWAY.

WILL BE DISTRIBUTED ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM THE OFFICE OF THE "EXAMINER."

Prof. Munyon Cordially Invites Physicians, Sceptics and Don't-believers to Take Advantage of this Offer and Report through the Newspapers of Peterborough.

THE DISTRIBUTION WILL COMMENCE PROMPTLY 9 A. M., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22ND.—FOR ONE DAY ONLY.

"No Punishment is too Severe for those who Deceive the Sick." —MUNYON.

"Six years ago I announced to the citizens of Peterborough that I had discovered a positive cure for Rheumatism, and to prove my assertion I distributed nearly 10,000 vials in the Province of Ontario. The name of each person who accepted a vial of this cure was taken and each person was invited to report through the medium of the newspapers the result of his experience with this remedy. It will be remembered that many hundreds of testimonials were published from people who declared most emphatically that this remedy had positively cured them. Many testify that three or four doses of these little sugar-coated pellets relieved them entirely from all pain. Affidavits were taken showing that one or two bottles had cured old chronic cases which had battled the skill of leading physicians in Canada.

"Notwithstanding these unimpeachable facts, there are thousands of people in Ontario to-day suffering from Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. They have tried so many remedies without benefit that they have little faith in anything they see advertised.

"It is to overcome the prejudice of this class of people that I have decided to make another free distribution of this cure. I want the public to know the truth about this specific. I want every physician, no matter how prejudiced he may be, to procure as many vials of this remedy as he may desire and make a thorough test of it. I know that it will relieve nearly all rheumatic pains in a few hours It does not put the disease to sleep; it drives it from the system. It enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the general health. The remedy has a larger sale throughout the civilized world than any other remedy. I emphatically state that this cure will do all that I claim for it. There is no 'Perhaps it will cure' or 'Guess it will cure,' but it cures and cures permanently.

"This distribution must not in any sense be considered a charity, but as a scientific investigation, which should interest the rich as well as the poor. If my Rheumatism Cure will do all that is claimed for it, then every physician should give it his endorsement and every sufferer should resort to its use. IMPERIAL LIFE.

A Year of Unexceptional Prosperity and Achievements.

Toronto • • The Executive Officials of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, report that the year just ended has been one of exceptional prosperity and achievements. It is a well known fact that the Imperial Life's past record has been unequalled in life assurance experience in Canada, but the most sanguine of its numerous policy-holders and active representatives throughout the Dominion will be surprised to learn of the following magnificent results:—Applications for assurances aggregated over $4,500,000; the policies actually issued exceeded the large amount of $4,000,000; each income totalled over $500,000; the accumulated assets reached $1,650,000, while the entire policies of assurance in force exceed $13,500,000. It was also stated that the interest income from investments was again more than sufficient to pay all of the death claims of the year.

SUCCESS CLUB'S DEBATE ON MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

They Discussed the Matter of Street Lighting Last Night.

The room in St. John's schoolhouse, where the regular meetings of the Success Club are held, was, last night, the scene of a very interesting debate. The subject was:—"Resolved that the proposition of the American Cereal Company, re electric lighting and the proposed street railway, as recently made to the Council, be accepted." The matter was well handled, considering the inexperience of the speakers, who advanced some excellent arguments. After a somewhat lengthy consideration the judges rendered a decision in favour of the negative. Each side was so confident of the successful presentation of it's view as to the judgment in this "electrical" matter of "current" municipal interest, that the result came as a great "shock" to the losers, who were completely "electrified," and considered the judgment to be of a very re-"volting" nature. The speakers were: — Affirmative. Messrs. Graham and Sawers; negative. Messrs. Bell and Harris.

THE NEW CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE CLUB.

First Quarterly Meeting Held—Officers Elected.

A Christian Temperance Club has been formed in connection with the Grace Sunday School and already boasts quite a number of members.

The Club which is called the "Blue Button Club," embraces mainly young folks, but there are also some grown up men and women. The first quarterly meeting of the Club was very successful and took place in the form of a programme on Thursday last, which was as follows:—

Gonophone selection ... ... W. Dredge
Recitation ... .Miss Hazel Pentland
Solo ... ...Miss Bertha Parnell
Address ... ...Rev. J. A. Wilson
Solo .... Mr. John Miller
Gonophone selections ....
Recitation ... ...' Miss Mabel Pringle

The object of the club was explained by Mr. Geo. W. Powell, and several young people signed the pledge and received their little button.

The officers of the Club are:
Hon. President—Mr. J. J. Hartley.
President—Walter Dredge.
1st Vice-President — Miss M. Datcher.
2nd Vice-President — Miss Marion Hilliard.
Secretary—Miss L. Higgins.
Treasurer—Mr. Geo. W. Powell.

After the programme had be run off Rev. J. A. Wilson spoke a few words on temperance, stating that the battle was in avoiding the first drink of intoxicating liquor.

The meeting then adjourned.

CONVENT PUPILS' ENTERTAINMENT.

Another Successful Presentation in the T. A. S. Hall.

Repetition of Thursday Night's Success—Thanks Returned for Favours Received.

Last night the entertainment given by the musical pupils of the Convent Congregation de Notre Dame in the T.A.S. Hall on Thursday evening, was repeated, and with all the success and enjoyment which characterized the first presentation of the programme. There was again a well filled hall, and the programme was gone through with excellent satisfaction to all concerned, instructors, pupils and public. It should be remarked that the programme unfortunately omitted the names of two pupils who contributed their share to the programme—Misses A. Hall and B. McDonald. Mr. and Mrs. Killin-Keough sang in duet, a selection, "The Guitar," which was rapturously applauded, and an encore so strongly demanded that they responded with "The Old Canoe," sung in camera, and with very pleasing effect. Among the pleasant little incidents added to the programme was the presentation to Miss Mabel Harrison, after her spirited performance of the Rhapsodie Hongroise, of a beautiful bouquet, handed to her by Miss Carrie White. Mrs. Killin-Keough was also similarly remembered.

The Convent authorities desire to extend their thanks to Rev. Dr. O'Brien, and the members of the T. A. S. for the use of their hall and other assistance and courtesies, and, especially, to the assisting artists and vocalists, Mr. and Mrs. Killin-Keough, Mr. Markle and Messrs. J. Wyer, F. Pope, W. Greenslade, J. Doris, A. R. Taylor and others, who in one way or other contributed to the success of the two evenings' entertainments. The Sisters very greatly appreciate the welcome services rendered with such graceful willingness.

REV. GEORGE RICHARDSON HAS PASSED AWAY,

His Death Occurred at Toronto on Thursday Night.

Rev. George Richardson, a retired Methodist clergyman, passed away at his residence, 54 Yorkville avenue, Toronto, Thursday night. Rev. Mr. Richardson had only been confined to his room about two weeks. Heart trouble was the cause of death. The deceased was widely known in Methodist church circles in Canada, having preached for over forty years in Cavan, Lindsay, and several other cities and towns in Ontario. He retired from the ministry about a year ago, but had since officiated occasionally in local Methodist churches. Rev. Mr. Richardson was born in Peterborough 69 years ago, and graduated from Victoria College. He leaves a wife and two sons, namely Dr. T. B. Richardson, of Carlton street, and Dr. G. A. Richardson, dentist, Bloor street, Toronto. The interment took place at Gardner cemetery, Cavan, Saturday morning.

Conductor Kelley's Train Lost Five Cars at Manchester.

No. 54, a mixed train running between Lindsay and Whitby, in charge of Conductor Bert. Kelley, met with an accident last night at 5.45 on the home trip. When passing through Manchester station, near Port Perry, at a pretty lively clip, a brake beam of a car broke, and as a result five cars were derailed, one being thrown against the station. The station was pretty badly wrecked, but the occupants escaped injury.

The auxiliary crew were despatched at 6 o'clock, and after a hard night's work returned at 10 this morning. The remainder of Conductor Kelley's train reached town about 4 o'clock this morning, and Conductor White's train arrived a half hour later.—Lindsay Post.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE SAMUEL WELSH.

The Interment Took Place at Hastings on Friday.

Numerous Floral Tributes. Large Attendance of Citizens and Friends.

The funeral of the late Samuel Welsh, of Hastings, took place in that village yesterday afternoon, and was very largely attended by the people of Hastings, and by friends of the deceased young man from outside places. The cortege left the home of the deceased's father, Mr. John Welsh, at 10 a.m., and proceeded to St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, where a service was held. The members of the Hastings lacrosse team attended in a body and carried the many very beautiful wreths and floral remembrances that came from sympathising friends and relatives. The employees of the Welsh tannery also walked in a body. The pall-bearers were Messrs. T. Coughlan, J. McCarthy, L. Gilchrist, T. E. Scriver, E. Wilcox and J. Coughlin. Interment took place at the Hastings Roman Catholic cemetery.

Amongst the many handsome floral remembrances that were received were wreaths from the T.A.S. Lacrosse Club, Peterborough, the Hastings Lacrosse Club, and the employees of the tannery. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Father McGuire, assisted by Rev. Dr. O'Brien of Peterborough.

Amongst those from Peterborough who were present at the funeral were three of the deceased's intimate friends, Messrs. J. Curry, W. Donovan and Art Scriver.

LACROSSE OUTLOOK IN PETERBOROUGH.

Many Players Who Have Located in Town.

The Athletics and the T. A. S. Will be Re-enforced—Where They Came From.

Yesterday the Examiner made reference to the general outlook of lacrosse in Peterborough, and the fact that a number of excellent players have of late settled in Peterborough. This fact, together with the fact that Peterborough possesses a great amount of home-brewed material, is a sufficient guarantee for the belief that there will be one or more speedy aggregations in Peterborough this summer.

Amongst the players that have located in Peterborough during the past few months, is Patterson, who is in the employ of the Bell Telephone Company. He has seen service on the Dufferins of Orangeville, and is said to be a splendid home man. The Athletics have secured him. Ketchem, formerly of Ottawa, (not of course the celebrated Capital player of some years ago,) will likely be found on the line up of the Athletics. He is employed at the Canadian General. Bill Cavanah, every one knows, can play hockey, but many, perhaps, are not aware of the fact that he is as great a tower of strength on the lacrosse field, as he is on the hockey ice. Bill will play with the Athletics; he will play on the defence, and the man who gets by him will have a time, to say the least. Jack Bowes, of Cresseman's, will play with the Athletics. He has seeen lacrosse played as it should be played, and will be an acquisition to the local forces. Best, of Brantford, who has been in town for more than a year, and who played with the Y.M.C.A., will play with the Athletics, as well as George Robertson, also of last year's Y.M.C.A. team, and who has played on Western Ontario teams. Amongst other players on the Athletics' line up will be Harry Morgan, Oscar Dumble, Roly Glover, Ed. Dillon, Geo. Mein, Harold Dunsford, McPherson, of the Bank of Montreal, A. W. McPherson, Watson, of the Bank of Montreal, Bill Galley, Chris. Graham and Terrot Glover. Altogether the Athletics have a fine lot of material to select from.

The T.A.S. team will have all but about three of last year's twelve, but they have plenty of new material in the shape of new comers to town, and promising juniors who can take the places of those who have left town. One of the best athletes who has struck town in recent years is Billy LaPierre, of Smith's Falls, who has secured work in Peterborough during the past three or four months. La Pierre has been playing with the Young Capitals of Ottawa, and other teams in the Ottawa district, and is also known as a first-class hockeyist. He will figure on the T.A.S. team. Tom Rappell, of Montreal, is now engaged with the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company, of town, and will play home for the T. A.S. He has played with the Shamrocks, and with city league teams in the Canadian metropolis, and is considered a fleecy home man. Alphonse Shannon, formerly the star of the Marmora team, which by the way had no mean reputation a few years ago, is a good stick handler, and is with the T.A.S. He has employment in the Canadian General. Joe Murphy of Ottawa, and Owen O'Neil, of Montreal, will also turn out with the boys.

Besides these and other new men the T.A.S. will have on its line up such men as Galley and Lou McCoy, Bill Meagher, Jim O'Brien, George Lynch, Jack McCabe, Jack Gorham, Fred McGrath, Will Crowley, H. Overend, Bert Doris, Ed. Mahoney, F. Derocher and other senior men. Besides these there are a great many juniors of last year who will be eligible for senior company. The T.A.S. will play on the Separate School grounds, which they are putting into excellent condition.

TRE LINDSAY COUNCIL WILL BUY A ROLLER.

They Will Also Have a Street Commissioner at a $600 Salary.

At the meeting of the Board of Works, of Lindsay, held Thursday night, the members adopted Alderman Cinnamon's advice, given at Monday night's session of the council and settled down to business with commendable earnestness. Before adjourning they made a record by deciding to purchase a fifteen ton steam roller, and Mr. J. B. McWilliams was selected out of nearly a dozen applicants to fill the responsible position of town commissioner, and to supervise the making of good roads with the improved machinery. The road roller is to cost $325, and the town commissioner's salary is placed at $600 per annum.

LATEST IN SPORTING CIRCLES

RUGBY.

The badges for the Peterborough Rugby 15, champions of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, have arrived, and may be had from the secretary of the club, at the Examiner.

* * * *

Referring to the action of the Peterborough Hockey Clubs in giving handsome donations to the Rugby Club, the Toronto Telegram says:

There's a nice little feeling of brotherliness extant among the sporting bodies of Peterborough, Ont. The football team quit last fall about $100 to the bad, and there was apparently no way out of the hole. But this spring when the hockey teams cashed in they both had balances on the right side of the ledger. And they reasoned among themselves, and said, "Lo, why should we revel in much wealth while our brothers starve. Let us to loosen.' And straightway they loosened. The Peterborough club voted $25 to the Rugby men, and the T.A.S. hockey club voted $15. And somehow these acts lead outsiders to believe that Peterborough is not such a bad sort of a place after all.

BASEBALL.

Representatives of the clubs in the Port Hope group will meet in the Queen's Hotel in that town on Friday evening next to draw up a schedule.

* * * *

The Havelock Standard says: The baseball club's supplies have arrived and practice has been held several times lately. Efforts are being made to form a league with Tweed and Peterborough for the coming ball season.

LACROSSE.

The Athletics will meet on Monday night.

Lowney's Chocolates—purity and excellence the highest—at Ormond & Walsh's drug store, in bulk, 50c per lb.

HIS ARM HURT.

Mr. Leonard Paterson Receives Serious Injury.

A most painful and unfortunate accident happened to Mr. Leonard Paterson at the Canadian General Works yesterday afternoon. It transpires that while running a milling machine the saw caught his left arm, cutting through the first bone. It is said that four attendants fainted at the sight. Mr. Paterson's father was immediately summoned and took his son home in a cab. Mr. Paterson is a very popular young man and it is hoped that his arm will not be seriously affected.

POLICE COURT.

There was considerable excitement at the Police Court this morning before Police Magistrate Dumble ,over the several cases.

William Stevenson was charged with cruelty to animals.

Mr. Hughes-Charl testified that he had seen accused driving a horse through the streets with just the harness on, Thursday 16th, whipping it most unmercifully, and seemingly taking a pleasure in the cruel act. He was fined $5.

A man was charged with vagrancy. The accused said he had only just come to Peterborough and was making for Bobcaygeon. The Police Magistrate told him the sooner he got in that place the better, as he was not wanted in town.

A man was charged with abusing another in the public streets. The case was dismissed, as neither could prove anything and both had sworn directly opposite statements.

A woman also laid a complaint that she had on Wednesday last been assaulted by her husband, who had since left her and gone, she knew not where. It was a very sad case, but the Police Magistrate said he regretted being unable to do anything in the matter.

The Court then adjourned.

An Aching Back.

Is the first indication of kidney disease, and should be taken as a signal of danger—a warning to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills while yet there is time to avoid the dreadful pains and certain fatality of this terrible disease. There is no guess work, no experimenting when you use this prescription. It brings relief to a sore back in six hours. It is because of its combined action of liver and kidneys, cures complicated cases which cannot be reached by any ordinary treatment.

We Must Move Them.

If you have any idea of the trouble and expense of moving granite and marble monuments and tombstones, you will understand our anxiety to sell what you see standing in our yard rather than have to move them to another stand. Our landlord is preparing to erect a new brick block on our corner, and rather than move our stock, we are asking but a fraction of what our monuments are worth to save moving. A BAD ACCIDENT.

Team ran Away With a Harrow—One Horse Badly Injured.

On Thursday last a team of horses belonging to Mr. Thomas Lowes, of Emily Towaship, ran away with a set of harrows. During their run the harrows upset and one of the horses got entangled, the sharp teeth literally tearing the beast's leg almost to pieces. Dr. Johnston, the well know local veterinary surgeon, was summoned and tended the wounds of the poor animal. The doctor is unable to say whether the animal will live through many days. The team must have had some reason to bolt; often a runaway is caused by the carelessness of the driver, often through fright. Whatever the cause of this, the owner will suffer considerable loss.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

BICYCLE BELLS are insisted upon by the bylaw of the Council which the police have recently had brought to the attention of the public through the press. The bylaw is all right in its intention, but will it be enforced or will it be added to the dormant by-laws and regulations which now sleep neglected and ignored in dusty pigeon holes? It may, if precedent is used as a basis of judgment, be enforced a few times, with a "new broom" zeal—a few unfortunates—an errand boy or a shop girl—who break the bylaw may be fined; then the law will lapse into desuetude and the few will have been made to suffer while the great masses will go free.

MULTIPLICATION of laws and bylaws which are not enforced have an evil tendency—to provoke disrespect for law, as a child lacks obedience whose mother is perpetually threatening dire punishment without inflicting it. We have cartloads of bylaws that are not applied — laws that are not fully enforced. A shrewd observer who claims to have paid attention asserts that there are more dogs in town which have not paid taxes than there are dogs which have paid for a license to live, and make night hideous, with howling and which break weary mothers of more sleep than their teething babies.

THERE'S A BY-LAW against catapults. Is there a case in record of a breach of this bylaw having been punished? Yet there are thousands in use every day, destroying bird life and giving noxious insects a free hand with our fruits and vegetables —to the extent to which their enemies, the birds, are destroyed.

THERE IS A LAW AGAINST robbing the nests of insectiverous birds, yet this very day scores of boys have their keen young eyes directed to the places where the nests are to be found and their supple limbs are used to climb the trees and take away and destroy the eggs so far as reproducing birds are concerned; and possibly and probably, while one boy is breaking up the nest another boy is catapulting the parent bird into bird oblivium. The police had better keep their eye on lads of this kind. They will do more good than gobbling up a stray bicycle rider without a bell on his machine. Only about one wheelman in forty is reckless enough to require such a bylaw.

NONE TOO SOON, has come the action of the Education Department to introduce and encourage nature studies in our schools. Exclusive attention to mental training may expand the mind, but it tends to dwarf the soul, and make hard, material natures — to whom the finer sentiments of beauty do not readily appeal. After all, without aiming at metaphysical exactness, the soul is the man, and the mind only an agent of expression, and we should not do anything to develop the mind at the expense of the soul. We don't pay enough attention to cultivating the instinct of beauty in our schools and our homes. Do mothers and teachers try enough to instil into the souls of children the sense of the beauty of trees, flowers and birds, the symbols of the most beautiful and refining things in the world? Do mothers and teachers even tell the children of the aesthetic and moral wickedness of destroying birds, especially in the nesting season? Do they tell them how young birds robbed of their mothers suffer untold agonies and die from slow starvation? Do they even impress the fact that the lust for killing things is a survival of the instinct of our savage state, a counterpart of the same lust in the brute? Do they teach them by precept upon precept, the beauty, the usefulness of trees, birds and flowers? Yet to mothers and teachers falls the duty of making the coming generation better men and women, merciful, tender and humane; with a higher worship than the worship of sordid gain-getting; with something like the spirit of worship of the Ancient Mariner:

He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things, both great and small.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH is a supreme consideration. Do we all — does the Board of Health — rise to an appreciation of its importance? Do our physicians realize their duty? Can it be a fact that a physician can, as reported, have been so remiss in his duty as to take a course tending to spread, rather than confine, contagious diseases? The Board of Health has been fighting manfully all winter to keep the scourge within bounds. With all precautions, the disease has stayed with us till our hospitals are over-taxed with patients, and accommodation has to be enlarged. This will continue, if the lapse referred to is allowed to go undealt with. Nothing but stern measures of repression will satisfy the people, with children to die and homes to be blighted. No personal consideration should be allowed to interfere with the most drastic measures the Health Authorities can, and should, adopt. "All that a man hath will he give for his life."

An Architectural Curiosity.

There are many churches throughout England which are without tower or spire, but there are few churches which can boast of having a tower and spire side by side. One of these is the parish church of Ormskirk in Lancashire. The tower is built over the porch at the west end, and the spire is placed as closely as possible to it. The origin of this architectural freak has not been ascertained, but there is a tradition to the effect that when Orme, the Saxon pirate from whom the town derives its name, decided to construct a kirk, or church, as an expiatory offering for his evil deeds his two daughters quarreled over the design for the structure. One determined to have a tower, the other was equally resolved to have a steeple.

As neither of them would give way the pirate chief acceded to both their wishes, and the curious may see the tower and spire still keeping watch side by side on the surrounding country.

"FRAE EVERLASTIN' "TAE EVERLASTIN.'

Touching Story Told by a Peterborough "Old Boy."

A Tale of the Kindly Hearts and Simple Faith of Early Dummer Days.

(By Llewellyn A. Morrison.)

I have been engaged for several years in professional work (Engineering) in the eastern part of the County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario, and in passing to and fro from railway connections have usually had to cross the Township of Dummer, where I was born and spent my boyhood days on a rough farm, many reminiscences of events and happenings that had long since faded from my recollection are revived by the re-association with places and people so intimately known forty years ago. It is not however, of one of these re-animated memories I now write, but of one that through the years since it occurred has many and many a time brought the thankful tears.

I remember on a frosty, mid-winter morning having my mother say to me at the early breakfast: "My boy, I want you to hurry with the chores this morning so that you will get away to school in time to go on to Granny Buchanan's with a basket of food. I am afraid the old woman may be snowed in and not have plenty to eat. I can't get her out of my mind all the morning."

I hurried through with the chores. Mother tied the basket on my handsleigh, gave me a kiss and a kind message to Granny, and I started off for a three-mile run before school time. The old Scotch woman to whom the basket was being taken, lived near the road-side in a log shanty, mud-plastered, which had been built to shelter her and an imbecile, crippled son, "Daft Jock," by by the neighbours when her bread winner had died.

These neighbours usually turned out for a day every fall and not only provided plenty of wood for the long winter, but brought a supply of potatoes and other necessaries. Every now and then some of them made it a point to run in for a few minutes with additions of meat at the "killing time," bread, flour, etc., yet it often happened that amid their own poverty and hardship, Granny's larder and cellar were overlooked and many stories were told of the good things she prayed out of the neighbours' houses. On the morning of my story I duly reached the roadside opposite the little, trough-covered shack, but found no mark of footsteps through the five rods of deep snow to the doorstep. Untying my basket and putting the sleigh at one side out of the way of passing teams, I quickly kicked a way through the snow to the door, against which the snow was drifted higher than my head, but being light I soon cleared it way. I then pulled the latch-string to enter but found the door barred on the inside. I rapped with my mittened had but got no answer; then with my bare hand and moccasined foot. During all this time I could hear sounds as of some one talking or reading in a sort of a sing-song monotone within. Then it ceased and I heard a noise as of someone taking out the bar. Slowly the door opened a few inches so as not to admit too much cold, and opposite the narrow opening came the little, old, wrinkled, kindly face of "Granny."

"Hey, ma laddie, but ger' oot early this cauld morn; whause laddie aur ye?" "I'm Mrs Morrison's boy and my mother sent you a basketfull of stuff. I have it here, and she said she hoped you were well."

"May the dear kind God bless ye, ma bonnie bairn and yer sweet mither. It is just like her no to forget Granny. I did na' hae a bite i' th' hoose, and I wer' jes' tellin' ma dear Heavenly Faither when ye cam' that I wer' oot o' everythin this bitter morn, an' that I wer' at His mercy, but ah! His mercy is frae everlastin' to everlastin'. Com' ben ma bonnie boy and warm yersl' at Granny's fire."

All the while as she laid one little parcel after another out of the basket, she kept saying, "Ah, bless the Lord; His mercy is frae everlastin' tae everlastin'." Then she sat down in her little old, wooden rocking chair and reaching out her hands to me as I stood before the open fire place, said, "Cum here, ma braw laddie, an' receive Granny's blessin'. Tak' off yer cap an' kneel doun at ma' knee." A strange reverence took possession of my heart as I trembling obeyed. The sweet face circled by the double white frill of the close fitting cap, which older women wore in those days, comes distinctly before me at this moment, as I saw it, looking up from where I knelt at her feet.

She laid her hands upon my head, and lifting her face, that appeared to my boyish fancy to shine with a wonderful beauty such as I had seen only in pictures, and closing her eyes she seemed to talk with God:

"Dear Faither, tak' this bonnie boy; keep him an' use him for the glory everlastin'; mak' him a blessing tae thine own sel'; gie him a croon o' staurs. Haud him by Thy own right han' till He cometh as a King. For Jesus sake."

It was over in a moment and I was gone. Ah, me; I remember the sacred awe that rested upon me for many days. I was but a lad of seven yet I never in the after years went past where her rude home was without feeling that she had gone to a better one, and thinking again of that bitter morning when she blessed me. I believe if I shall have gleaned some sheaves for the "home going," or garnered some "stars for the Crooning time," there shall be a large margin in it all for the dear old Scotch saint who pinned me fast to the "Everlastin'" by the lowly fireside in her little log cabin in the wdods.

"SUNDAY AT HOME."

Toronto, Ont.

The First American Book.

It is a remarkable fact that in a year after the first printing press was established in Cambridge, Mass., or in 1640, an American book was issued from it (being the first published in what are now the United States), which was soon after reprinted in England, where it passed through no less than eighteen editions, the last being issued in 1754, thus maintaining a hold on English popularity for 114 years. This was the "Bay Psalm Book." It passed through twenty-two editions in Scotland, where it was extensively known, the last bearing date 1759, and as it was reprinted without the compiler enjoying pecuniary benefit from its sale we have irrefutable proof that England pirated the first American book, being in reality the original aggressor in this line. This first American work enjoyed a more lasting reputation and had a wider circulation than any volume since of American origin, having passed in all through seventy editions, a very remarkable number for the age in which it flourished.

KEEP A CHEERFUL MIND.

Not Only When Things Go Well, but When You Meet Disaster.

To be cheerful when the world is going well with you is no great virtue. The thing is to be cheerful under disadvantageous circumstances. If one has lost money, if business prospects fail, if enemies appear triumphant, if there is sickness of self or those dear to one, then is it indeed a virtue to be cheerful. When poverty pinches day after day, month after month or through the years as they pass and one has ever to deny self of every little longed for luxury and the puzzle of how to make a dollar do the work for two has to be solved, then the man who can still be cheerful is a hero. He is a greater hero than the soldier who faces the cannon's mouth. Such cheerfulness is the kind that we need to cultivate.

To acquire this self command we need to think of many things. We need to guard against giving way to irritation about little things. If we can maintain self control in small matters, we shall have less difficulty in maintaining it when great matters are to be met. If we meet with irreparable losses, we must readjust our lives to fit the new conditions. There is no great evil so bad but that it might have been worse. Let us congratulate ourselves that the worst is not yet. There is truth in the saying that "every cloud has a silver lining." Though it may for a time look so dark we can see no glint of the silver, yet we know it is there.

Duty of Grip Sufferers.

It is now universally realised that grip is contagious. Many persons are still disposed to treat it lightly. Their heedlessness is liable to spread a malady which too often develops into pneumonia, whose fatality this season is unprecedented. Grip sufferers should neither receive nor pay visits, and to whatever degree they are able to detach themselves from the rest of the community they should remain detached until their influenza symptoms have disappeared. Unfortunately, a large portion of the American people cannot follow such advice. Those who can are inexcusable for refusing to take it.

Powley's Liquified Ozone—The Only Internal Germ Killer

If you suffer from a germ trouble and will try Powley's Liquified Ozone we will furnish the first bottle free. We do this to save delay—to convince you at once and forever that Ozone does kill germs. We do it to help you who need help, and then to induce you to tell your friends about it.

Just Oxygen

Powley's Liquified Ozone is nothing but oxygen—not a drug of any kind in it. It is the discovery of a chemist who spent 20 years in learning how to get oxygen, in staple form, into the blood. The process of making requires immense apparatus and 14 days' time. The result is a liquid which charges the blood with such an excess of oxygen that no germ can live where that blood goes.

Ozone solves the great problem of killing germs in the body without killing the tissues too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine can never reach the cause of a germ trouble. Ozone kills them with oxygen—a tonic to you—the very source of vitality. But germs are vegetable and this excess of oxygen, while the very life of an animal, is deadly to vegetable matter. This fact seems a provision of nature to protect man against germs.

Kills all Germs

We offer $1,000 to the physician or scientist who discovers a disease germ that Ozone cannot kill. Such a germ has never yet been discovered. Powley's Liquified Ozone is certain destruction to germs, and the result is inevitable. A germ disease must end and forever when the cause is killed. And all the skill in the world cannot cure a germ trouble while the germs still live.

Germ Diseases

Every disease in this list is a known germ disease. Ozone has cured each of these diseases at least several hundred times—some of them thousands of times. We know from this vast experience that Ozone can be relied on in all of them. Medicine cures some of them sometimes, by aiding nature to overcome the germs, but those results are indirect and uncertain. Ozone attacks the disease directly and the results are inevitable.

B. & F. BIBLE SOCIETY

THE BIBLE THE LARGEST CIRCULATED BOOK IN THE WORLD.

Remarkable Work Done by the British and Foreign Bible Society, Which Has Just Celebrated Its Centenary—Printed in a Babel of Tongues—Society's Small Beginnings—Its Circulation Agents.

Of all the books that season by season are poured out from the teeming presses of the world to feed the voracious appetite of the reading public, about one out of three survives a three years' term of life. Of all the books that have ever created a record "boom" few have reached a sale beyond 500,000 copies, and that is enough to make any publisher gasp with a kind of unholy joy, as of a poor man who suddenly finds himself in the presence of a gold mine.

Yet there is one book whose sales are recorded in figures which are almost greater than the average human mind can grasp without a mental dizziness, which has circulated not by the ordinary thirteen to the dozen, not by hundreds, not by thousands, not by millions, but by a book so popular that it is read in the palace, in the manor, in the villa, in the cottage, in the hovel, in the prison; a book so fascinating that men have given their lives to sell copies to others who have not yet read it.

It is a book of no local interest, but it so stirs the heart, whether it beats beneath a white or black or yellow skin, that it has been translated not only into every European language, not only into the chief families of languages spoken by the great races of the East and West, but into strange barbaric tongues, which have never before been crystallized into written shape, into dialects spoken in the bush and in the jungle, in the torrid zones, and in the Arctic regions.

Small Beginnings.

A century ago "about three hundred respectable persons of different denominations" assembled in the old London Tavern at Bishopsgate. Although the country at that time was in a panic and arming itself to the teeth at the prospect of a great French invasion, these "respectable persons" were busy with a work of peace. On that day the British and Foreign Bible Society came into existence. Granville Sharp was in the chair, William Wilberforce was the orator, and Zachary Macaulay was on the first committee—three brothers in arms who were to win the greatest victory of peace in the annals of our country—the emancipation of the slave—and who were equally zealous in this work of faith.

First in Welsh.

The first task of the Bible Society was to issue a large edition of the Scriptures in Welsh, so that the Welsh people who had hardly been able to obtain them in their own tongue might now have the privilege for which many pious people had long yearned. An eye-witness has described the reception of these Welsh New Testaments when completed in the town of Bala: "When the arrival of the cart which carried the first load was announced the Welsh peasants went out in crowds to meet it, welcomed it as the Israelites did the ark of old, drew it into the town, and eagerly bore off every copy as rapidly as they could be dispersed."

The First Year's Work.

During the first year's work of the Bible Society they spent £601, and thought they had done a great thing. So they had, but they were to do more. Last year they spent £241,148, and since the foundation of the society they have expended £18,000,000. These are large figures, but when translated into numbers of books they are bigger still. The society last year issued over five million copies of the Scriptures, and since its commencement a total of one hundred and eighty millions. Think of it! Ponder over it! 180,000,000. Seven thousand volumes are sent out from London every day of the week, through every week of the year. The output from all the society's depots, including London, averages 16,000 copies per day. Pile up the issues of one day and they would reach higher than the cross on St. Paul's.

A Babel of Tongues.

Where do all these Bibles and Testaments go? Who buys them? Who reads them? Who pays for them? The answers to these questions are a chapter of modern romance. To know where they go, pay a visit to the packing rooms of the society's depot in Queen Victoria street, London. It is a lesson in geography. The oblong wooden boxes, lined and strongly bound with tin, are labelled with names of places "over the hills and far away"—names which conjure up the glamor of the East, names which bring back memories of old renown and ancient faiths, names which call up visions of horrid bloodshed and dark fanaticism, names of the New World and the Old, of the East and of the West, of the civilized world and of savage lands.

Look inside the covers of these books. What a babel of tongues is here! What strange and unfamiliar characters! Here are pages that read from right to left, from the last line upwards to the first, from the top straight down in vertical columns. Here are 60 different alphabets and two hundred different languages. These little books, penny Testaments and tenpenny Bibles represent the work of hundreds of scholars and hundreds of missionaries and hundreds of natives who throughout the course of a century, in the service of the Bible Society and with the zeal of faith, have translated with painful labor the long tale of the Scriptures.

How They Are Circulated.

And how are these books circulated, how paid for? As a rule Scriptures are granted to Foreign Missions on "missionary terms"—that is to say, the Bible Society sends out the books needed, free of cost and carriage paid, to missionaries at their distant stations; in return the missions remit to the Bible House any proceeds arising from copies which they sell after deducting the expenses of circulation. Only a small proportion of the huge cost of production is received back by sales. To take one instance, each copy of the first Ganda Bible for the people of Uganda, who now number 30,000 Christians, cost the society 6s. 4d. to print and bind, and 10s. 4d. more to convey from London to Uganda—the carriage for hundreds of miles from the coast being on the heads of negro porters. The natives paid their fraction of the cost of these copies in cowrie shells—which do not go very far when translated into English money!

The Bible Society goes on extending its business, cheerfully piling up enormous losses. The greater the losses the more the society is pleased, because it means that Bibles are having a larger circulation among very poor peoples. Nevertheless the society does not encourage giving the volumes indiscriminately free of charge, except in cases of destitution or misfortune. The average man who makes a little self-sacrifice to buy his Bible values it all the more.

Mission to Sell the Scriptures.

All over the world the society has its agents, its colporteurs, its Bible-women. They are not missionaries in the ordinary sense of the word, they are forbidden to preach or teach any creed of any denomination. Their duty is to sell the Scriptures, and in this faith they wander to the uttermost parts of the earth with their little book. Among the Arabs of Morocco, along the valley of the Tigris and in the footsteps of St. Paul, along the highland borders of Tibet, over the Russian steppes, through Siberian snows, among the lumber camps of Ottawa, among the Australian aborigines, in the heart of Darkest Africa, among the people of every race of mankind, the agents of the Bible Society find their way and sell their books.

Martyrdom Is in It.

It is hard work, and martyrdom is sometimes the end of it. But though they may be scorned, beaten, tortured, frozen, starved, killed, the sacred little book is sold, and keeps on selling, one copy being like a grain of mustard-seed, so that where one has been thousands follow. Yet though the Bible Society has circulated one hundred and eighty millions of the Scriptures in languages spoken by seven-tenths of the population of the world, the circulation will increase by leaps and bounds when it reaches those other three-tenths, who represent some four hundred and fifty millions of people, into whose speech no portion of the Scriptures has yet been translated. There is plenty of work to be done, therefore, and much money needed to do it.

At the inaugural meeting to begin its Centenary celebration, the society asked for 250,000 guineas "to meet urgent and pressing claims of expansion."—London Mail.

A Gentle but Effective Laxative; not a Cathartic

FOREST GARDENERS.

Many of the Nuts and Seeds Buried by the Squirrels Are Forgotten by Them and Grow to Trees.

"Has it ever occurred to you who are the real gardeners of the forest?" asked an old friend of the High Park squirrels, as reported in The Toronto Globe. "I never heard a theory propounded that animals plant trees, but from what I have observed during ten years of friendship with the park squirrels I am satisfied they, and not the acorn, are father to the oak. Whether a squirrel plants trees impelled by instinct I am not prepared to say. Their industry may be explained by a less far-fetched theory. Observe any squirrel during nutting time and see how busy he is in laying in a stock of provisions for winter. Bushels and bushels of acorns and nuts are gathered by the little fellows and stored in the hollows of trees and in other accessible nooks. When these are filled the squirrel buries his treasures in the ground. Busily, like a streak of lightning, he whisks about under oaks, picking acorns and burying them in the ground in a thousand and one spots. From sunrise to sunset he and his mates are busy storing away the precious winter supply.

"The buried nuts are the first consumed by the wise little animal, who knows a time will come soon when the ground will be frozen hard and covered with snow, after which the supply tucked away in tree hollows must be depended upon. Doubtless many of the acorns buried by the little planter are forgotten. Others are covered under snow before he has a chance to dig them out. In either case, an acorn has been planted as delicately as if by hand of man, and only the thaw of the ground and the warm spring sunshine are needed to coax forth the oak.

"What takes place in the park doubtless happens in woods and forests all over the globe. Frequently, gardening experts say, young nut trees are found peeping out of the ground in early spring too far from any parent tree to account for wind having borne the heavy kernel on its wings. Similarly, exterminate the squirrels in any section of woods and the tree planting practically ceases. It is a well-known fact that seeds of plants frequently become lodged in the furs of wild animals only to be shaken off and to take root at some point far distant. But the planter-squirrel, I think, I discovered myself.

"It is a wonderful thing when you come to consider what part the tiny, bushy-tailed animals may have played in the history of our country. Perhaps the majestic ships that plough the seas—maybe even the old, famous men-of-war—owe their existence primarily to the little paws of the soft-furred, soft-eyed little animals."

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Does a Happy Work for our Women in Springtime

It Makes Them Strong, Vigorous, Vivacious and Bright.

Let us reason together dear reader if you are one of the many plodding along from day to day, weary, worn, exhausted and anxious. If you are sleepless, nervous, despondent, rheumatic, neuralgic or burdened with any of the spring ills that result from foul and impoverished blood, let us give you the positive assurance of certain and speedy cure. Paine's Celery Compound, nature's true spring medicine is what you need to prepare you for the joys and pleasures of life; nothing else can give you the blessings you so earnestly pray for. Its use means perfect freedom from the grave sufferings and perils that must come later, if you waste precious time. Miss Lizzie Muir, Quyon, P. Q., says:—

"After suffering from dyspepsia for fifteen years and meeting with many failures with other medicines, I decided to use Paine's Celery Compound, having heard of so many cures by its use. The compound, after I had used it for a time, produced miraculous results and banished all my troubles. From a condition of helplessness—being unable to sleep or eat—I now feel well and strong. I am astonished at the results, as my trouble was an old and chronic one.'

Broom For Woodwork.

I wish to describe a covered broom for sweeping hardwood floors and dusting woodwork. Get a sheep pelt from the tanner, cut a case to loosely fit a broom. Avoid seams across bottom by holding the pelt and marking the pattern. Overcast the seams with strong thread. After first seam turn the case, sew the second seam from inside and when finished pull over the broom. Fasten by wrapping around the handle. If you wish dry or damp cloths, tie them around the broom. When cleaning the case, let it remain on the broom. Use plenty of soap and water. —Exchange.

Dusting.

It is no use whatever to dust with a feather duster if the object in view is really the removal of dust. The feathers merely scatter fine particles abroad, which would be much less injurious if permitted to remain on the original articles. Always employ a soft cloth, shaking it at frequent intervals. If something else is really needed to relieve the monotony of continual stooping, a lamb's wool duster is the best possible substitute.

IN THE SPRING

Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets—They Enable Nature to Right Itself and Thus Dispose of the Objectionable Lassitude Naturally and for Good.

You know it's Spring. That tired feeling tells you that. You are not sick but you have little inclination to eat and still less to work. You just want to do nothing and feel miserable.

Do you know why? Do you know that the stomach has been working hard with fatty food all winter supplying the different parts of the body with both heat and food—that the stomach's work is doubled in the winter?

Do you know that the stomach after its double work is tired? That when tired it fails in its duty of supplying the different parts of the body with food. That when the parts do not get food they are starved and weak.

Your stomach needs help! It needs Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will digest the food while the stomach rests. They will not only ensure a food supply to the starved organs and muscles, but they will rest the stomach and put it in shape to do its work well. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are what the stomach needs in the spring time. They are a natural cure because they enable the body to right itself. When the body is right there can be no weary, dispiriting spring feelings.

CANADIAN FISCAL NOTES.

New Sets for the Yukon Territorial Courts and Dawson Mining Court.

There are two new sets of Canadian fiscals to chronicle, necessitated by the establishment of two new courts in the far-off territory of Yukon. In the development of that mining district, it became desirable to institute new local machinery for the prompt settlement of claims, instead of referring disputes to Ottawa. One of these is the Yukon Territorial Court, having general jurisdiction, the other the Dawson Mining Court, occupying itself more particularly with mining claims. The fees imposed by both courts are represented by revenue stamps affixed to the papers filed, and each court has a separate series. Each series consists of six values, 10, 25 and 50 cents, and $1, $2 and $3, all of one general design and color, but with varied frames. In the former series, which are steel blue stamps, the central vignette is a seated figure of Justice. Above the figure is the title "Yukon Territorial Court Law Stamp," below is the value. The stamps are rectangular, 38mm. high by 25mm. wide, printed on yellowish white wove paper, and perforated 12, like other Canadian issues.

The other set is very similar in design and execution; the central design is the figure of a miner, with a pack on his back, examining a specimen. The legend above the figure is. "Dawson Mining Court Law Stamp," with the value in words and figures below. The color is scarlet vermillion and in size they approximate the set first described, being, however, 1mm. higher. The general effect of both designs is vigorous and pleasing.

These two sets will doubtless be scarce for some time to come, though they can probably be obtained unused at face in Dawson. So long as the documents on which they are used have any legal value the cancelled stamps cannot be removed from them.—Ottawa, March 2, 1903. Philatelic Era.

Amusing Top That Any Boy Can Make.

Push a pin half way through a green pea, making the two ends as nearly as possible the same weight—i.e., let the point come a little more than half way through. Then break off the stem of a common clay pipe and the toy will be completed. To make the pea dance put it on top of the pipe stem, the point of the pin sticking down the bore.

Throw your head back with the pipe in your mouth, so that the stem may be held vertically, and blow gently. This will make the pea rise. Keep blowing harder until the pea rises entirely from the pipe and is supported in the air. It will now begin to spin round and round and turn over and over, all the while bobbing up and down as long as the current of air is kept up. The dance may be changed by pushing the pin up to the head.

The pea will now rise to the top of the pipe and dance slowly and with great dignity around the edge, or, if the blast is a little stronger, it will spin rapidly unless the blower stops to laugh, when it is likely to fall upon the open mouth below.

Notes For the Nervous.

If a woman is inclined to "nerves," she should bring all her common sense to bear upon the case and try her level best to live consistently—that is, if she is weak and inclined to irritability, let her, as far as possible, avoid the things which irritate her. This may seem selfish, but it is the purest charity, and the end justifies the means.

The nervous person requires more sleep than one in health, and furthermore she should rest when she feels so inclined, and rest should be properly taken. The room should be thoroughly ventilated with a constant free circulation of air both day and night.

Then on a firm, hard bed—avoid the feather bed as you would poison—milady may rest in peace. She will, of course, use no pillow or, if she must, just the tiniest one, and she will lie most of the time on the right side unless she can cultivate the habit of lying flat on her back all night, which is the best position to take.

A MINE ON FIRE.

Theme for the Descriptive Writer Stamped Because of Dollars.

When the Dominion Coal Company's mines in Cape Breton caught fire the other day the newspaper correspondents had no time for going into picturesque details. They knew that the people who were most interested were the investing public, the men who had put good money into Dominion Coal, the men who were keeping the telephone wires hot with enquiries to the newspaper offices. A million tons of coal on fire, or possibly on fire miles under the sea, was something for the descriptive writer to handle, but the descriptive writer is at a discount when millions of dollars are concerned, says Day by Day in The News, Toronto.

The Later Thought.

And yet there was that in the telegraphed despatch that brought some men back in fancy to those great submarine workings, where the galleries stretch for miles and miles, wide, spacious, in many places, and always well lighted. The better the light, the more coal the miners are able to blast out in a day. There would be no saving in keeping the galleries gloomy or the air bad, for no man can work well in the dark, and no man can work at all, for any protracted time, in vitiated air. And so the big pumps force fresh air through all the workings and the men, with the exception of the pallor that comes to any human who is denied the healthy sunlight, seem to thrive. Down beneath the sea, too, are horses, some hundred and fifty of them, which spend, perhaps, six months at a time in the mine. They have the trolley loads of coal, and they never leave the lower levels until the veterinary employed by the company decides that they need a trip to the surface, to green fields and sunlight. Some of the horses can endure the life in the pit for much greater periods than can others. They are like men, differing in endurance as in intelligence. But to each of them comes the time when the vet. says he must "go up," and the elevator runs him aloft to the holiday that he has earned.

Horses Go Blind in Mines.

After six months or so of semi-darkness the horse is almost blind. The optic nerve is nearly atrophied and he is led unseeing and staggering to the meadow where he is to recuperate. When the halter is cast off and the animal is left to himself he is like a nyctalops suddenly dragged from his lair and thrown into the sunlight. He stands trembling and swaying from side to side until the eyes gradually become accustomed to the glare; and then the holiday has really commenced. When the horses are returned to the mine they are as fat and healthy as the man who has undergone successful treatment at a sanitarium, but the gloom and the hard work ultimately pull them down again. Still, there were horses in the Sydney mines which had been at work for years. They are well fed, have an even temperature to work in, and have to face no chilling rains or piercing winds like their fellows on the surface. Their stables are cut out of the solid coal and they have the best of food and care. It was proposed some time ago to adopt the electric trolley system for the coal cars, and, when the mine shall have been pumped out, perhaps the horses will not be replaced.

All Thieves.

Cynic—What do you think of the remarkable number of arrests for kleptomania?

Philosopher—Most of them are entirely innocent of all intent to do wrong, the trinkets being mechanically dropped into pocket or satchel while thinking of something else.

Cynic—All bosh! They are thieves—born thieves; that's my theory, no matter how rich or refined they are.

Philosopher—Possibly. But before we part I will thank you for my penknife, which you borrowed a moment ago to sharpen a pencil. While we were talking you dropped it into your pocket.

Many Doctors Have Many Minds.

But No Doctor Can Deny the Extraordinary Restorative Powers of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is composed of a number of the most potent blood builders and nerve restoratives that is known to medical science.

It is thoroughly scientific and prepared in such proportions as Dr. Chase found most effective after years of testing in his own extensive practice.

While doctors naturally prefer that you go to them for treatment, there is yet to be discovered a single case where a doctor when asked his opinion of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has not spoken of it in the highest terms of praise.

The evidence which is most satisfactory, however, is that of the persons who have been cured of such serious ailments as paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous prostration, nervous exhaustion and all the accompanying ailments by the use of this preparation.

When you find yourself losing energy and vigour, becoming easily tired, subject to headache, neuralgia, indigestion, faintness and dizziness, despondent, discouraged and unable to sleep or rest, it is time to be warned of approaching nervous collapse.

These are unmistakable indications that your nervous system is being undermined, and that you must seek such assistance as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food alone can give.

By noting your increase in weight while using this great system-builder you can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue is being added to your body. Fifty cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE LAND OF ANYHOW.

Beyond the Isle of What's-the-use,
Where Slipshod Point is now,
There used to be, when I was young,
The land of Anyhow.

Don't Care was king of all his realm,
A cruel king was he,
For those who served him with good heart,
He treated shamefully.

When boys and girls their tasks would slight,
And flood poor mother's brow,
He'd say, "Don't care! It's good enough!
Just do it anyhow!"

But when to older life they longed
To make proud fortune bow,
He'd let them find that fate se'er smiles
On work done anyhow.

DIVORCE IN CANADA

STATISTICS WHICH SHOW THE ATTITUDE OF THE DOMINION.

Pre-Confederation Divorce Courts in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia—Parliament Handles the Subject for the Remainder of Canada—Marriage Tie Eminently Sacred in This Country.

In the matter of divorce Canada occupies a unique position. So far as the greater part of the Dominion is concerned there is no Divorce Court. No authority can dissolve the marriage tie in Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, and the Territories save Parliament, which is required to investigate each case independently, and pass a special Act whenever divorce is deemed justifiable. The demand for a Divorce Court comes from a small and uninfluential section of the people, says the Mail and Empire. When it was presented in Parliament a few days ago it was met with the same prompt refusal it had elicited on former occasions. It appears, therefore to be the fixed policy of Canada, so far as any policy can be considered fixed, to refrain from establishing a Divorce Court, and to adhere to the costly, cumbersome, but eminently safe method that now prevails.

Our Divorce Statistics.

The marriage tie has a good strong hold in this country. There are divorces nearly every year by Parliament, and there are in certain provinces Divorce Courts, but the number of divorces is relatively small. Altogether three hundred divorces have been granted in Canada since Confederation. Thus there have been less than ten divorces a year in the Dominion, whereas the yearly average in the United States is from 25,000 to 30,000.

But the bulk of Canada's divorces have been in three small provinces having Divorce Courts, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and British Columbia have had 229 divorces, whereas the rest of Canada has had only 71. In other words, there have been three divorces in the provinces named to every one in the rest of Canada, and those provinces do not contain one-third the population of the Dominion. This seems to indicate pretty clearly that Divorce Courts mean more divorces, and a diminished regard for the sanctity of the marriage tie.

Further light is thrown on the divorce question in Canada by the recent census. This shows that there are in Canada 661 divorced persons. To each hundred thousand of population the provinces have the following divorces:

Ontario	10
Prince Edward Island	18
Manitoba	14
Nova Scotia	20
New Brunswick	24
Quebec	35
Northwest Territories	38
British Columbia	50

Provincial Divorce Court.

It is rather remarkable that although divorce is solely within the jurisdiction of the Federal authority, four of the smaller provinces have Divorce Courts. These, however, are the survivals of pre-Confederation times. In three of the provinces the power of granting divorces was originally vested in the Governor and his advisers. Nova Scotia was the first colony to obtain authority to dissolve the marriage tie. As far back as 1759 an Imperial Act conferred upon the Governor, or commander-in-chief, and the Executive Council of Nova Scotia the power to grant divorces. A year before Nova Scotia entered Confederation the Legislature transferred the power to the judiciary. Similarly New Brunswick had a court of divorce, acquired in the reign of George III., which consisted of the Governor and his advisers. Its judicial character was established in 1860. Prince Edward Island still preserves a Divorce Court nearly in its original form. It consists of the Lieutenant-Governor and five or more of his council, but the Lieutenant-Governor may depute the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to preside in his place. Since Confederation no divorce case has arisen in Prince Edward Island, but still it has its full share of divorced persons. Evidently Prince Edward Islanders go abroad for their divorces. Another province which has a Divorce Court is British Columbia. There the Supreme Court exercises the same powers as the English courts by virtue of an ordinance passed before Confederation. Thus at the eastern and western extremes of Canada divorce is obtainable by legal process, whereas in the rest of the Dominion Parliament reserves the power to itself.

Divorce Court Proposals.

Several efforts have been made to induce Canada to establish a Divorce Court. The first of these was the despatch which the Imperial Government addressed to the Governor-General in 1859. At that time Great Britain had just adopted a divorce law, the authority having been previously exercised by Parliament, and the Secretary for the Colonies suggested that it would be advisable for Canada to enact a similar measure. This was advanced with a view to securing uniformity in the marriage and divorce laws of the Empire. But the suggestion was respectively pigeon-holed.

The temper of the Canadian Parliament touching this subject was revealed in 1870 when an innocent measure making provision for the better administration of the New Brunswick Divorce Court, already established, was submitted by the Government. It was contended that the bill would be a recognition by Parliament of a Divorce Court, and therefore might lead to a general court of divorce for the whole Dominion. So strong was the opposition aroused that the Government was compelled to withdraw the bill.

In Parliament the first direct proposal to establish a Divorce Court was made in 1875. The motion elicited from the Premier, Mr. Alexander Mackenzie, and from the Conservative leader, Sir John Macdonald, emphatic declarations that while they were not opposed to the granting of divorces by Parliament, they were of opinion that additional facilities should not be given. Again in 1879 a bill to introduce a Divorce Court in Ontario was overwhelmingly negatived.

Another effort was made in 1888 to change the Canadian policy. On that occasion Sir John Macdonald pointed to the English experience, which showed that the establishment of a Divorce Court meant the increase in the number of divorces, the corruption of society and the increasing degradation of the public mind. He concluded that he preferred a system which offered very few inducements to the granting of divorces. To the same effect are the declarations of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the latest of which was given only a few days ago.

Advantages of Impediments.

Canada, therefore, adheres to its present system because it offers special impediments to divorce. We do not have to look further than the United States to obtain a living example of the consequences of cheap and easy divorce. It means that the marriage tie easily discarded is thoughtlessly assumed, and that in all the relations of the family, of husband, and wife and parent, the sacred safeguards which Christian civilization has for nineteen centuries been building up, are undermined and weakened.

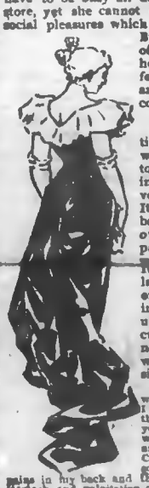
The Price of Pleasure.



It is hard for a lovely woman to forego the pleasures of the life which she was created to enjoy and adorn. She may have to be busy all day in office or in store, yet she cannot deny herself the social pleasures which are offered her. But the fatigue is often too great for her, and she suffers from headache and backache as a consequence of over-exertion.

Women who are tired and worn out will find a perfect tonic and nervine in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures headache, backache and the other aches and pains to which women are subject. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I am so pleased with your instructions, I hardly know what thanks to give you for your kind advice," writes Mrs Milo Bryant, of Lots, Thomas Co., Ga. "I suffered so much with great pains in my back and the lower part of my stomach and palpitation of the heart, that at times I could hardly lie down. Could hardly get up in the morning, but after using three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, I am like a new woman."

Sick women, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Abbots' Remains Found.

During excavations on the site of the old abbey at Bury St. Edmunds, five stone coffins, containing human remains, have been unearthed in what has been discovered to be the site of the chapter house of the abbey. They are supposed to be those of the following abbots:—Sampson, 1182; Richard de Insula, 1229; Henry, 1234; Edmund de Walpole, 1248, and Hugo I., 1157. The coffin-lids are missing, but the names of the abbots are given in the plan of the chapter house, discovered by Dr. Montagu James, of Cambridge, at a Roman Catholic College at Douai. Abbot Sampson, it will be remembered, was the hero of Carlyle's "Past and Present."

How It Was Done.

In the course of the customary evening chat one of the company remarked that a certain firm had made arrangements for consuming the smoke that had hitherto darkened the landscape in the neighborhood of their factory, says an English paper.

"But how are they a-goin' to do it, Joe?" demanded an interested listener.

"Aw doan't knaw," confessed Joe. "Ye'd better ask owd John. E's bound to unnerstand it."

As a matter of fact, "Owd John" was as ignorant on the point as his neighbor, but he had no intention of admitting it.

"It's this way," he explained, after a thoughtful pause. "As the smoke descends up the chimney theere's a patent sort o' fan arrangement wot makes wot they calls a vortex. This 'ere vortex jigger grabs the smoke, souses it wi' watter, an' whisks it round at sich a rate wot it clags into in lump same as if it wor makin' butter in a churn. This 'ere lump o' smoke gits 'arder an' 'arder till it is coal again, and when the piece of coal gits heavy enough it drops back into t' fire and gits burnt agin. It's varry simple when yo've seen it done an' unnerstands it."

STRINGER'S FIRST VERSE.

Doggerel, But His Teacher Saw Promise in the Stanzas.

T. C. Somerville of Clarke, Neb., writes as follows to The Toronto Globe: In your literary notes recently reference was made to Mr. Arthur Stringer's visit to England in the interests of his poetical ventures. This is by no means the first printed evidence of his growing importance in the literary world, with which his friends and acquaintances are well pleased. I frequently recall him as a student of London Collegiate Institute, in which I was for a time an instructor. I enclose you a copy of what I believe to be his first attempt in verse. The occasion was the removal, in the spring of 1891, of my moustache, which moved Arthur to pen this parody, and, after showing it to his classmates, to slip it surreptiously into my overcoat pocket. Instead of a possible explosion of wrath on the part of the dominie, who, by the way, was tenderly referred to as "Frenchy," the effusion was welcomed with smiles, and has been cherished among other memories of my pleasant sojourn in the "Forest City." To be sure, the verse is but doggerel, but its author subsequently did more and better work for the Institute magazine, and therein, presumably, discovered his poetic talent.

A Pathetic Lament: Or, the Sad Tale of a Moustache.

Who killed Frenchy's mustache?
"I," said Stringer,
"With my little wringer,
I wrung it off."

"No, I," said Little,
"With my toy pistol,
I shot it off."

"Not I," said Laidlaw,
"With my little paw,
I stroked it off."

Who'll make the shroud?
"I," said Waters, neat,
"With smile so sweet;
"I'll make the shroud."

Who'll paint the coffin?
"I," said Hobbs,
"For I make daubs;
I'll paint the coffin."

Who'll go to the funeral?
"I," said Plewes,
"When I have the blues,
I'll go to the funeral."

Who'll preach the sermon?
"I," said Clarke,
All stiff and stark;
"I'll preach the sermon."

Who'll toll the bell?

Abbots' Remains Found.

During excavations on the site of the old abbey at Bury St. Edmunds, five stone coffins, containing human remains, have been unearthed in what has been discovered to be the site of the chapter house of the abbey. They are supposed to be those of the following abbots:—Sampson, 1182; Richard de Insula, 1229; Henry, 1234; Edmund de Walpole, 1248, and Hugo I., 1157. The coffin-lids are missing, but the names of the abbots are given in the plan of the chapter house, discovered by Dr. Montagu James, of Cambridge, at a Roman Catholic College at Douai. Abbot Sampson, it will be remembered, was the hero of Carlyle's "Past and Present."

How It Was Done.

In the course of the customary evening chat one of the company remarked that a certain firm had made arrangements for consuming the smoke that had hitherto darkened the landscape in the neighborhood of their factory, says an English paper.

"But how are they a-goin' to do it, Joe?" demanded an interested listener.

"Aw doan't knaw," confessed Joe. "Ye'd better ask owd John. E's bound to unnerstand it."

As a matter of fact, "Owd John" was as ignorant on the point as his neighbor, but he had no intention of admitting it.

"It's this way," he explained, after a thoughtful pause. "As the smoke descends up the chimney theere's a patent sort o' fan arrangement wot makes wot they calls a vortex. This 'ere vortex jigger grabs the smoke, souses it wi' watter, an' whisks it round at sich a rate wot it clags into in lump same as if it wor makin' butter in a churn. This 'ere lump o' smoke gits 'arder an' 'arder till it is coal again, and when the piece of coal gits heavy enough it drops back into t' fire and gits burnt agin. It's varry simple when yo've seen it done an' unnerstands it."

A Charitable Deed of the Sovereign Recently Made Public.

A good story of King Edward's interest in the Salvation Army is told in a recent issue of The Social Gazette by Walsh Dawson, a supporter of the army's social work.

Two years ago Mr. Dawson, who had interested himself in obtaining donations for social work, was on his way one afternoon to call on a certain benevolent peer, when he lost his way in a thick fog. Suddenly he ran against a man near Buckingham Palace. Apologizing he asked the stranger if he could direct him to the house he was looking for. The reply was:

"Certainly. I am going there myself. I'll show you the house."

"We chatted away merrily," Mr. Dawson continues. "I told him all about my work and the labors of the Salvation Army. He seemed deeply interested, and when I reached the house he said: "It is dreadful to think that so much suffering exists in this city. I want you to accept a little gift for the poor suffering ones," and he placed in my hands 10 sovereigns.

"I was astonished and asked the unknown donor what name I should put down in the book. He replied hurriedly: 'No name at all, please. Simply anonymous.' Suddenly I saw his face distinctly for the first time; it was the Prince of Wales, now the King."

A QUEER QUERY.

Sir Boyle Roche's "What Has Posterity Done for Us?"

This utterance occurred, as Mr. Adams surmises, in the time of Grattan's Parliament. Among the strange characters of those days in Dublin not the least singular was Sir Boyle Roche, Bart. As an officer of the British army, he distinguished himself in the American war. Retiring from the service, he obtained a seat in Parliament, and was, according to Mr. Froude, the buffoon of the Conservative party in the Irish House of Commons. He was continually perpetrating "bulls," which the great Irish orator, J. P. Curran, who disliked him very much, believed were the result of preparation. However, it may be mentioned that on one occasion, when opposing a grant for some public works, Sir Boyle Roche remarked: "What, Mr. Speaker, so we are to beggar ourselves for the fear of vexing posterity! Now, I would ask the honorable gentleman and this still more honorable House, why we should put ourselves out of the way to do anything for posterity, for what has posterity done for us?"

When the roar of laughter which followed had subsided, Sir Boyle entered upon a lucid explanation. "I apprehend," he replied, "gentlemen have entirely mistaken my words. I assure the House that by posterity I do not mean my ancestors, but those who are to come immediately after them."

It need hardly be added that Sir Boyle Roche voted for the Union, and was in consequence granted a pension, and a post in Dublin Castle. He was a fine, bluff and soldierlike old gentleman. He passed away on June 15, 1807.—Notes and Queries.

A Policeman's Cinch.

A Hebrides policeman in charge of a prisoner in custody adopted the following ingenious method of keeping surveillance over him: Knowing that the man could not escape from the island, he let him out to fish every morning, with the injunctions to fish for his subsistence and collect enough wreckage to cook it. As a penalty for non-success the prisoner was locked up for the night, which was punishment enough in those cold and stormy regions.

The following despatches have been received by E. M. Poussett & Co.:—

New York, April 18, 1.30—Market letter.—The bank statement to-day turned out in accordance with conservative estimates as far as the increase of $2,366,000 in surplus was concerned, but the increase in loans was a disappointment and cannot be very well explained. It was generally thought that in view of the heavy liquidation in market which followed the announcement of Northern Securities decision last week and which continued up to Tuesday would result in quite a large decrease in loans and the fact that bank statement did not show this caused considerable selling by trading element. Banks now hold a surplus over all deposits on legal requirements of $6,000,000 against $6,500,000 last year and $15,000,000 two years ago. This small surplus is obviously entirely insufficient to permit the development of any extended bull speculation for the rise in general securities. It must also be remembered that the various syndicates which are tied up with large amounts of undigested or new securities and the continued indisposition of public to come in and buy, to any extent, either for investment or speculative purposes are against such a movement. Thus until the money situation is materially improved we do not expect anything better than a narrow traders market. The large interests which were leaders on bear side recently having covered their shorts and accumulated a good line of longs for an up turn are still working together with that end in view but as prices have had a good recovery and the short interest has been pretty well covered, but would rather favour scalping the market for only moderate turns rather than take a fixed position on long side for any extended movement.

M & M.

Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., Stock Brokers, Toronto, write as follows:—

New York, April 17th.—The market during the early hours displayed an excellent tone and appeared to be well on the road to recovery from the shock it received last Monday. The whole list took on a buoyant appearance with one exception, this being Metropolitan. There was a gradual shifting of position by the leaders. Foreigners have been moderate purchases of our securities past week. Opinions to-day are of a bullish nature, It must be borne in mind that stocks have had a steady advance for almost a week past and the reaction that set in about 1.30 was perfectly natural. Metropolitan was persistently hammered by the bears who were aware of a number of stop orders close to the market and this had the effect of unsettling the whole market late in the afternoon. A fair rally occurred in the last 20 minutes led by the grangers and the soft coalers. Closing was quite active.

Chicago—Would not buy wheat around present prices as these figures are almost fictitious. Think short sales of July wheat show handsome returns before a very great while. Feel very friendly to July oats. Closing prices.—Wheat, May, 77 1-4 @ 78-3; corn, May, 44 a 1-8; pork, May, 18.00; lard, May, 9.83 1-2.

Toronto, April 17th, 1903.—It might not be amiss at the present time for holders of securities, or traders who contemplate entering the market now, to consider some of the important facts that make for stability in values.

The country enjoys to-day the best crop conditions ever known at this time of the year and present indications are for a winter wheat far in excess of any ever raised. This is a favourable feature of the first magnitude, particularly when the relatively unfavourable crop conditions abroad are taken into account.

Railroad earnings at the present time are extraordinarily large so far as gross is concerned. The month of March shows the largest ratio of gain in two years. The net will, moreover, show an improvement by reason of the fact that the railroads generally have overcome the difficulties arising out of freight congestion, and are once more able to operate with something like proper economy. The indications are that taking returns as a whole for the fiscal year, they will show a net in excess of that shown last year.

Foreign trade is in particularly satisfactory condition. The exports of domestic products for the month of March are the largest ever known in that month. The full trade statement for the month will also make an excellent showing, so far as excess of exports over imports are concerned.

Foreign investments in U.S. securities is now proceeding on a steadier scale and in larger amount than at any time in two years, and there are indications that domestic investment is also increasing.

The manufacture of securities, with its constant strain on the money market, has ceased, and it is not likely to be resumed for some time.

These considerations should be kept in mind at present. It may be further taken for granted that President Roosevelt will be slow to risk prejudicing the important victory won in the Northern securities case by making a failure elsewhere, and for this reason it is very doubtful if proceedings will be inaugurated in any other cases.

A VICTIM OF NERVES.

Yet Rosa Bonheur Possessed One of the Kindest of Hearts.

Glimpses into the private lives of geniuses will probably always be eagerly sought after by the public. For the benefit of the importunate, Edward Marshall in a recent novel raises the curtain of the studio occupied by Mme. Rosa Bonheur during her lifetime in the Latin quarter of Paris and allows a peep at the eccentric genius as she often appeared in working hours. Clad in her usual mannish costume of blue jean and smoking a cigarette, she was an unconventional figure enough in her large barnlike room, "dirty and almost unfurnished save for a few high stools built of rough lumber by her coachman." The plentiful splashes of paint which decorated the walls and floor were the results of the many kinds of bad temper possessed by the gifted lady. When a victim of nerves, she was wont to rant and rave about her studio, shouting her remarks to her hearers, though biding away through it all the kindest of hearts. On this particular occasion the painter of horses was entertaining callers, and, becoming annoyed, she suddenly picked up a huge paint brush, such as might be used in painting a house. For a second or two she walked the floor toying with it as a lady plays with a fan. Then, on the entrance of a manservant, who brought in quietly what seemed to be a card or letter, the great woman stopped perfectly still, eyed him for a moment as a hunter might eye a moose, then, taking deliberate aim, threw the brush. It struck him full in the chest. Paint spattered into his face, and as he turned and made a hasty retreat she remarked to her visitors, "That is why I keep those great brushes and that cheap paint!"

Chess and Mathematics.

The world's chess champion, Emanuel Lasker, who has just been appointed to a mathematical professorship in the University of St. Louis, is one of the few instances of a marked taste for chess and mathematics being found in the same person. Contrary to the popular belief, great chess players have seldom been mathematicians. Anderson, one of the finest chess players who ever lived, was professor of mathematics at Beglan, and Dr. Lasker held for some time a minor mathematical post at Owens college, but the only example of a mathematician of the highest rank who was also a first class chess player is Dr. Salmon, the provost of Dublin university. Dr. Salmon has not played for years, but some forty years ago he was regarded as one of the best amateurs in the country, and every chess student is familiar with the famous game he played against Paul Morphy at the end of the fifties.—London Tatler.

Scientific Phonography.

An attempt is being made by the Academy of Sciences of Vienna to turn the phonograph to account as an important registering instrument for science. One intended application is in the study of various languages and dialects which are now in the course of development or of extinction. Three scientific expeditions recently sent out by the academy have been equipped with specially designed phonographs intended for the investigation of languages and other phenomena depending upon sound waves. In order to secure permanent records the academy has devised a method of metal plating the wax records so that they will serve as phonotypes from which fresh wax plates may be cast at any time. Similar efforts to utilize the phonograph for scientific purposes have been made elsewhere, but the Vienna scheme is on a larger scale.

Speculation.

A millionaire who died recently in New York left an account book filled with his "speculations" as apart from his legitimate investments. The total purchases and sales for the last three years approximated $2,000,000. Two hundred and sixty dollars profits remained to the financier's estate. The wonderful part of the story is not that the profits were so small, but that they were so large.

ORNITHOLOGY.

Prize Article on Its Pursuit as a Pastime —May Be Followed at All Times by Those Who Have Eyes.

Of any pastime or pursuit none, in my opinion, can be more fascinating than the study of birds. It is a subject that should interest every Canadian, for our insectivorous birds are an important factor in the cultivation of crops, of the successful growing of which the prosperity of the country in some measure depends. Many persons, otherwise intelligent enough, appear extremely uninformed concerning the native fauna of the land, as if it were not sufficiently interesting or abundant to justify a study. Ornithology is a pursuit that may be followed at all times, for by constantly having your eyes about you, you can become gradually acquainted with many species, and continued observation will extend your knowledge. It is by every-day attention that most can be learned, writes James McFadden of St. Mary's, Ont., in The Globe, though an excursion through fields and woods, especially if the student is supplied with opera glass and notebook, is very helpful, and is particularly necessary for the studying of certain varieties. But as good a place as any in town or country for noting birds' habits is an orchard or garden, and the best time of the day the early morning. By remaining as quietly as possible in one place, the birds forget their natural fear, and will then approach sufficiently near to allow of their plumage being closely observed. With their description jotted down it is possible to identify them in any good book on ornithology, although it is not always an easy matter. It has been said, indeed, by those who know that in this study books are not of vital importance. Some of the best living naturalists began without their aid, and worked themselves up by slow but sure degrees. Nevertheless, books are of assistance, and may even be deemed indispensable.

Best Books on the Subject.

Some of the best ones published to aid amateur ornithologists are, I think, Chapman's "Birds of Eastern North America," Cones' "Key to North American Birds," Florence Merriam's "Birds of the Village and Garden" and Neltje Blanchan's "Bird Neighbors." But the best volume for the ornithologist of this Province is "Birds of Ontario," written by Mr. McIlwraith of Hamilton, whose daughter, Miss Jean N. McIlwraith, is noted as a novelist and historian.

To a beginner ornithology may prove a rather difficult study. There are a vast number of birds that in size and color greatly resemble each other, when considerable experience is needed to discern any difference. Some varieties will permit a friendship to be developed at once. Others, again, require a lengthy acquaintance ere they are satisfied that you do not intend them any harm. It is a pastime that will cultivate the highest traits of perseverance and minute observation, and in time you may have the pleasure of adding "a new fact to the world's stock of knowledge."

Plenty of Material.

The one who takes up this pastime will find in this country plenty of material to work upon, for we are well supplied with birds. At all seasons of the year a certain number are to be observed. Even in winter time, we have, in addition to the ubiquitous crow and sparrow, the chickadee, tree creeper, chickadee, junco, snowflake, or "snowbird," longspur, hairy and downy woodpecker, two varieties of nuthatches, several kinds of owls, as well as other common and interesting birds. In spring the robin is generally the first migrant to arrive; he may be seen hopping about some frosty morning, cheerfully oblivious to the fact that much wintry weather may intervene ere he can build his nest. Following him closely, the bluebird appears, and after that comes a host of song sparrows, kingbirds, plovers, blackbirds, etc. About the same time you may see the plump-looking meadow-lark, his black necklace fringed with yellow, or perhaps the vesper sparrow, red above, light beneath, and easily recognizable by the white tail feathers showing when he flies. Then will come the American goldfinch or "wild canary," and the white-throated and white-crowned sparrows, as well as many other birds, the most distinguished of which is the Baltimore oriole, who arrives in early May, and is perhaps our most beautiful bird. His brilliant dress of orange and black is well contrasted by the green foliage and white blossoms in which he delights to sport, and as you watch him circling about you cannot refrain from thinking that the name bestowed upon him—that of "feathered meteor"—is well deserved.

The Flycatchers.

When the swarms of warblers, vireos and flycatchers arrive the student will have his spare time fully occupied in classifying them all. Of the first-named family it is known that thirty-one members occur in Ontario, and as experienced observers are frequently confused by this multiplicity the amateur needn't feel discouraged if at first he doesn't succeed in satisfactorily establishing the identity of each individual.

It is no little achievement to be always able to name a bird, itself unseen, merely by its song. One may become extremely expert at this, and thus when a score or more of birds are singing in concert in various parts of a garden they may be all correctly classified merely by their different votes. Mr. Bradford Torrey is probably the best authority on birds' songs.

The killing of birds for their identification should never be practised, as it is a cruel and unwise expedient. In studying them one should remember, as a writer has observed, that "A bird in the bush is worth two in the hand."

SOME BEAUTY DON'TS.

Don't bathe the face while it is very warm or very cold.

Don't be afraid of sunshine and fresh air. They offer you bloom and color.

Don't bathe in hard water. Soften it with a little powdered borax or a handful of oatmeal.

Don't wash the face when traveling unless it is with a little alcohol and water or a little cold cream.

Don't rub the face with too coarse a towel. Treat it as you would the finest porcelain, tenderly and delicately.

Don't forget that hearty laughter is a source of relaxation. So are all high thoughts, as those of hope, beauty, trust and love.

Don't attempt to remove dust with cold water. Give the face a hot bath with soap and then rinse thoroughly with clear tepid or cold water.

Don't neglect to sleep. You can sleep yourself into good looks. A long nap and a hot bath will make any woman more attractive and lift years from her shoulders.

Don't forget that beauty is power. There is nothing more potent. It is to a woman what capital is to a merchant. Its absence is a misfortune, its culture wise and proper.

Choice of Color.

As the choice of colors is a stumbling block to so many, a few words on this subject may be useful. A girl with a pale complexion can wear indigo blue and the russet shades, dark red and medium green. With brown hair, gray eyes and a poor complexion one may wear black relieved with cream, blue with cream, dark green, a very light shade of pink and a coppery red. A girl with red hair and a clear complexion may wear white, black, pale blue, green, but not deep pink, orange, deep purple or bright red. A blond may wear a bluish purple, while a brunette with a good color may wear reddish purple. Sallow skins need rich, warm tones. A woman of this type may wear dark, rich red, russet shades, most of the dark brown shades, cherry pink, rose and cream color. The good old rule that bids a woman for street wear choose the color of her hair, for house wear the color of her eyes and for evening wear the color of her skin may be borne in mind. When a girl has two or three different colors in her eyes, as often happens, if she matches any of them it will suit her.—American Queen.

Things to Be Avoided.

Don't make a narrow door narrower by a heavy portiere. A small house is made stuffy by too many hangings.

Don't put chandeliers in a room with a low ceiling. Side brackets are to be had in artistic shapes.

Don't have too much of any one kind of decoration in the house. Grill work and stained glass repeated in more than two rooms become monotonous.

Don't buy a bright colored carpet to put in rooms where the furniture is not to be correspondingly toned up.

Don't have the floor, wall and furniture in a room covered with material which has a decided pattern.

Don't put into a room unsteady little tables loaded with meaningless bric-a-brac.

Star Sofa Pillow.

From any lining material cut a regular star the desired size. First cut a paper pattern, then cut another pattern of a regular pentagon. This should be about the size of the star. Cut a star from pale blue wash silk. Cut the pentagon from deep blue silk. Adjust the points of the star to the points of the pentagon, and around the five sides dispose of a full puff of light blue silk. Around the edge place a ruffle of the deep blue silk and finish the star with several rows of embroidery silk couched down.

Apples.

The housekeeper who wishes to keep her family healthy will use apples freely, not eternally in apple sauce and apple pies, but in ways that vary and banish monotony. Apples, raw and cooked, even stewed dried apples, are better for constipation than liver pills.

Ravages of the Sea.

No place has been more transformed by the ravages of the sea than Dunwich, in England. Centuries ago it was a large city, with a fine harbor, and was the capital of the eastern counties. Now it is a little decayed village, with only one church and a few broken down houses. The other sixteen churches have been washed into the sea, and the sole remaining one is now perilously near the edge of the cliff.

ST. JOHN, N.B., FIRES

Wharves, Immigration and Freight Sheds Burned.

HALF A MILLION DOLLARS.

1,200 Immigrants Have Lost All Their Baggage—Big Drug Store Also Burned With the Loss of $100,000—Paint and Oil Warehouse at Winnipeg Destroyed — Blaze at Calgary.

St. John, N. B., April 18.—Fire which broke out in No. three warehouse at Sand Point on the western side of the harbor yesterday morning has sadly crippled the over-taxed facilities. At 8 o'clock the blaze started. No. four shed caught and was soon beyond control, and the elevator conveyor in a mass of flames, threatening the Lakonia and Lake Manitoba. Fully 100 yards into the dock, which is only about 75 feet wide, the steamers were at the mercy of the flames. A severe scorching was administered to the Lake Manitoba, which barely escaped. For a time it appeared as if the whole nest of terminal facilities was to be burned, including the million-bushel elevator full of grain.

Twelve C.P.R. box cars were destroyed and a lot of inward freight in the sheds. The steamers Tunisian and Lake Manitoba moved out into the stream. At 1 o'clock the flames were permanently checked, a snowstorm having salutary effect, along with the efforts of the firemen. Two steamer berths are now rendered useless for further mooring this season.

Losses by Immigrants.

In the Immigration building when the fire started were 1,200 immigrants, who were landed from the Lake Simcoe Thursday night. They lost all their baggage.

It is possible that two lives are lost.

The losses as estimated are: City, two warehouses, $25,000; damage to wharf, $3,000 or $4,000; insurance, $8,000 or $9,000. C. P. R., $20,000 loss to elevator conveyors, $10,000; to trestle and tracks, $1,000 to cattle sheds and cars, $5,000. The C.P.R. loss is covered by insurance. The balance of the loss is divided among the Elder-Dempster and Donaldson lines and the shippers of freight.

Another Big Loss.

In but one hour, from 10 to 11 o'clock last night fire did more than $100,000 damage on one of the principal business blocks of the city. The fire was confined to the Canadian Drug Building and the cigarette factory of A. and I. Isaacs in the rear.

Fire Elsewhere.

Winnipeg.—The premises of the G. F. Stephens Co., dealers in varnishes and paints, were damaged to the extent of about $25,000, fully insured. Electric wires are blamed.

Calgary.—The contracting and carpentering shops of Mayor Underwood were destroyed at an early hour on Friday at a loss of $4,000.

MUST STAND HIS TRIAL

For Misappropriation of Government Money.

Toronto, April 20.—Alfred McDougall will have to stand trial for alleged misappropriation of Government moneys. The plea of his counsel, that his physical and mental condition was such that he was irresponsible for his actions was not proven to Judge Morgan, before whom that phase of the case was argued. On Saturday morning His Honor delivered judgment, directing that the trial proceed, and after consultation it was decided that McDougall shall appear before Judge Winchester on Wednesday, April 29, at 10 o'clock.

Strikes Settled.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., April 20.—The striking longshoremen employed by the George Hall Coal Company, after being out two weeks, accepted the terms of the company and returned to work Saturday. A satisfactory settlement has also been made with the Canadian longshoremen at Prescott and Brockville, who struck on the first arrival of the Hall boats at these ports.

Union Labels in Canada.

Ottawa, Ont., April 20.—The Government has decided to meet the wishes of the Trades and Labor Congress, and pass a bill that will safeguard to labor organizations their labels. An act respecting union labels has been introduced into the Senate, and will be carried through. It will be a new statute, and not an amendment to the Trade Mark Act.

A LONG VIGIL ENDED

Sir Oliver Mowat Breathed His Last at 9.54 a. m. on Sunday.

STATE FUNERAL ARRANGED.

Venerable Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario Was Surrounded at the Last by All Members of His Family—To Lie in State Tuesday Afternoon and Wednesday Morning—His Career.

SIR OLIVER'S CAREER.

Born, Kingston, July 22, 1820.
Began to Study Law, 1837.
Enlisted in Force for Suppression of Rebellion, 1837.
Called to the Bar, 1841.
Queen's Counsel, 1856.
Alderman in Toronto, 1857 and 1858.
First Elected to Old Canadian Parliament, 1857.
Provincial Secretary in Brown-Dorion Government August 2, 1858.
Postmaster-General in Macdonald-Dorion Government, May 16, 1863.
Postmaster-General in Coalition Government, June 30, 1864.
Vice-Chancellor of Upper Canada, November 14, 1864.
Premier of Ontario, October 31, 1872.
Senator and Minister of Justice, July, 1896.
Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, November 18, 1897.

Toronto, April 20.—Peacefully, almost imperceptibly, the semi-conscious sleep in which Sir Oliver Mowat has lain since Wednesday night became at six minutes to 10 yesterday morning the dreamless slumber of death.

The aged statesman was surrounded by his family, all of whom had remained within call since they were summoned to his bedside at midnight on Wednesday, a long vigil of eighty hours. They were Sheriff and Mrs. Mowat, Mr. Arthur and Mrs. Mowat, Mr. C. R. W. Biggar, K.C., and Mrs. Biggar, Mr. Thomas Langton, K.C., and Mrs. Langton, and Miss Mowat, Dr. Primrose and Dr. Temple were also present.

Sir Oliver did not regain consciousness. His vitality, the physicians said, was wonderful, and his life simply ebbed away.

Flag Half-Masted.

The first public announcement of the death was the half-masting of

THE LATE SIR OLIVER MOWAT.

the flag on Government House, and it was not long before on all public buildings and many private ones flags were at half-mast and spread the news throughout the city.

The Funeral Arrangements.

Yesterday evening the following official announcement regarding the funeral was given out:

The funeral of his Honor the late Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, which will be a public one, will take place at 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon to Mount Pleasant Cemetery, previous to which a short service will be held at Government House. The body will lie in State from 2 to 5 o'clock on Tuesday and from 10.30 to 12.30 on Wednesday, for the benefit of those coming from a distance. By order, F. C. Law, Commander, R.N., Official Secretary.

The State Funeral.

Premier Ross called at Government House in the afternoon, and it was after a conference with him that the above announcement regarding the state funeral was made. This morning the Premier will arrange with Colonel Otter the details of the ceremony. The members of the Legislature, City Council and other public bodies and also many societies will attend. There will be a military escort, composed of a detachment of Royal Canadian Dragoons, mounted. It was not thought advisable to parade all the city regiments.

The Pallbearers.

The family have asked that six members of the Toronto Caithness Association act as bearers. They will be: Daniel Rose, Sr., past president; Donald Irving, treasurer; Daniel Rose, vice-president; D. A. Rose, Jr.; Gilbert L. Sutherland, and W. Banks, Sr., president. The members of the society will attend the funeral in a body.

Immediate Cause of Death.

The official bulletin gives this explanation of the accident that was the immediate cause of death:

"On the 8th day of January last his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor was walking by himself up and down the hall at Government House watching his grandchildren at play, when he tripped and fell heavily, sustaining a fracture of the neck of the right thigh bone. He suffered a good deal of pain and discomfort, but he gradually recovered and was able to walk, with some assistance, and to support his weight upon the injured limb. On Sunday night, April 12, whilst he was being undressed for bed, and whilst two of the attendants were in the act of lifting him from his chair, the right thigh was broken a short distance above the centre of the bone and some six inches below the previous break. The fracture was set, chloroform being administered for the purpose, and the necessary splints were applied. His Honor stood the immediate effects of the injury well, and no alarming symptoms developed until Tuesday night shortly before midnight, when his heart's action began to fail, and it soon became evident that he could not recover. Since that time he has been growing gradually weaker."

Tributes to Sir Oliver's Worth.

News comes from all over the country that flags fly at half mast in honor of Sir Oliver. In very many of the churches here yesterday extended references to his career were made by the pastors, and from many public men tributes were paid to the deceased's memory, two of the most notable being those of the Hon. G. W. Ross, Premier of Ontario, and Sir William Ralph Meredith, for 15 years leader of the Opposition in the Legislature.

The Public Schools will be closed on Wednesday in respect to Sir Oliver Mowat.

Eloquent tributes to the memory of Sir Oliver Mowat were voiced yesterday in Ottawa churches, and by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Mr. Fielding, Hon. Mr. Paterson, Hon. David Mills, Sir William Mulock and others.

SIR OLIVER MOWAT'S CAREER.

Succinct Record of Events in Which He Bore Prominent Part.

Oliver Mowat was born at Kingston, Ont., on the 22nd July, 1820. His father, the late John Mowat, was a native of Canisay, Caithness, Scotland, who early in his life entered the army and served throughout the whole course of the Peninsular war. In 1816 John Mowat came to Canada and settled in Kingston, where he continued to reside until his death. He married Miss Helen Levack, a native of Caithness, by whom he had five children, the eldest being the subject of the present sketch.

After receiving tuition at several small local private establishments, he attended a more pretentious school, taught by the Rev. John Cruikshank. As a child, Oliver Mowat is said to have exhibited a good deal of mental precocity, and learned to read at a very early age. Upon leaving school he entered upon the study of law in the office of Mr. (afterwards Sir) John A. Macdonald, with whom he remained as a student for four years. For a few months afterwards he served as a volunteer in the 1837 rebellion, after which he completed the term of his studies under R. E. Burns of Toronto, afterwards a judge of the Court of Queen's Bench. In the Michaelmas term, 1841, he was admitted as an attorney, and solicitor, and in the same term was called to the Bar of Upper Canada. He entered on the practice of his profession in Kingston, but soon afterwards removed to Toronto, forming a partnership with his former principal, R. E. Burns, under the style of Burns & Mowat. P. M. M. L. Vankoughnet (subsequently Chancellor of Ontario) was afterwards admitted to the firm. After the retirement of Mr. Burns from practice, Messers. Mowat and Vankoughnet continued to carry on business in partnership for some years.

At the bar Mr. Mowat confined himself chiefly to equity practice, and soon obtained a high reputation as a lawyer. Subsequently he had as partners at different periods the late John Ewart, the late John Hellwell, the late John Roof, the late Wm. Davies, the late John Downie and Mr. Justice Maclennan.

Was Alderman in Toronto.

In 1856 Oliver Mowat was created a Queen's counsel, and during the same year he was appointed as one of the commissioners for the consolidation of the public general statutes of Canada and of Upper Canada respectively, and was also at a subsequent period a commissioner for the consolidation of the statutes of Ontario. During the year 1857 he sat in the City Council of Toronto as Alderman for St. Lawrence Ward, and during the following year for St. James' Ward. While occupying that position he proposed and carried through the Council an important measure which was known as "Ald. Mowat's Bylaw." It was entitled "An Act to provide for the better administration of the affairs of the Corporation," and furnished an important check upon the expenditure of the public funds. It has since been consolidated and now forms part of the city bylaw No. 504.

Entrance to Politics.

Politically, Mr. Mowat was in early life surrounded with Conservative influence, but chose, as Mr. Adams relates, "that broad-minded, moderate Liberalism of which he has ever since been so able an exponent and so steadfast a promoter." He was in 1857 elected to the House of Assembly for South Ontario, defeating Joseph C. Morrison by a majority of nearly 800, and continued to represent that constituency till 1864. In the Assembly he took part in all the principal debates, and became one of the most effective speakers on the Reform side. He opposed various measures of the then existing Macdonald-Cartier Government with a vigor and clearness of exposition that produced considerable effect. The Opposition as a whole was a formidable one, and the Government had no sinecure in their offices. After the defeat of the Government on the question of the location of the seat of Government, Mr. Mowat entered the new Cabinet formed by Messrs. Brown and Dorion as Provincial Secretary. This Government was fated to last only four days, the Governor-General having refused the usual and well-known right of a new Ministry to a dissolution. The "Double Shuffle" followed, and Mr. Mowat and his colleagues once more found themselves in the shades of Opposition.

Assisted in Confederation.

At the general election in 1861 he made a bold move in attempting to oust John A. Macdonald from the representation for Kingston, which the latter had represented for a continuous period of seventeen years. He was unsuccessful and took refuge in his old constituency in South Ontario. In 1863 Mr. Mowat accepted the portfolio of Postmaster-General in Sandfield-Macdonald-Dorion administration, which he retained until the defeat of that Government in the following year. Upon the formation of the Tache-Macdonald Government he again accepted the Postmaster-Generalship, which he retained for four months. He was a member of the Union Conference that assembled in Quebec October 10, 1864, and took an active part in framing the constitution prepared there by the "Fathers of Confederation." In the subsequent proceedings that resulted in the accomplishment of Confederation he was not distined to play a very important part, as about that time he withdrew from political life. In November following he was raised to the bench as one of the Vice-Chancellors of Ontario. During the next eight years he discharged the important and onerous duties of an equity judge with honor to himself and with acceptance to the profession. Most of his written judgments are notable specimens of clear and logical reasoning, and are held in high respect by the judges and profession generally.

Called to the Premiership.

In the autumn of 1872 Mr. Mowat resigned his seat on the bench and again entered the political arena, being called by the Lieutenant-Governor to succeed Mr. Blake in the Premiership of the province. In his own administration, which lasted from 1872 until the year 1896, when he resigned to enter the Cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he filled the office of Attorney-General. During his term of office he had frequent controversies with the Dominion Government during Sir John A. Macdonald's time, notably on the boundary question, the appointment of Queen's counsel, the Liquor License Law and other cases, which were carried to the Privy Council in England, and which were uniformly decided in his favor.

Becomes Lieutenant-Governor.

In Laurier administration Sir Oliver Mowat filled the office of Minister of Justice, and furnished abundant evidence of his peculiar fitness for that post. He was chosen one of the committee of Council to whom was entrusted the conduct of negotiations with delegates from the Province of Manitoba for a basis of settlement of the school question. On Nov. 18, 1897, he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the province. A former president of the Canadian Institute, he likewise filled the presidency of the Evangelical Alliance of Ontario. In 1897 the deceased statesman was elected hon. president of the Canadian Bar Association.

Receives His Knighthood.

The crowning point of his career was in 1892, when, in recognition of his eminent public services, Her Majesty the Queen created him Sir Oliver Mowat, a Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George. In 1897, on the completion of the 60th year of Her Majesty's reign, Sir Oliver Mowat was promoted to be a Knight Grand Cross of the same order. The hon. degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Queen's University in 1872, a similar honor being conferred also by Toronto University in 1889. In religious belief Sir Oliver Mowat was a Presbyterian. His writings include "Evidences of Christianity" and "Christianity and Some of its Fruits." In 1846 he married the second daughter of the late John Ewart of Toronto.

THE BALKANS TROUBLE.

Fighting Has Occurred—Dynamite Bombs Hill 70 Turks.

Salonica, European Turkey, April 20.—A sanguinary fight has occurred at the village of Opela between revolutionists from Palanka and Turkish troops. After the encounter had lasted some time and the revolutionists were getting the worst of it, a dozen of them being killed or wounded, they resorted to the use of dynamite and hurled bombs among the Turks, seventy of whom were killed or wounded by the explosions. In the panic which followed, the revolutionists broke through the Turkish cordon and escaped.

Victorious En Route.

Valetta, Island of Malta, April 20.—The British battleship Victorious, which had been ordered to Greece, owing to the threatening aspect of affairs in the Balkans, sailed early Saturday morning for Volo, Greece.

The Louisiana Purchase.

The Louisiana Purchase cost our nation $15,000,000 in the time of President Jefferson. The Louisiana Purchase exposition to celebrate this purchase to be held at St. Louis in 1904 will cost about $40,000,000. The ground on which the fair will be held is counted worth $15,000,000.

STEEL RAIL INDUSTRY TO BOOM IN CANADA.

Clergue Mills at Sault Ste. Marie to Supply Canadian Market in Three Months.

Montreal, April 17.—"Within from sixty to ninety days the Clergue mills at Sault Ste. Marie will be turning out high-grade steel rails in sufficient quantitty to meet all the demands of Canada," was the announcement made to The Toronto Star representative at Ottawa last night by Mr. Cornelius Shields, President of the Consolidated Lake Superior Co., who, accompanied by Mr. F. H. Clergue, had been awaiting the provision the Government had made for the steel rail industry.

"Last year 130,000 tons were required in Canada, and when the mill at the Soo is in position in June, the output will be 150,000 a year. The duty of $7 a ton will be equal to 25 per cent., as against foreign rails and 16 2-3 per cent. against the rails manufactured in England, owing to the existence of the preferential tariff. Any surplus that might exist would likely be sold in the Mother Country, as steel rails will now derive the benefits of the preference.

"The Government will likely give more ample protection to other kinds of steel in the near future, the announcement regarding the reconsideration of the binder twine question evidently meaning that the Government would hand down a supplementary budget in regard to new lines.

"We are entirely satisfied with the provision that has been made."

Messrs. Shields and Clergue returned to the Soo at once.

ABOUT SPECULATION ON STOCK MARKET.

The Monetary Times has Still Another Word of Warning.

(Monetary Times.)

This heading seems trite. The subject is old. People tell us that we cannot find anything new to say about it; and others say that people will gamble, in spite of all law and of all advice. Still we shall attempt yet another warning, in the hope that some may be saved from snares or pitfalls. It was opportunely said by a correspondent a week or two ago that it seems to be one of the peculiarities of stock speculation that people never seem to take past experience as being worth anything, but as a rule have to pay an enormous price to get some experience of their own. This is exactly the attitude of the boy who, when his father warned him against the theatre or some passing frivolity, adding, "I have been there, my son, and have seen the folly of it," replied: "Well, but father, I want to see the folly of it too." Thousands in Canada to-day are venturing within the theatre of the broker to engage in a business which has driven to beggary and suicide many a shrewd man and which is likely to beggar more. Yet young men, old men, dashing women, engage in it, neither desiring nor yet expecting to see the folly of it.

People are as greedy as ever for making money. We see this when news comes of any man's success in "striking it rich," either in mining, stock speculating or anything else. Hundreds of greenies make haste to go into the same sort of thing, never bothering to enquire how many have lost at the same game. They will not, at any rate, understand that in Wall street operations on margin the dice are loaded against "lambs" almost every time. On a former occasion reference was made in these columns to the evil effect among business men in the Maritime Provinces of margined operations. Evidences of this are still coming out. A Halifax paper of last week says: "The recent slump in Dominion steel has carried many men completely off their feet . . . Storekeepers in many cases have lost more than they have made during many years." And Judge Wetherbee, in addressing the grand jury on Monday, dwelt on the alarming prevalence of stock speculation, and said, "these supposed bucket shops are springing up in every possible place throughout the province." Observation and enquiry compel us to believe that Nova Scotia is not greatly different from other parts of the Dominion in this respect. Our correspondent in Halifax, writing on Tuesday last, gives some instructive instances, if people could be got to heed them. In addition to what his letter states, we have a memorandum from the Digby Courier which reads thus:—

A New York widow whose husband left her $90,000 two years ago, is dead with a bullet hole in her temple. She had been speculating in the stock market for some time, and was unable to pay her last week's board bill. The story is short, but it is instructive and pathetic.

The writer of this article, who happened to be spending a summer holiday at a resort on the Great Lakes, was auditor on one occasion of the fatuous curiosity and persistence of a woman who "wanted to make some money," as she stated. Approaching a well known financiar she asked his advice about a certain stock about which he was reputed to be well informed. His reply was to the effect that he could not advise anyone about that stock. "But," the woman went on, "you made a lot of money out of it, and Mrs. Blank told me she cleaned up $500 on it, why can't I?" In vain he explained that his only advice was to leave it, and all other stocks alone. Still the headstrong woman insisted that she had $200 which her husband had given her for a trip, and she thought she might as well make it four hundred! The idea that she might lose her two hundred dollars by putting it into the stock, did not seem to have entered her mind. And yet these are the sort of fools, male and female, who ignorantly, and in defiance of illustration and advice, imperil the savings of their husbands—and their employers.

NO JUMPING ON THIS WITNESS.

(Toronto Star.)

Newspaper readers all over the country will be thinking that it must have been a fine sight to see the distinguished lawyers in the Gamey case examining and cross-examining their distinguished fellow-lawyer, Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, K. C. Nobody shouted at this witness. Nobody told him to stop his flow of talk, or to confine himself to direct answers, or ordered him to "look this way." Nobody impugned the veracity of this witness, or sought to tangle him up, or sneeringly repeated what he said, as is the trick lawyers have when dealing with gentlemen who are so unfortunate as to know something that brings them into court as witnesses. This witness was not treated in the usual way. When he inadvertently named a wrong date he was courteously corrected by the lawyer who was questioning him, and when the cross-examiner got at him no attempt was made to browbeat him, to provoke him to anger or to discredit his evidence by making him appear to be a bad lot.

Many a man in the country who has gone to court anxious to tell the honest truth in the interests of justice, has been badgered, insulted, and sneered at as though he were the veriest blackleg, and men who have endured this would have enjoyed seeing lawyers, for, once, treating a witness decently. Mr. Aylesworth received no consideration beyond what any honest man deserves in a court of justice, but he got more consideration than any other honest man would have got, because not only is he a lawyer himself, but he is a very able lawyer, quite capable of holding his own, even in the disadvantageous posture of a witness with the best lawyers of them all. This witness was not a safe man to tackle in the usual way, and so his plain and direct statement of all that he knew of the matters under enquiry was accepted with deference, without interruption, without distertion, insinuation, or inuendo. This witness was treated as he should have been treated, and ordinary citizens having now seen that lawyers know how to treat a straightforward witness, will begin wondering if something cannot be done to procure for all honest witnesses in all the courts similarly fair treatment. Too often in court men who are incapable of knowingly giving misleading testimony or of perjuring themselves are treated as if they were born liars. Lawyers will pounce on them as if they were disreputable characters who should be taken out of the room and horsewhipped. It is clear enough that in court a witness needs to be questioned and cross-questioned so that there may be extracted from him all he knows, for even an honest and intelligent man may not fully appreciate the importance of some of the crumbs of information in his possession, and there is always the danger that a witness may be anxious to conceal something, and the further danger that however honest he is, he may be mistaken in his facts. But public opinion agrees that it is not necessary for lawyers in all kinds of cases in all kinds of courts dealing with all classes of witnesses to always assume that the man on the stand, if called by the other side, is a liar and a rogue. To be put in the witness-box is a terrifying ordeal that the average citizen will evade whenever he can possibly do so, and no doubt justice often suffers for this reason. But there is little to be gained by discussing the question, for until the judges of the land see fit to take the matter up and to extend greater protection to witnesses who are charged with nothing and suspected of nothing, the old order of things will continue.

THE TRANSFORMATION OF THE DOUKHOBORS.

According to the Winnipeg Free Press, the Doukhobors, who, some months ago, were in an alarming state of unrest and dissatisfaction, and were compelled by force to return to their homes, have undergone a complete change in spirit and in purpose.

At the present time the attitude of the ex-pilgrims towards Canadian life, work and customs is that of people not only willing, but eager, to adapt themselves to Canadian conditions, and adopt Canadian methods and practices. They are entering for their homesteads literally by hundreds. They have discarded the old-style calendar used in Russia, and have adopted the Gregorian. They are giving their children Canadian names. The next generation of Doukhobors will not be Ivans or Vladimirs, but Georges and James. The picturesque flaring skirted coats will soon be rarer in the Doukhobor colonies than they are now on the streets of Winnipeg, for they will cut their garments on Canadian models. Their festival days will not be in future the Feast of St. Paul, or St. Sophia, but the 24th of May, Thanksgiving Day and the rest of the Canadian holidays. Their buildings will in future be Canadian, not Russian in architecture. The composite stable and dwelling house will soon be a thing of the past. Already many of the better class are remodelling their dwellings so as to make them more in harmony with the generality of Canadian farm homes. Doukhobors are buying imported stallions and well-bred mares. They aim at inaugurating an extensive system of breeding for sale. They are selling off inferior cattle and buying pedigreed Ayrshires and Holsteins, and they purpose in a year or two being an important factor among the dairy producers of the west. They now realize the necessity for general education, and are heartily entering into the plans of their well wishers for the establishment of schools in every village community. They are planning for a system of roads between the various villages and of bridges to cross the Swan and others rivers. They propose to establish stores, and to conduct trading among themselves. During the past few days their leaders have been in Winnipeg, and the cash receipts of several wholesale houses bear testimony to the extent of their purchases. They are buying the most improved machinery, and intend to place under crop the largest possible area. Instead of slowly threshing out the products of the field with the flail, or treading it out, as did the Israelites, with oxen, they will this autumn have steam threshing mills. The threshing engines will be utilized, when not engaged in preparing grain for market, to saw lumber, for the Doukhobors will send large lumbering parties into the timber at Thunder Hill and other adjacent points, to cut more than enough to supply the local demand. So anxious are they to learn the most approved methods of farm and garden culture that between 40 and 50 of them recently drove 25 to 40 miles to attend a farmers' institute, where addresses on grain and fruit culture were given.

From the foregoing facts it is evident that the Doukhobors are entering on a new era of progress that will lead to prosperity and wealth. Their intention is to become in every sense of the term, Canadian. With right ideals of citizenship, with their high personal character, and undeniable thrift and industry, they will ere long be among the most valuable of the elements that go to make up our national life. The transformation, it is generally admitted, must be principally credited to one man—Peter Verigen, an ex-Siberian exile, of considerable scholastic attainments, and good business capacity, who has been convinced of the sincerity of the intentions of the Canadian Government towards his people, and of the absolute necessity of adopting the customs of the country, if they are to meet with any reasonable measure of success.

B.-P. GOES TO OTTAWA.

Hero of Mafeking in Canada Incog. as Col. Stevenson.

Toronto, April 20.—Col. Robert Baden-Powell is touring Canada. He was in Toronto yesterday; last night he left for Ottawa.

The distinguished hero of the South African war, the defender of Mafeking, is traveling incog. as Col. Stevenson. He arrived from Washington, D.C., at 4 with an aide and dined at the Queen's. He did not register and apparently desires to surround all his movements with the greatest secrecy.

He was called upon by Chas. E. MacInnes, the Toronto lawyer, and was closeted for an hour. When his dentity was penetrated, he refused to admit his identity, and informed the reporter sharply that he would report him for his insolence in urging him to submit to an interview.

Mr. MacInnes refused to speak of the affair and would neither confirm nor deny the identity of Col. Powell, but said the gentleman was here on purely private business and he must respect confidence.

His tour of inspection of Canada in such a secret manner is believed to relate to the military features and policy urged by Lord Dundonald.

Bermuda Accepts Postage Plan.

Ottawa, April 20.—Sir William Mulock has received an acceptance from Bermuda of his proposition presented some time ago to place the island on the same basis as Canada as regards postage. The new arrangement will go into effect a week from to-day. At present Bermuda is ruled by the Postal Convention; but after April 27, she will be as if she were part of Canada. All the colonies have been asked to come into this position, but so far only Great Britain, the Bahama Islands and Bermuda have replied. These three have accepted.

Men and Company Obdurate.

Ottawa, April 20.—Nothing new was the reply in answer to enquiries of both the Canada Atlantic Railway officials and the striking trackmen last night. The strikers are entering upon their third week, and it looks like a long siege.

Sour Stomach.

When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich, sour stomach is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too freely of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let five hours elapse between meals, and when you feel a fullness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, indicating that you have eaten too much, take two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the sour stomach may be avoided.

MOHAWK INSTITUTE.

Indian School Near Brantford Completely Destroyed.

NO STUDENT WAS INJURED.

The 150 Asleep in the Institute When the Fire Broke Out Were All Got Out Without Any Mishap—The Loss Will Be $35,000 — Two Deaths From Fire Elsewhere.

Brantford, April 20.—Fire last night completely destroyed the Indian Institute, a school for Indians, situated a short distance from this city. The Institute was founded years ago by the New England Company for the instruction of Indian children, and was erected on a large plot of land granted for the purpose by the Dominion Government. It was maintained at the expense of the company, and the Government. The building comprised three stories. The fire originated in the dormitory on the third storey shortly after 10 o'clock, where the 150 students in attendance were asleep. There was much confusion when the alarm was sounded, but fortunately the building was cleared before anyone was injured. The flames spread with great speed, and by midnight every department in the building had been utterly destroyed.

The loss will total $35,000, and is covered by insurance in various companies. As the Institute was situated without the city limits the local brigade did not respond in a body, but sent three representatives to assist. There was absolutely no water supply available, however, and nothing could be done to check the progress of the flames. Much of the furniture and interior fittings of the Institute were saved, including a silver tea service and a large Bible, which were the gifts of Queen Anne. Inscribed in the Bible are the names of King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Parish Priest Burned to Death.

Montreal, April 20.—Very sad news has just been received from St. Paul, Joliette County. Friday night the Presbytery took fire, and the parish priest, Rev. Joseph Damase Dupont, perished in the flames.

In a Burning Stable.

Winnipeg, April 20.—The stables of Joseph Bouchet at Laurier were burned down on Friday night. In attempting to rescue his horses from the flames Bouchet lost his life. He was one of the most prosperous farmers in the district.

Fires Cause Labor Famine.

St. John, N.B., April 20.—Despite the exaggerated reports of the loss in Friday's fire at the Sand Point Ocean terminus docks, $50,000 will be the outside figures, the two large sheds, elevator conveyors, cattle pens and wharf under pinnings being the properties damaged most.

A difficulty which St. John has now to face is a scarcity of building labor. Before the two big Friday fires all available workmen in the city and suburbs were engaged to erect over half a million's worth of property in the city before fall. Now the amount of work has increased, and importing labor will probably result.

Historic Bachelors.

Many eminent men whose names are household words and who have left their impress upon the world were bachelors. Beethoven, Schubert, Bellini, Cinarosa and Donisetti, all great German musical composers, were bachelors. John G. Whittier, our American poet, was a bachelor. Kant, the great philosopher; Erasmus, the scholar and philosopher; Leibnitz, the German mathematician; Humboldt, the philosopher; Galliei, who discovered the application of the pendulum and that the earth revolves; Hugens, the German astronomer who discovered Saturn's ring and one satellite; Leibig, the chemist; Dr. Hahnemann, the originator of homeopathy; Dr. Franz Joseph Gall, the originator of phrenology, and Guericke, the inventor of the air pump, were all bachelors.

Wear

A picture is only the right colors put in the right place—but it takes a genius to put them there.

So in shoe-making it requires the highest specialized skill combined with materials on which it is safe to risk the "Slater" shoe reputation, to produce a shoe with the maximum of wear.

The real test of a shoe is its wear.

And wear is only good materials rightly put together.

IMPERIAL LIFE.

A Year of Unexceptional Prosperity and Achievements.

Toronto • • The Executive Officials of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, report that the year just ended has been one of exceptional prosperity and achievements. It is a well known fact that the Imperial Life's past record has been unequalled in life assurance experience in Canada, but the most sanguine of its numerous policy-holders and active representatives throughout the Dominion will be surprised to learn of the following magnificent results:—Applications for assurances aggregated over $4,500,000; the policies actually issued exceeded the large amount of $4,000,000; cash income totalled over $500,000; the accumulated assets reached $1,650,000, while the entire policies of assurance in force exceed $13,500,000. It was also stated that the interest income from investments was again more than sufficient to pay all of the death claims of the year.

GAMEY CASE GOES ON.

Will Only Adjourn For Sir Oliver's Funeral — Prosecution May Not Call Frank Sullivan.

Toronto, April 20.—The Gamey case will go on this morning at 10 o'clock, no adjournment being proposed before Wednesday, when the court will suspend for the afternoon out of respect to the late Lieut.-Governor.

As arranged, the first witness today, after the production of the exhibits from the Ontario and Standard Banks, is to be Mr. R. A. Grant.

What will follow is difficult to say, as there seems to be an impression that the prosecution will not call Frank Sullivan, and perhaps not Myers. No one anticipates the conclusion of the investigation before the middle or end of next week.

Counsel on both sides were busy on Saturday laying plans for the further development of the case. The defence will endeavor to produce evidence from the books of the Crossin Piano Company, and it is contended that Mr. Stratton's counsel have made good headway in the last day or two. Their witnesses are beginning to arrive, and it was announced last night that 30 or 40 were already in the city.

Mr. Johnston had received an advance of $1,000 from the Clerk of the Legislature for conduct money and payment of witnesses for the defence.

Legislature Tuesday.

The Legislature will resume tomorrow afternoon after the long adjournment, by which it had been hoped to avoid conflict with the Gamey inquiry. Business will be taken up at once, but it proposed to adjourn from Tuesday night to Thursday afternoon, on account of Sir Oliver Mowat's funeral. It is intended to proceed with despatch owing to the lateness of the season. The debate on the address will be resumed, and as Mr. Whitney moved the adjournment of the debate he will doubtless deliver his speech. How long the debate will last it is impossible to say. The lack of finality in the Gamey case at this stage may have a tendency to curtail discussion. As soon as the address has been passed the estimates will be presented, and in the meantime the consideration of ordinary legislation will be prosecuted.

An Aching Back.

Is the first indication of kidney disease, and should be taken as a signal of danger—a warning to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills while yet there is time to avoid the dreadful pains and certain fatality of this terrible disease. There is no guess work, no experimenting when you use this prescription. It brings relief in a remarkable short time, and because of its combined action of liver and kidneys, cures complicated cases which cannot be reached by any ordinary treatment.

An Artificial Comet.

Professor E. L. Nichols and Mr. G. F. Hull of Cornell university have obtained a very accurate reproduction of a comet's tail while experimenting with the pressure of light upon floating particles of extreme minuteness. A powder consisting of emery and the spores of puffballs was put in a vacuum tube from which the air was exhausted as completely as possible. When the rays from an arc light were concentrated upon the powder, the lighter particles were seen to be blown out as if repelled by the light, presenting a striking resemblance to a comet's tail. According to Arrhenius and others, this is analogous to the way in which the sun actually produces the tails of comets. The experimenters found that the effect upon the powder was of the same order of magnitude as would be expected from the value of the pressure of light deduced by them from other experiments.

A Prize For Housewives.

Particulars of a novel prize for the encouragement of housewives at Paris are announced. It is stipulated that claimants must be Parisians by birth, have been married six years and that their husbands, who must be in the service of the city or employed in a government office, do not receive a higher salary than $700 a year. The prize of $1,250 in cash is intended to reward the personal merit of spouses and goes to the one who by her own labor best supplements the earnings of her husband. Curiously enough, the wives of police officials are excluded. The fund to secure the annual reward has been bequeathed by M. Christine Couronne, a former chief clerk in the office of the minister of agriculture, and the only obligation subsequently resting on the winner is to place a wreath on the grave of the donor.

Well Paid Turks.

A Turkish ministerial portfolio is a sort of gold mine to the holder. It is not the vizier, however, who holds the richest claim, though his salary is £18,280 a year, which is also that of the war minister. The "plum" of Turkish officials is the admiralty, which is worth £16,800 a year, and the present holder is stated to have amassed a fortune of £2,400,000. The minister of foreign affairs has £8,800, and finance comes next, with a thousand lower, financial ability being apparently esteemed in inverse ratio to the need for it. The lowest salary is that of the minister of mines, though it is rather higher than that of the premier of England. The sum is £5,580.—London Tit-Bits.

An Educated Indian.

Two roistering young New Yorkers entered a cafe on Broadway recently and jostled against a sallow faced little man wearing a sombrero. He turned, expecting an apology, and was insulted by one of them. The little man's right fist shot out to the swell's jaw, lifting the insulter off his feet and knocking him senseless. The assailant was arrested and in court told the magistrate that he was Wounded Buffalo, son of Chief Running Elk of the Mohawk tribe. He learned to box at the Carlisle school, where he played with the football eleven. On hearing the circumstances the magistrate discharged him.

HURRAHS WERE FEW

Rev. Mr. Barr's Cool Reception by Colonists at Saskatoon.

BARR THREATENS RIFLE FIRE.

If Colonists Should Do as They Threatened, Take Baggage Without Permission or Agreement For Blanket Release —Some Rather Peculiar Charges Against Englishmen of the Party—Prairie Fires.

Winnipeg, April 20.—The Rev. Mr. Barr met with a decidedly cold reception on arriving at Saskatoon last night. No crowd had gathered to greet the prime mover of the big immigration scheme, and not a cheer was given until he reached his tent, when a few belated "hurrahs" were given by a small number of colonists.

Many of the newcomers yesterday took possession of the tents they had purchased and refused to pay the dollar demanded by Barr's agents, while a few paid under protest. The non-delivery of the baggage caused most trouble, and threats of raid on baggage tents were freely made. Impelled by the threatened trouble, Barr called a meeting and asked the colonists to consent to his signing a blanket release for all baggage and distribute it himself. Some objected, and Barr told the crowd if the raid was made that the mounted police would fire upon the crowd.

"Don't be afraid your baggage will be stolen," said Barr, "Canadians will not steal it, and I can't say that much for our Englishmen. We had thieves amongst our party. Things were missed on shipboard. They even robbed me, more shame to them." Despite these remarks the crowd kept its temper.

Prairie fires threaten the camp, and a party has been organized to fight the flames, provided the fire comes nearer camp. Because of the non-distribution of baggage many were forced to sleep on the ground. They have no rubber blankets yet, though they were purchased from Barr.

The journey westward may not commence until next week. Some of the colonists are short of money, and are selling rifles and other superfluities.

Good Health for Capital.

Maintaining good health is to the majority of people the most vital question in the world and nature affords no more efficient strengthener for the system and restorative for the nerves than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Naturally, gradually, and certainly it forms new, red corpuscles in the blood, creates new, healthy, nerve cells, and puts into the system the snap, energy and vitality that defies disease.

FOR WARMER DAYS.

Smart Toques of Tulle — Unlined Wraps of Moire.

Cape collars are charming and will take the place of stoles, which in many cases have been very unbecoming. They look most effective over blouses or on tailor made coats. In fact, they are adaptable to nearly every costume of the day and will be as much a feature of the early spring fashions as the wide, pointed belt.

A smart toque of folded plain gray net was seen recently at an afternoon tea. It was trimmed with a large gray ostrich feather paling to white and at the very farthest tip touched with black.

It was further adorned with a scarf of the new gray lace.

Unlined coats of moire will be both picturesque and useful spring garments made with the three shoulder capes and a stole effect down the front.

Homespun in pale shades is smart for spring walking suits. White serge and all white wool goods will have a greater vogue than ever this season.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

The "Huntsman's Cup."

The "huntsman's cup," or pitcher plant, is conceded to be one of the earliest, if not the earliest, of the wild flowers of America to become known to Europeans. References occur in relation to it as early at 1570, when a Lisbon physician named Launanus sent it to a contemporary as the leaves of the frankincense tree. It appears that two sailors brought the curious leaves with some resin from the pine trees growing near, and Launanus supposed they belonged together. Much confusion occurred and much wonderment was expressed as to what curious tree with such leaves could be found in America giving such "sweete odoure when the gum was burned," and, strange to say, most attempts to clear up the mystery resulted in greater obscurity.

Freak Calculation.

We all like to puzzle our brains over things which give certain and strange results, but which we cannot explain. Here's a puzzle that puzzles everybody. Take the number of your living brothers, double the amount, add to it three, multiply the result by five, add to it the number of living sisters, multiply the result by ten, add to it the number of deaths of brothers and sisters, subtract 150 from the result. The right hand figure will be the number of deaths, the middle figure the number of living sisters and the left the number of living brothers.

A Feat of Horsemanship.

For the sake of a wager a remarkable feat of horsemanship was some years ago accomplished by a sporting nobleman in a certain London mansion. He made a bet with a a friend that he would ride his pony from the ground floor of the house to the top and down again. His steed required a good deal of persuasion to attempt the task, but it was finally performed, though the damage done to the stair carpets and other things amounted to almost $1,000, which had to be paid by the winner.

Hasty Afterthought.

"Policeman," said the stranger, addressing the officer who was guarding the muddy crossing, "can you direct me"—

Here he slipped and fell.

—"to the nearest place," he continued, gathering himself up and surveying his soiled garments, "where they clean clothes?"

His Reputation.

Upgardson—On the strength of your recommendation I lent Bilcombe $5 the other day, and now I find he's a confirmed deadbeat that never pays his debts. You told me he was a man of established reputation.

Atom—So he is. That's the reputation he has established.

Maintaining the Proportion.

Mrs. Nagston—Why, my dear, the last time I heard you tell that story it was only $12 instead of $25 that you lost.

Mr. Nagston—Well, this crowd I'm telling it to is twice as big as that one was.

All the World's a 'Pothecary Shop.

Senso—Ruyter is not an author; he's a born chemist.

Tinso—Why?

Senso—Every novel he writes becomes a drug on the market.

A Big Difference.

Madge—Don't you think a girl should marry an economical man?

Dolly—I suppose so, but it's just awful being engaged to one.

MUNYON'S FREE DISTRIBUTION

10,000 Vials Of His Famous

RHEUMATISM CURE

TO BE GIVEN AWAY.

WILL BE DISTRIBUTED ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM THE OFFICE OF THE "EXAMINER."

Prof. Munyon Cordially Invites Physicians, Sceptics and Don't-believers to Take Advantage of this Offer and Report through the Newspapers of Peterborough.

THE DISTRIBUTION WILL COMMENCE PROMPTLY 9 A. M., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22ND.—FOR ONE DAY ONLY.

"No Punishment is too Severe for those who Deceive the Sick." —MUNYON.

"Six years ago I announced to the citizens of Peterborough that I had discovered a positive cure for Rheumatism, and to prove my assertion I distributed nearly 80,000 vials in the Province of Ontario. The name of each person who accepted a vial of this cure was taken and each person was invited to report through the medium of the newspapers the result of his experience with this remedy. It will be remembered that many hundreds of testimonials were published from people who declared most emphatically that this remedy had positively cured them. Many testify that three or four doses of these little sugar-coated pellets relieved them entirely from all pain. Affidavits were taken showing that one or two bottles had cured old chronic cases which had battled the skill of leading physicians in Canada.

"Notwithstanding these unimpeachable facts, there are thousands of people in Ontario to-day suffering from Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. They have tried so many remedies without benefit that they have little faith in anything they see advertised.

"It is to overcome the prejudice of this class of people that I have decided to make another free distribution of this cure. I want the public to know the truth about this specific. I want every physician, no matter how prejudiced he may be, to procure as many vials of this remedy as he may desire and make a thorough test of it. I know that it will relieve nearly all rheumatic pains in a few hours. It does not put the disease to sleep; it drives it from the system. It enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the general health. The remedy has a larger sale throughout the civilized world than any other remedy. I emphatically state that this cure will do all that I claim for it. There is no 'Perhaps it will cure' or 'Guess it will cure,' but it cures and cures permanently.

"This distribution must not in any sense be considered a charity, but as a scientific investigation, which should interest the rich as well as the poor. If my Rheumatism Cure will do all that is claimed for it, then every physician should give it his endorsement and every sufferer should resort to its use. If it does not do what is claimed for it, then it should be denounced and prohibited by law. By this free distribution the public, who are the most interested, become the judges."—MUNYON.

SIR OLIVER'S DEATH UNIVERSALLY MOURNED.

Public Tokens of Respect—Pulpit References to the Deceased Statesman.

The manner in which the news of the passing away of Sir Oliver Mowat was received, indicates how highly in the esteem of the public he was held. Flags were hung at half-mast on all churches and public buildings, and on many private flag staffs.

In the churches, more or less extended reference was made to the deceased statesman. Mention was made of the great loss the country had sustained by the death of one who had in life set such a high standard of political and personal morality, whose stand had been uniformly for the right, and who, as a patriot, was an example to the young men of this day and generation.

AN EXPLANATION AND CORRECTION.

The Facts Regarding Report of a Certain Case of Contagious Disease.

In an article which appeared in the Examiner of Friday, respecting a report of a case of infectious disease, received from a member of the Health Board, it appears that unwittingly a version of the circumstances not in accord with the facts, was made public. Instead of, as alleged there being any neglect on the part of the physician mentioned, the Examiner is advised that unusual pains was taken by the physician in question to comply with the requirements of the law and confine the case of contagious disease as closely as possible to the patient attacked.

The Examiner is informed and has reason to believe that the circumstances following comprise the facts in regard to the case.

The physician referred to at 8 o'clock in the evening was able to diagnose the case as one of scarlet fever. At 9 o'clock that same evening he took his own horse and buggy and conveyed the sick child to the hospital and instructed the lady of the house to fumigate the premises by burning sulphur, as a preliminary measure to the action that the Board of Health would take on assuming official charge of the premises. At the same time he informed the occupants that the case was one of contagious disease, and that they would necessarily have to be quarantined and the house placarded.

On being asked if the quarantine could not be avoided he informed the lady in question that the regulation of these matters was entirely with the Medical Health Officer and the Board of Health.

Immediately after taking the child to the Hospital, the physician was summoned to the country, where he was professionally occupied until a very late hour that night or, rather, an early hour on the following morning. At nine o'clock that morning the Medical Health Officer, Dr. Young, was notified by the said physician, of the occurrence of the case of contagious disease, and thereafter the matter was under his official care. While the law requires that cases of contagious diseases must be reported to the Board of Health within 24 hours, in this case the notification was given at the earliest possible moment and within 12 hours of the time of the disease being identified with scarlet fever.

The Examiner regrets that it was misinformed in such a way as to do injustice to the physician in question, whom the facts presented, clearly and explicitely absolve from even any suspicion of neglect or indifference. Whatever was printed by the Examiner was done in good faith and trusting to the correctness of the information supplied from an official source, which, however, declined to give the name of the physician, and regret is expressed that even thus unwittingly, injustice has been done.

THE CHURCHES.

ALL SAINT'S CHURCH.

Rev. W. L. Armitage preached special sermons on the observance of the Lord's Day, at both services at All Saint's church yesterday. In the morning the anthem was "On Christ Thy Love," in which Miss Mary Rush took the solo part, while the anthem at the evening service was "Come See the Place Where Jesus Lay," Mr. J. Legg taking the solo.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

At St. Andrew's church yesterday Rev. J. G. Potter preached at both services. In the morning Mr. Potter paid a glowing tribute to the life and worth of Sir Oliver Mowat and at the evening service special prayer was offered for the family of the late Lieut.-Governor. The musical service was of an interesting character. In the morning the choir sang an Easter Carol, and Miss Florence Miller rendered in a very effective manner "Easter Day has Crowned Him King." In the evening the choir rendered "Come Unto Me" and Mr. Jas. Morgan sang in a very spirited style "Fear Not, O Israel."

ST. LUKE'S.

At St. Luke's church yesterday, in accordance with the Bishop's pastoral, the day was observed as a day of intercession for the observance of the Lord's Day. The Rector preached a forcible sermon on the claims of the Lord's Day and urged his people to do their utmost in preserving the sanctity of the day of rest.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

In keeping with the Lord's Day week, appointed by the Lord's Day Alliance, a very strong and forcible sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, at the morning service, on the subject of the Sabbath Day, was especially good. The morning anthemns were "See now the Altar," and "Hail, Mighty Victor." In the evening the choir sang the anthem "Saviour, Breathe an Evening Blessing," and during collection the selection, "O Calvary" was sung by the choir unaccompanied, the expression and blending being exceptionally good.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Rev. J. C. Davidson, of St. John's, and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, of St. Luke's church last night exchanged pulpits. In his address Rev. E. A. Langfeldt complimented the congregation of St. John's upon the excellent offering they made on Easter Day in behalf of the Rectory. Rev. Mr. Langfeldt also made reference to the death of Sir Oliver Mowat, Lieutenant Governor of the Province. He paid a glowing tribute to his character and mind that marked the life of Sir Oliver. Canada, by his death sustains the loss of a great and honourable man. His place in Canadian public life will indeed be hard to fill.

ASHBURNHAM MAY GET THE FACTORY.

Construction Expert is Looking for a Suitable Site.

Mr. F. Bartlett, local superintendent of construction for the National Construction Company of the United States, who have the contract for building the Peterborough Sugar Company's factory, is making bearing tests to-day on the Buck property on the east shore of the Little Lake.

If the foundation soil is found to be satisfactory it is probable Ashburnham will secure the sugar factory.

A LECTURE

Will be Delivered To-night in the Opera House.

The public is once more reminded of the address to be given this evening on "The Waterways of Canada," in which special mention will be made to the Trent Valley Canal. The lecture will take place in the opera house, and will be illustrated by many stereopticon views by Mr. R. M. Roy. Only recently Mr. Rogers delivered this lecture to the Chamber of Commerce, Montreal, and the newspapers of that city made very favourable remarks on the address.

It is assured that the address will be a most interesting one, more especially on account of the special mention which the Trent Valley Canal will receive, and a very large number of people are expected to attend.

There will be no admission fee, and ladies will be cordially welcomed.

EAST PETERBOROUGH LICENSE COMMISSIONERS

Met on Saturday and Considered Applications for Renewal of License.

The East Peterborough License Commissioners met in Peterborough on Saturday, and considered the applications and granted licenses to the following:

Havelock, Thos. Read, M. McNicoll, Wm. Dineen.
Norwood, J. A. McNicoll, E. J. King.
Keene, M. Kennealey.
Burleigh, Harry Mann.
Burleigh Falls, H. W. Darcy.
Westwood, J. Heffernan.
Warsaw, Fred Morgan.
McCracken's Landing, John Morgan.

Applications were received from T. J. Wilson, Apsley, and S. English, of Keene, but not granted.

A petition was presented signed by 388 ratepayers and citizens in and around Keene that only one license be granted in Keene. A motion was passed by the commissioners in view of such a large petition, granting only one license.

The application from Apsley was not accompanied by a petition from the majority of ratepayers as required by law, and the commissioners did not grant a license as they did not think a tavern necessary.

All licensees are requested to deposit their money and forward their receipt at once.

IMPORTANCE ATTACHED TO TRANS-CANADIAN RAILWAY

By the British Military Authorities in the Event of War.

Great importance is attached by the British military authorities to the Trans-Canadian Railway, which is to traverse a section of British-American territory so far north of the boundary line that it cannot be interfered with by a raid across the border in the event of a war with the United States. It runs from Chicoutimi, just north of Quebec, to Port Simpson on the Pacific, and follows a course from 300 to 600 miles north of the frontier, to the harbour bn James Bay, where it has its western terminus, and which is easily defended. It brings Yokohama 2,269 miles nearer to Liverpool than by the route via New York and San Francisco, the distance being only 9,830 miles, as compared with 12,089 miles. Besides being shorter the grades of the Trans-Canadian are more passable than those of any other Pacific railway, the highest elevation being only 2,000 feet, as compared with 4,425 at Crow's Nest, and 5,400 at Kicking Horse. The distance from Quebec to Vancouver by the Canadian Pacific Railway is 3,078 miles, and from Quebec to Port Simpson by the Grand Trunk, 3,400 miles, whereas between the two points last named by the Trans-Canadian is only 2,330 miles. The new road runs through a rich agricultural district, and is abounding in mineral wealth and the products of the forests. Owing to the trend of the isothermal lines and the influence of the Chinook winds the climate is much milder than the high latitude would indicate. The eastern end of the line is already under way and for the first section of sixty miles a subsidy of $3200 a mile has been granted to be increased to $6,400 a mile if the cost of the road exceeds $15,000. The same grant is extended for the whole length of the line besides liberal grants of land. The recent visit of Col. George Earl Church, civil engineer, an American soldier of the civil war, resident in London for the past twenty five years, was with reference to the construction of this road.

The First Iron Ship.

The first iron ship has more reputed birthplaces than Homer, according to Chambers' Journal. Both the Clyde and the Mersey claim pre-eminence in this respect. Sir E. J. Robison of Edinburgh designed an iron vessel in 1816, which was not launched till three years later, and it is said that an iron boat was worked on the Severn even as far back as 1787. Steel was not used in the construction of merchant ships' hulls until 1859. Old salts were not alone in their belief that wood was meant by Providence to float, but iron to go to the bottom. A naval constructor of some repute once said: "Don't talk to me of iron ships. They are contrary to nature." Now none but small craft are built of wood in England.

THREE WOMEN WERE BURNED TO DEATH.

Railway Accident on the Erie Road This Morning—Coaches all Burned.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Jamestown, New York, April 20th.—Train No. 4 on the Erie Railway, which left this city at three o'clock this morning, ran into a freight train at Red House. The coaches are reported all burned, except the last sleeping car. The freight train was taking a siding when the express dashed into it at a high rate of speed. Three women in the Cincinnati sleeper were burned to death; names unknown. A brakesman, named Hotchkiss, on the freight, was killed. Edward Gable, of Marion, O., express messenger, is at the hospital here; one leg has been amputated.

SUDDENLY EXPIRED.

Mrs. David Crowley Expired Yesterday Morning.

The somewhat tragic death of Mrs. Crowley, wife of Mr. David F. Crowley, will come as a shock to her many friends. The deceased went to bed on Saturday night in good health and intended going to early mass in St. Peter's Cathedral, as she was accustomed. On finishing her toilet she commenced lighting the fire and in doing so fell dead, apparently without a struggle.

Mrs. Crowley lived on lot 19, 12th concession of Otonabee, and was 54 years of age. She was very highly respected and was an energetic member of her church. The deceased leaves ten children, Mrs. Driscoll, Mrs Slattery, and eight others residing at home. The community extends its sympathy to the family in their sad and sudden bereavement.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday morning from the family residence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

LINDSAY'S RATE IS STRUCK AT 28 MILLS.

The Council of That Town Holds Some Very Late Sessions.

At a meeting of the Lindsay Council on Friday night the rate for the current year was struck at 28 mills on the dollar.

The Lindsay Post says: "If our aldermen continue to meet almost nightly, as has been the record since the beginning of the year, it would be a good stroke of business on the part of one of our restaurant men to appear on the scene about eleven p. m., with a basket of sandwiches and some choice cigars. The mental strain upon the aldermen is very great, and if in addition the inner man is to be starved and unduly disciplined, there is a strong possibility that in the near future the council will be occupying a wing in the Ross Memorial Hospital.

PORT HOPE PEOPLE WANT AN HOSPITAL.

They Held a Meeting on Friday Night Last.

Hume, the medical men of the town, Messrs. J. F. Clark, J. H. Helm, G. H. Ralston, Dr. Symonds, the Secretary R. A. Mulholland and Mayor White, was appointed to make enquiry as to cost of building, maintenance, equipments, and all general and necessary information, and to report at the next meeting.

HOW SHOP GIRLS ARE WATCHED

(From Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May.)

The girls in a large department store are, as a rule, carefully watched, not only in the store, but out of it. The buyer of each department knows pretty well the habits of his saleladies; knows how much it costs them to live and how they spend their evenings. It is easy for him to get the information, not merely through the store detectives, but in many other ways. The buyer is, as a rule, a tolerant person, who cares only for two things; namely, that the girls "deliver the goods."—i.e., that they make big "books"—and that they appear respectable. If they stay out so late at night that they do not reach the store promptly in the morning, they may be discharged, transferred from one department to another, or merely not rise in the way of salary—depending on the degree of their misdemeanor. If the girl's book is unsatisfactory, she is simply discharged or transferred, and no reason is given, but if she is wise, she knows the reason why. If, on the other hand, the girl is a good seller, the buyer will excuse a great deal in the way of irregularity of habits. As long as a girl sticks closely to business, she is allowed a great deal of freedom; but when her "book" begins to suffer, it is time for her to "look out."

THE LATE SIR OLIVER MOWAT.

The death of Sir Oliver Mowat means the passing away from the stage of action of one of the most, if not the most, distinguished of native Canadians. Sir Oliver was born at Quarry, now Wellington, street, Kingston, on July 22nd, 1820, and of the eighty-three years of his eventful and fruitful life, over three score have been passed in public relations, representing distinguished and brilliant service to his native country and province. Sir Oliver was a school mate of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, who was, however, some five years his senior, and later he was a student in Sir John's law office in Kingston for four years, completing his legal studies in Toronto, afterwards ultimately attaining the dignity of vice-chancellor. His public career in a representative capacity began in 1857, when he became an alderman of Toronto, and in this comparatively humble position he showed the same administrative ability, broad outlook, and energetic application which marked his political activities in a more elevated arena. What is called Sir Oliver's "political good fortune," which was likely the outcome of first rate ability, energy and devotion to the public interests, began with his election as representative of South Ontario by an overwhelming majority over the tried representative of the riding. Sir Oliver entered Parliament as the acknowledged first lieutenant of Hon. George Brown, and, after being two days Provincial Secretary in the short-lived Brown-Dorion administration, shared with his leader the fate meted out by the Conservative "double shuffle," and stood shoulder to shoulder with him in the battle that led to the adoption of the principle of representation by population. The "Fathers of Confederation" are numerous according to the partiality of political admirers, but Sir Oliver Mowat has some claim to be more than the father—the grandfather—of Confederation. As early as 1859, at a great Liberal convention held in Toronto, Sir Oliver made a brilliant speech in which he advocated federal union of Upper and Lower Canada as a remedy for the unsatisfactory conditions the Legislative Union had developed. He was a member of the special committee which in 1864 recommended a movement in the direction of Confederation as a solution of the inter-provincial dead-lock that had resulted. He was also a member of the celebrated Quebec conference, whose seventy-two resolutions formed the basis of the subsequent Confederation Act. The original draft of this Act was made by Sir Oliver Mowat, whose abilities as a constitutional lawyer, then fully recognized, were so splendidly exhibited in his provincial career as Premier of Ontario. He was eight years on the bench to which he was elevated by Sir John Macdonald, an appointment which Sir Oliver justified by the dignity and ability and fairness which he brought to the discharge of its duties.

It is chiefly, however, in relation to provincial politics that Sir Oliver Mowat achieved his work and won his best deserved laurels. The history of his connection with the legislative and administrative affairs of the province would be its history for a quarter of a century. In 1871 John Sandfield Macdonald, who was Premier of the first Government of Ontario after Confederation, was defeated and was succeeded by Hon. Edward Blake, with Hon. Alexander Mackenzie as his first lieutenant. At that time one man could occupy concurrently a seat in the Legislature and in Parliament. In 1872 dual representation, as the practice was called, was abolished, and these two prominent men deciding for the Dominion Parliamentary career the Liberal party in Ontario became leaderless. Sir Oliver Mowat consented to retire from the bench and enter the field of politics as leader of the Liberal party in Ontario. He became Premier and Attorney-General in 1872, and was elected for North Oxford. For nearly a quarter of a century Sir Oliver occupied this position and achieved at the same time a record for length of service and distinction of service reached by no other political leader in the history of this or any other country. Sir Oliver Mowat appealed to the country on the occasion of six general elections and on every occasion he carried his party to victory. The secret of such unprecedented popular favour extended to a statesman is not far to find. Sir Oliver Mowat amply earned and fully justified the extraordinary confidence reposed in him. To tell how he earned this confidence in any way approximating to detail would mean a large book. His name is associated as the active author of the magnificent mass of legislative enactment that makes the laws of Ontario one of the completest and most advanced codes that ever served the purposes of a free people; and the moving spirit of an administrative record such as never before in an equal time contributed so largely to the progress and happiness and general betterment of a people. As Attorney-General the legislation of all these years passed through his hands. He particularly improved our judicial system, abolishing the distinction between law and equity, and simplifying and cheapening procedure. He created the portfolios of the Minister of Education and the Minister of Agriculture, which were before that time merely sub-departments. Not only did Sir Oliver do great work in enacting laws and administering public affairs in the public interests, but his splendid abilities as a constitutional lawyer, and his ardent patriotism, made him the victor in many a hard fight to maintain the legislative rights and maintain the territorial integrity of the province. It is to his patriotic persistence and legal acumen, that Ontario now possesses the immense stretch of country known as New Ontario, and now the centre of a great industrial, commercial and agricultural development. This is only one of the many constitutional victories Sir Oliver won for Ontario. No attempt could here be made to detail a thousandth part of the splendid services Sir Oliver Mowat rendered this province. His best monument is the work in the province he has left behind him; a province the best governed, by virtue of a code of laws and a legal procedure of unsurpassed excellence; a province with the best educated, most moral, most progressive people in the world; a province with the highest intellectual and moral development, most widely diffused amongst the people; a province which stands in agricultural achievements, at the head of the provinces of this dominion, and as the peer in this regard of any known country; a province in all ways, morally, intellectually, commercially, industrially, one is justifiably proud to claim as his home. After having done so much for Ontario, Sir Oliver lent his aid to the Dominion, to enter upon a higher plane of government, and a brighter degree of progress. He took part in the Dominion election campaign of 1896, under a promise to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to enter his Cabinet in case he succeeded in the elections. Sir Oliver became Minister of Justice and at the same time accepted a seat in the Senate where he was the leader. Retiring from the Cabinet he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, 1897. Though this position was one of comparative rest yet he conscientiously devoted himself to the duties of the office while his strength lasted, and may be said to have died in harness. No space, such as the columns of a newspaper afford, can permit of anything like an attempt to indicate even in bare outline the great extent and scope of Sir Oliver Mowat's life work or to contain an eulogium such as the man and his work, deserve. Sir Oliver Mowat will have little need of a monument. He has erected his own. In the spirit in which Sir Christopher Wren, in his pardonable egotism, placed upon the walls of St. Paul's Cathedral, "If you seek my monument, look about you," one can speak of Sir Oliver Mowat. If one wishes to see the monument of Sir Oliver Mowat, let him look upon the Province of Ontario, with its great institutions, its charter of civil and religious liberties, under which Sir Oliver ranged every creed and class of citizens upon a perfect equality; upon its educational institutions, upon its broad, liberal laws with the great machinery for their enforcement, with its free, happy people, with all its conditions and equipments of progress and the attainment of prosperity and happiness. Let him refer all these things to Sir Oliver Mowat as their chief agent and source, and he will behold, more enduring than brass, the monument of the great and good man who has just passed away.

We Must Move Them.

If you have any idea of the trouble and expense of moving granite and marble monuments and tombstones, you will understand our anxiety to sell what you see standing in our yard rather than have to move them to another stand. Our landlord is preparing to erect a new brick block on our corner, and rather than move our stock, we are asking but a fraction of what our monuments are worth to save moving. NEW FAIRVIEW CAMP IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

It is now Working Very Successfully —About the Stamp Mills.

Fairview, B. C., April 8, 1903.

This camp is now the scene of considerable activity in the mining line. The New Fairview Corp. are steadily running thirty stamps, and last week the large cyanide plant was finished and the tailings are being treated. In conversation with the superintendent, (Charles Ostenburg) while showing your superintendent through the plant, it was learned that the cyanide plant is working very successfully, and it is now fully demonstrated that the ore is perfectly adapted for that mode of treatment. There have been many difficulties during the experimental stage of the business, but all have been satisfactorily overcome, and the whole plant is working without a hitch.

The large veins of the Stemwinder have been so often described that it will be unnecessary to go further than to state that recent operations have demonstrated that they are larger than ever. It will probably give your readers an idea of the ease with which the ore can be broken into the chutes, when I state that two machine drills are keeping the mill supplied with over 100 tons per day.

There are only 17 men in the mine, including timbermen, and the foreman states that when the full mill is running and crushing 150 tons per day, that he will not require over 24 men altogether in the mine. The ore is trammed to pockets on the different levels and from there hoisted to a large bin 75 feet above the surface, in a skip, which dumps automatically. From this bin it runs over a grizzly which sifts out the fines to a rock breaker, which is only run in the day time. From the bin below the breaker the ore is carried to the mill, a distance of about 150 yards, requiring the service of one carman. It is deposited by side dumping car into the large mill bin, which has a capacity of 400 tons. From here it works automatically through the feeders into the stamp mill and over the plates where the free gold is caught and on to the concentrating tables, which extract the high grade concentrates, running from $150 to $500 per ton. These are sacked and shipped to a smelter. After leaving the tables the pulp runs in a flume on a gentle grade to the large cyanide mill a distance of about 400 yards, and is there filled into large vats, holding over 200 tons each. An ingenious arrangement invented by the superintendent, distributes the pulp evenly over the whole surface of the tank, and renders the leaching easy.

In the stamp mill only four men are employed, two by day and two by night. In the cyanide mill only two men are employed, one day and one night, in addition to the manager, Mr. T. D. Pickard, who is also the secretary of the Corporation. After the pulp is leached it is sluiced out through four large iron doors at the bottom of the tanks, and runs by gravity down to a lake a mile away. It takes about 3 days to go through the different operations in treating the ore, which is only handled once by manual labour, being the carring from the rock breaker to the stamp mill. Mr. Osterburg claims that the cost of milling and cyaniding the ore will not be over $1.00 per ton as soon as the full head of stamps are running. It is rumoured in town that a New York syndicate, represented by Dr. Wells, Mineralogist of Columbia University, have bonded the "Morning Star" mine, situated below the Stemwinder, and are actively developing it. A strike of very rich ore was made a few days ago. They are now down to the 200 foot level, and are working about 20 men. Prospects are very bright here, and the returns should add considerable to the output of the province.

GALWAY.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The concert at Kinmount on Monday, April 13th, proved a great success. The chief character, Paddy Doyle, was well acted by L. Brown, who kept the audience in roars of laughter. His wit, his humour and his brogue were perfect. Every action corresponded, and imitated exactly the Irish trait. De Buffer was also in his usual form. Miss Foley took the part of Peggy, and a more suitable character could not be found. She seamed naturally gifted in the Irish brogue. The landlord showed himself very strict in regard to the young people, especially his Irish servants. Ida and Harry showed great determination in their resolutions to marry, notwithstanding the objections of their fathers. The following was the caste of characters:—

Mr. Lovelady... ... ...Laurence Doherty
Ida Lovelady... ... ...Ermine Doherty
Paddy..... ....Lynn Brown
Harry Sterling... ... .B. Larrigan
DeBuffer..... ... ... Wm. Dalton
Peggy..... ....Alice Foley

The singing of Miss Foley, the Misses Wright, Miss Garden and L. Brown, was excellent. The orchestra of Bobcaygeon and Fenelon deserve much credit for the excellent music furnished. The recitations by Ettie Cain and Nellie Allen were much appreciated.

Nyslop Bicycles, Sundries and Tires of all makes are now on sale at Metheral's Bicycle Works. The Nyslop is the best this year. Call and let us explain our terms.

LIQUID FILMS.

Some Experiments With Knitting Needles, Threads and Soapsuds.

Two knitting needles are attached to each other by two threads at their ends to form a rectangle. On dipping into soapsuds and taking out by a third thread attached to the upper needle the rectangle becomes filled with a transparent film like a pane of glass. A fourth thread attached to the upright threads will be imbedded in the film in any position in which it may happen to fall. But if the film is broken below this thread it will be pulled up into a circular arch by the tension of the contracting film above.

The single arch may be changed to a double arch by pulling on a fifth thread attached to the middle of the fourth, but the latter will fly back to the form of the single arch if allowed to do so. An endless thread dropped on the soap film formed across a wire ring will lie in the position in which it falls until the film is pricked inside of the loop, when it at once becomes an exact circle.—New York World.

Schoolboys Who Never Play.

Broadly speaking, German schoolboys never play. They have no time to do so. They attend day schools forlorn of playgrounds and are so desperately overweighted with lessons that all their spare energy and vitality is used up in the endeavor to get through the work diurnally allotted to them. They really have no opportunity from the commencement of the school term to its close for running or jumping, playing at ball or marbles, paper chases or any of the other amusements to which English schoolboys, as a rule, devote themselves with an eager assiduity seldom displayed in the dry and thorny pursuit of knowledge.

When a German boy exhibits symptoms of exhaustion and debility, caused by overwork, his parents enter him at a gymnastic institution and compel him to attend one or two evening courses of "scientific calisthenics," very possibly at the expense of his position in his class at school. "Turnerei," however, is not presented to him in the light of play, but downright hard physical work, which may be productive of development to his muscle and benefit to his general health without affording him any keen sense of recreation.—London Society.

A Trip Around the World.

Did you ever play the game called trip around the world? It is the very thing for a children's party. Each player should be provided with a small notebook and a pencil. Blank dance cards, with the tiny colored pencils attached, are pretty for this purpose. The leaves should be numbered to correspond with various articles distributed about the room. The game is then to guess the country or city designated by each of these articles. A tiny jar of cold cream stands for Greece, a miniature pot of baked beans for Boston, a bottle of perfume for Cologne, a cigar for Havana, etc. The guesses should not be made too difficult, but just enough so to brush up the memories of laggard geographers. Prizes should be awarded to those who secure the greatest number of correct answers.

The Hill of Cellar Door.

I know a hill not far away
Where children always love to play.
The hill is straight and smooth and low;
For little folks 'tis better so.

The coasting there is very nice,
Without the cold of snow and ice;
You slide in summer, fall or spring,
But need not bother sleds to bring.

It is the safest hill I've found;
Sometimes you tumble to the ground,
But 'tis not far you have to fall
And would not hurt a child at all.

It's very near your home, and so
Your mother 'll always let you go,
For then she knows you're right near by
And she can hear you if you cry.

So up you scramble, down you slide,
And, oh, you have a jolly ride!
You always want to play some more
Upon the hill of Cellar Door!
—Washington Star.

A Simple Experiment.

A neat little experiment in electricity is to soak half a sheet of stout foolscap paper in water, drying it rapidly before a fire, spreading it while warm on a varnished table or dry woolen cloth and then rubbing the surface sharply with a piece of india rubber. The paper becomes so electrified that it will stick to a smooth wall or looking glass or attract bits of tissue paper like a magnet and on being laid upon a japanned tea tray which is stood upon three thoroughly dry goblets will cause the tray to give out sparks at a touch of the finger.

Canada's Prosperity.

Evidence has lately been forthcoming of the extraordinarily rapid advance of Canada in prosperity during the past year or two, which reveals by far the most satisfactory condition of things prevailing in any part of the British Empire at the present time. And its brightest feature is that not only is there no reason to doubt its continuance, but the prospect of a vast, indeed an almost limitless, expansion, is opened up by the reports of the undeveloped possibilities of the country.—St. James' Gazette.

The chief thing in life is to do something—to work.

BILLIARDS FOR WOMEN.

According to Shakespeare, Cleopatra Played the Game.

In France a gentleman is not ashamed to take his wife to see a professional billiard game. Frenchwomen are good billiard players and like to see all the fancy shots made by professionals as soon as they begin to attract attention. They read the billiard news in the daily papers and subscribe to journals published especially for billiardists. According to Shakespeare, women have played billiards from the time of Cleopatra. In 30 B. C. he makes the Egyptian queen summon Charmian to billiards. Mary, queen of Scots, was passionately fond of the game. On the evening preceding her execution she wrote to the archbishop of Glasgow that her billiard table had been taken away from her as a preliminary step to her punishment. The Empress Josephine used to rouse Napoleon from his gloomy moods by a game of billiards. Adelina Patti became disgusted with her English table and had one made in New York for which she paid $2,500.

The efficacy of billiards as a health restorer is beyond dispute. The motions gone through will reach every part of the body and operate on the entire system. They completely dispel languor and "that tired feeling." The tension of the muscles is tested and the blood sent in swifter circulation through the veins.

He Left the Stage at Hiero.

At an auction sale that lasted for the best part of a week the auctioneer's throat began to trouble him greatly, and to save himself as much as possible he had one of his employees read off the number and name of each article as it came up for sale. The assistant's pronunciation of such words as "marqueterie," "Francois," "Sevres," "Delacroix" and "Beauvais" was so weird that the audience "got on to him," and all those who were not too busily engaged in making bids were reading their catalogues to follow the assistant's blunders. He met his Waterloo when he started to read "Bronze and ormolu empire clock, set of three pieces, supported by Egyptian figures, chiseled"— And as he came to a full stop the catalogue readers burst into a roar of laughter that was inexplicable to the rest of the audience. The word after "chiseled" which the assistant simply refused to have a try at was "hieroglyphics."

Peculiarities of the Carnation.

The peculiarities of the carnation are such that under cultivation it has been made to take almost any character as to color or form of flower desired by the careful cultivator. It has been very popular with one generation of men and equally unpopular with the next. When in favor, the flowers increased in size, and the varieties became numbered by the hundreds. At one time fringed petals were in great demand and were secured; at another the smooth edged petals only found acceptance.

Two hundred years ago the gardeners thought the flowers imperfect if the calyx did not burst, and refractory flowers were knifed into fashion's line. But during the last 150 years the burst calyx has been deemed a defect, yet all efforts to prevent it in large flowers have not been wholly successful.

ST. THOMAS MAN GIVES ADVICE.

Tells His Friends to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for Kidney Pains.

Lew Dake, Well-known Hotel-keeper, Gives his Experience With Canada's Great Kidney Remedy.

St. Thomas, Ont., April 19. —(Special.)—Everybody in St. Thomas and the surrounding country knows Lew Dake, proprietor of the Dake House and one of this railway centre's most popular citizens, and many people know that for years he was the victim of a very aggravated form of Kidney Disease. To-day he is a sound, healthy man. He used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Speaking of the matter recently, Mr. Dake said:—

"I had been troubled for over five years with my Kidneys and pains in my back. Nothing I used could give me any relief till finally on the advice of a friend I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"By the time I had finished one box the pains and Kidney Disease were gone. That is over five years ago now, and as I have had no return of the trouble since, I think I am safe in concluding that the cure was permanent.

"I advise all my friends who are troubled in the same way to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all stages of Kidney Disease from Pain in the Back to Bright's Disease.

Charles G. D. Roberts' Animals.

Even when Mr. Roberts has yielded to a fad in order to keep the pot boiling—as, for instance, in his animal stories—he has introduced something of the ethereality which characterizes him when engaged on more congenial subjects. His animals do not talk like Esop's or Kipling's, but they have affections and instincts, which Mr. Roberts investigates and presents gracefully, says The Toronto Star. His love of nature, and his knowledge of its most subtle nuances, shine through everything he writes. As poet, novelist, short story teller, Mr. Roberts will always be found handling the fine tools. His is the art which pieces many little jewels together to make up a whole symmetrical and beautiful, and just large enough to be comprehended at a glance, and to be looked at again for pleasure of its shimmering detail.

SPRING'S LITTLE WORRY.

I want a nice two story house,
Built on the comfort plan—
Just big enough to hold in style
One woman and one man;
I want a frescoed little hall;
I want a winding stair;
I want the very soul of ease
Pervading everywhere.

I want six rooms—no more, no less—
And one room for the bath;
I want some plaster that will stick
To every single lath;
I want a nice big washroom and
A dining room that's light,
And every window in the house
Must be set good and tight.

I want—now, let me see—ah, yes,
I want the parlor small,
With room for chairs, a sofa and
Piano—that is all;
I want the kitchen fixed just so;
I want it trim and neat,
With places for the kitchen ware
And coolers for the meat.

I want a middle room upstairs,
To be my very own—
A back room where, in thinking mood,
I'll meditate alone,
And when I've thought my diagram
All out and nicely filled it
I'll bet I'll never find a man
To undertake to build it.

In a Hurry.

"So you asked old Crusty for his daughter, eh? How did you come out?"
"Through the window!"

"Hurry Up" Lacking.

Almost the first words which Italians learn in coming to this country are "Hurry up!" and this also expresses the first idea which they glean from their new environment. A young Italian who has been in this country just six months found, when he welcomed a younger brother at the end of that time, that there was already a slight difference in their point of view. In deprecating his brother's shortcomings to a friend he remarked:

"I see my brother ees too much Italian. I see ees not 'nuff hurry up."

No Sentiment.

THE SUPRARENAL GLANDS.

Surprising Theories About These Organs of the Human Body.

One of the stones which the builders of physiological theories had rejected bids fair to become the head of the corner. Dr. Sajous of Philadelphia has disclosed to his medical brethren some surprising theories about the ductless glands in the human body. There are two small organs called the suprarenal glands, placed just above the kidneys, which have been thought to be useless, but Dr. Sajous avers, as a result of fourteen years of investigation, that they are of vital consequence. They secrete a substance which carried to the lungs takes up oxygen and forms another substance which becomes mixed with the blood. It is this last substance, called adrenoxin, which does the work of supplying the tissues with oxygen, which has so long been credited to the red corpuscles. The suprarenal glands are connected by nerves with a small organ in the brain (the use of which has not been known) which governs them and regulates their absorption of oxygen. Dr. Sajous says that it is on this organ of the brain, called the anterior pituitary body, that all poisons work, and it fights them by stirring up the glands to take up more oxygen. More oxygen means more combustion, the burning up of poisons, of which the symptom is fever. A strong pituitary enables a man to lay in a good supply of oxygen and destroy disease germs, and now that the use of pituitaries is understood they can be stimulated on occasion by drugs, so that folks with weak ones may make a better fight against germs. Dr. Sajous considers that what we have been used to call vitality is simply pituitary efficiency. All this is good for the doctors to know, if it is so, and it is interesting anyway. It is always a satisfaction when a job is found for an organ that has been held to be useless. Some day it may be discovered that the vermiform appendix is a valuable anatomical asset and that no man who has lost his may reasonably aspire to be president. That the body should contain an organ the sole use of which is the enrichment of the surgeons who remove it is not reasonable.

Young Wasps Fried.

Young wasp grubs fried in butter do not at first sight appear to be the most alluring dish in the world, yet they have been pronounced delicious by those hardy experimenters who have tried them. Fed as they are upon the sweetest juices drawn from fruits and flowers, they naturally possess a delicate flavor. Perhaps the best way to prepare them is to bake them in the comb.—London Tablet.

An Unhappy Suggestion.

Miss Youngthyng—And what would you say, George, if I were to tell you I didn't believe one word you say regarding the lasting qualities of your affection?

George—I would say that you are far too wise for any ordinary man to marry. Goodby.

The Complaining Passenger.

"That man," said the Guilford avenue conductor, "is as inconsistent as he is ungrateful."

"Why, what is the matter now?"

"Why, t'other day he made a big kick because he had to hang on a strap, and now he's growling because he can't find a strap."

They Differ Much.

Ascum—Say, a "bibliophile" and a "litterateur" are the same, aren't they?

Newitt—Not much! A bibliophile is most pleased with first editions, but a litterateur struggles to achieve twenty-fifth or fiftieth editions.

If every man's mind was geared to work a little faster than his tongue, many rash things would be left unsaid. —Philadelphia Telegraph.

Emaciated by Kidney Disease

Suffered Greatly From Backache, Sleeplessness and Headache—Now Enthusiastic in Praising

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

One feature of kidney disease is the gradual loss of flesh and wasting away of the tissues of the body. Slowly and surely the victim feels strength and vigour ebbing away and realizes his awful condition. The following letter suggests a remedy which has brought back health and happiness to thousands of sufferers from kidney disease.

Mr. William E. Baldwin, Port Robinson, Ont., states: "I was for several years a great sufferer from kidney trouble from which dread disease I am now happily free. I had all the usual symptoms in an aggravated degree and at times was completely incapacitated with pains in the back, biliousness and headache. I had little or no appetite, insomnia resulted and my condition was really wretched. I became emaciated and grew despondent and hopeless of relief as I had taken treatment from doctors to no avail.

"Finally on the advice of a friend, I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and, after using a few boxes I was again enjoying health and vigour as the worst symptoms had entirely passed away. When I think of my present good health in comparison with my miserable condition of three years ago I would not go back to my former state for any amount of money. I may be considered enthusiastic over Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but, considering the benefit derived from them, I have every reason to be."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box. At all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 5

Some times when I wanted to cough and could not I would almost choke to death. My wife got me a bottle of DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP, and to my surprise I found speedy relief. I would not be without it if it cost $1.00 a bottle, and I can recommend it to everyone bothered with a cough or cold.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS GENEVIEVE WILSON.

"The Heroine of Manila" is Now a Health Inspector.

Miss Genevieve Wilson, society girl, army nurse, ministering angel to stricken soldiers in the far east, is health inspector for the civic sanitation of the Oranges, that wealthy residential section of New Jersey.

A woman of many titles is Miss Wilson, not bestowed by the government or incorporated institutions, but conferred on her by her admirers in the various sections of the world in which she has lived and worked. She is one of Virginia's fair daughters. Her father was a Confederate officer, and none had better claim to the title of "southern belle" than she.

She held her court among the young men and women of Virginia until she determined to forego the pleasures of the ballroom for the arduous duties of a hospital nurse. To fit herself for the caring for the sick of all nationalities she went abroad and mastered the German, Italian and French languages. Returning to America, she took up her course in St. Luke's hospital, Denver, where she won from admiring doctors the title of "Little Wonder." At the outbreak of the Spanish war she volunteered with the Red Cross and was sent immediately to Chickamauga. Her next step was to enter the service of the United States government as army nurse.

For one year she was stationed in the Philippines, and her brave deeds among the wounded soldiers there won the title of "the Heroine of Manila." Next she was sent to Nagasaki, where grateful patients named her "Angel." Seven months she spent in the land of the mikado, and when she was ordered home again she had made the circle of the globe.

Her last government appointment was at Fort Bayard, N. J., which position she resigned to go to the Oranges.

New Jersey is determined to decrease the death list from contagious diseases, and Miss Wilson's specific work is to carry out the plans of the Civic Sanitation association.—Philadelphia Press.

The Art of Dressing.

Women generally do not do justice to pretty gowns because they have not learned how to put on their things smartly or even neatly. They have acquired the art of dress, but not the still more subtle art of dressing. Puritanism dies hard in what has been termed our "great mediocracy." Even if money is abundant there is a rooted feeling that "true piety" can only be expressed by dowdiness. Dowdyism is a disease and a deadly one. It has its chief seat in the head (inside and outside) and in the neck, and is also the result of our too faithful fondness for old and shabby clothes.

To escape it one must avoid the Scylla of an untidily, unfashionably dressed head and the Charybdis of a badly arranged neck. A smart woman has all her gowns made at home, and yet she is never a dowdy. And why? Because she knows how to put them on. Her hair is well done, her neck smartly swathed, and her veils, gloves, shoes and boots are always fresh and perfect of their kind. Dowdies are born, not made. An undue humility has much to answer for. The typical "woman of no importance" soon goes to pieces on the rock of dowdyism. A few gowns, but many accessories, are an antidote to this dread disease.

False Ambition.

Ambition is an excellent thing, but unless its object is higher than to fit one merely for society then it is another name for foolish pride. No one can happily shine in society whose character is not of the right sort. Otherwise the shine soon wears off, showing the poor material beneath it. There are some women who enter into some kind of philanthropic work simply for the sake of the notoriety it will give them and not for the love of it. The highest ambition of some mothers is to have their daughters brilliant belles of society who will capture rich husbands. If their expectations are not realized, they become hopelessly disappointed. If the daughters had been trained in those gentle virtues that were overlooked for more showy accomplishments, they would undoubtedly have proved themselves more charming and agreeable companions. Unless a girl has a pure, noble and delightful character, then all her other accomplishments must fail to bring success.

Mending Embroideries.

A word as to mending embroideries. You should have with your pieces some narrow strips of fine cambric for mending edgings. Hem a strip neatly just below the scallops and also to the facing of the garment, gathering at the latter place, if the embroidery is gathered. Then, if the slit is just at the point where the edging joins the garment, it will be easy to hem the edge of the garment to the re-enforced embroidery, taking pains to distribute the gathers. If the break is farther up in the work, a new piece must be put in. When you have your embroidery thus protected, it will wear as long as the garment itself—a desirable thing, for nothing is more slovenly than to see a garment minus half its trimming or with the edging caught to it in such a manner as to lose half its width. Insertions are mended in the same way, being careful to have your strip of cambric wide enough to reach both sides of the insertion.

Mushroom Pincushion.

As a rival to the radish, tomato, apple and tiny pumpkin, which, fashioned of silk, appear on milady's dressing table as pincushions, the mushroom has made its debut. This is the quaintest and most captivating of all these reproductions and if it is skillfully made looks as if truly a woodland trophy. It is composed of cream colored silk, the top or umbrella stuffed with cotton to make it suitable to stick pins into. The mushroom is tinted skillfully in water colors, a shade of brownish yellow being used. The base of the pincushion consists of several tiny cushions of silk to suggest the fungous growth from which the mushroom springs. The "umbrella" is supported on a slender stalk of wire, covered with white silk.

A Clever Suggestion.

A hose attachment supplying twenty-five inches of small rubber pipe to the kitchen sink faucet and ending in a common spray nozzle will be found a great assistance to cleanly dishwashing. The force of the stream penetrates corners and seams of tinware not easily reached by the usual methods and does it so well that the most indifferent maid will welcome the service. It is in the corners and seams of cooking utensils that bits of food sometimes remain to decompose and perhaps produce ptomaine poisoning.

A Hint to Home Dressmakers.

A little mother, whose home duties are numerous and onerous as well, saves herself much time by a practical bit of forethought which all mothers with growing daughters are sure to appreciate. In making her little girl's dresses she takes a large tuck in the under side of the hem, and when the small gown is crawling up to the knees, instead of ripping out the hem and going to all the trouble of putting it in again, she has only to cut the stitches in the tuck and the little frock is lengthened.

Shrunken Flannels.

It is possible to wash flannels without shrinking them, but the average laundress does not know the process. Therefore it is worth while to know how to restore shrunken garments to their original size or something like it. Try laying the article to be restored on the ironing board and lay on it a piece of cheesecloth which has been wrung out of cold water. Press with a hot iron until the cheesecloth is perfectly dry. The garment will show a marked improvement.

A Door Stop.

Much damage may be done to a wall paper or even to the wall itself by the banging of a door handle or key against it. An easy device for preventing this, and a homemade one, is to take an empty spool, to pad the top with some wadding and to cover it all with some material as nearly matching the carpet in color as possible, then pass a brass headed nail through the spool and drive it into the floor a few inches from the wall or where you wish the door to stop.

Bedroom Windows.

Every bedroom window should be provided with a dark green shade to keep out the early morning sunlight. It need not be a heavy holland shade, which keeps out air as well as light. Side curtains of dark cheesecloth hung from a rod underneath the white shade are soft and thin enough to draw out of sight against the window frame and are effectual in creating a dim, religious light, conducive to slumber.

Cooking a Steak.

There is a right and wrong way to cook beefsteak. The wrong way is to put it in a cold pan and cook it for some time on one side, thus permitting the juice to escape. The right way is to put it in a pan containing a little boiling fat and to turn it at the end of a minute or so, thus sealing both sides and retaining all juice.

Neuralgia

Could Not Lie On Her Left Side.

WAS TROUBLED WITH PAIN IN HER HEART FOR SIX YEARS.

Expected Her Friends Would Find Her Dead.

Mrs. C. Bondreau, Campbellton, N.B., was completely cured by

MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

She tells of her experience in the following letter: "I was troubled with a pain in my heart and weakness for six years. Most of the time I could not lie on my left side. I consulted a doctor but got no relief and was completely discouraged. I did not think I would live long and expected my friends would find me dead. A friend brought me a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and I took them to please her, not thinking they would do me any good. I had not used half the box when I commenced to feel myself getting better and by the time I had taken two boxes I was completely cured and can recommend them to all sufferers from heart trouble."

OSTRICH LOGIC.

"When I can't see danger there is no danger." That's the logic of the ostrich which hides its head and exposes its body to the hunter. There are not a few people who seem to have gone to the ostrich to learn logic. The most dangerous enemies of humanity are the enemies which can't be seen, the disease breeding microbes which infect the blood. It is harder to get the microbe out of the blood than to keep it out, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does both, by purifying the blood and then keeping it pure.

If there are eruptions on the skin, boils, pimples, sores or other signs of impure blood, use Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which will purify the blood and cure the eruptions which come from it.

"My blood was all out of order, and I had to go to the doctor," writes Mrs. James R. Moss, New London, Stanly Co., N.C. "He gave me medicine which helped me for a short time. In the winter of 1895 I got worse than I had ever been. My tonsils were enlarged and my neck swollen all out of shape; my throat was sore and I could not cure it. My husband went for the doctor, but he gave me no encouragement. He helped me a little, but it did not last long. He attended me for twelve months, when I heard of a lady whose condition was like mine, who was taking your medicine and was getting well. So I secured some of the medicine and began taking it. In one week I was able to do my cooking. When I began taking the medicine I could sit up only a few minutes at a time, and I could rest or sleep only a little while at a time. My throat was so sore at times I could not even swallow sweet milk, and my tonsils were full of little eating sores. My left side was swollen out of shape and I could hardly get my breath. The doctor said I would not get well, but three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, three bottles of his 'Pellets,' three bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and the use of salt water did the work and cured me."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and its consequences.

CURIOUS SCENE IN GENOA.

A Street Where the Sun's Light Is Obscured by Drying Clothes.

One of the most curious scenes in all Italy is to be found in the laundresses' quarter in Genoa. This quarter consists of a short street which is reached by descending a few steps branching off from the main thoroughfare. Buildings of six stories rise on each side of the street, and from every one of their windows is stretched one or more clotheslines sagging with the weight of apparel of every kind and condition. An eternal shadow cast by hundreds of drying garments hangs over this quarter and makes it dark and gloomy. The pedestrian who looks upward toward the blue sky can see nothing but a cloud of variegated shape and color which effectively obscures the light of the sun.

In the center of the street below there stand in a sort of summer house a number of public tanks. Crowds of shrill voiced women gather day by day about this out of door laundry to exchange the gossip of the quarter and wash out their piles of soiled linen. From the appearance of the lines which stretch and intertwine far above the pavement it is to be judged that all the washing that is done in Genoa at all is done in this particular street.

Vernet at the Sea.

Vernet, the celebrated painter of sea pieces, eager in the study of nature, made several long voyages in his younger days in order to observe the various scenes which the changeful elements exhibit. In one of these excursions undertaken merely for the love of the art a most violent gale of wind arose, when Vernet, without attending to the perils with which he was surrounded, desired one of the sailors to lash him fast to some of the rigging.

Soon after this request was granted the storm increased, attended with thunder and lightning and with every circumstance that could add to the horror of the scene, and consternation and terror sat on every countenance, but in the young painter every emotion was lost in that of admiration, which so wholly engrossed his attention that he every now and then exclaimed in the most enthusiastic terms, "Good heavens, what a noble scene!"

True Blue.

The expression "true blue," which we hear so often, has not even an English parentage, but is said to have been a Spanish saying, which meant that the blood that filled the veins of the aristocracy of Spain was blue in color, while that of inferior mortals was more or less black, and the proverb that "true blue will never stain," instead of meaning, as it is generally supposed, that "a noble heart will never disgrace itself," actually refers to the "blue aprons" worn by butchers on account of their not showing blood stains—a far jump this from the blue blood of the haughty Spanish aristocrat to the humble apron of the butcher's boy.—London Lady.

Whales and Bluefish.

The amount of nourishment required to maintain the life of a whale is something which almost passes human imagination. As many as fourteen seals have been taken from the stomach of a sperm whale, says Nature, and his ordinary diet consists of squids, which often weigh several tons. The whalebone whale simply opens his mouth and takes in jellyfish by the wagon load. The bluefish also has an enormous appetite, and it has been estimated that it requires 10,000,000,000 sardines to feed 1,000,000,000 bluefish every summer.

DAINTY EFFECTS.

Immense Amount of Work Required on Hats and Gowns.

Many of the new blouses show the most intricate hand work, and such garments are undoubtedly costly. On all sides dressmakers are complaining of the extra work demanded of them and of the illogical behavior of their clients who grumble at having to pay higher prices when at least two yards extra material are demanded than formerly, not to speak of at least one-third as much work again.

The same applies to millinery, for the most effective headgear is that which shows a great amount of expert handwork. Truly this is a bad time for the amateur milliner. Every detail concerning hats must be perfect, and now that they are worn right off the face even the bandeau must be skillfully manipulated, to say nothing of the knots of ribbon resting on the hair.

Hats entirely composed of rich foliage are trimmed simply with a bow of pale colored ribbon. This idea is particularly effective when carried out in russet foliage, with a pale blue bow.

A little handkerchief sleeve of lace set on a crisscross band of velvet caught through tiny paste buckles is a fancy to be noted, and it forms a charming evening effect.

A fancy for floral decoration revives with the spring. Fuchsias, forgetmenots, clematis and silver grapes are prominent among the decorations not only of headgear, but of evening coiffure.

Split

The market had a good rally on the shorts.

The following despatches have been received by E. M. Poussett & Co.:—

New York, April 20th, 11.50 a.m.—Stock market sentiment of room is more inclined to take profits. London and West have been moderate sellers. Failure of strike on Man. to develop. Bull manipulation in that stock and in M.O.P. Wab. and Tex. is offset to bear pressures against R.G., and liquidation in the grangers and Trunks. Absence of outside buying very disappointing. Call money easy, free offerings at 4-1-2 per cent.

Cable rather disappointing in view of strength Saturday. Export demand last week kept up until end of week. It was strong feature of situation. Armour is a large buyer, and holders in this market say that unless he sells the pressure is not likely to be great. Tendency of crop conditions in Europe unfavourable until this change the exports will continue. Think would rather buy July wheat on breaks. Corn keeps strong on light receipts and bad weather. Demand is no better than fair, but stocks decreasing. There is a scarcity of contract of oats and cash prices are firm.

DENISON.

New York, April 20th, 9.45 a.m.— U. S. Steel meeting to-day. Manhattan labour trouble practically settled. Northern sec. hearing at St. Paul to-day. More liberal policy probable in Erie. Plenty of stock in loan crowd. Bank statement considered only moderately fair, and increase in loans unsatisfactory.

DOW, JONES & CO.

Grain,—Liverpool opens, wheat 1-8 penny lower; corn inactive, unchanged to 1-8 penny higher.

M. & M.

While bank statement was favourable, it hardly equalled the expectations of most traders, and effect on market had probably been discounted in any event so that profit-taking and realizing sales which followed caused loss of tone in list. There is nothing special in significance in thus speaking. Money question is not of an acute influence at the time and the early summer holds forth promise of no large financial operations which may tend to make stringency very remote. Call money will hardly show hardening rates. While general sentiment is still inclined to be bullish we do not expect anything better than a narrow trader's market, and would only buy on soft spots from this level of prices and then only for a moderate rally.

M. & M.

We do not expect to see this rally hold and would rather favour profit-taking on this bulge. The decision is only an incident on the general market situation. After shorts have covered we expect to see prices slump again.

M. & M.

2.15 p.m.—Market has had a good rise on this Northern Securities decision; shorts are well covered; general conditions hardly favour much further rise; think market pretty nearly high enough.

J. G. MARSHALL.

Messrs. Haight & Freese, Stock Brokers, submit the following:—

New York, April 20th.—We look for some further improvement in the stock market to-day, in view of the proceedings against the coal trust, the Northern Securities Co., and the Met. It will be well to take fair returns as presented. The market has withstood tests well. A. C. P. should go higher. There are bull points out on Can. Pac. M.O.P. will sell higher. We are bullish on R. I. and Frisco.

London,—Early market for Americans was heavy.

TOPICS.

New York, April 20th. — Temporarily the market will be feverish, and irregular; there is a big short interest in all active issues. There is an alleged better undertine in the market. M.O.P., B.O., Penna. and Wabashes will be market leaders. Just as we said repeated, there will be no strike on Man.—men will work. J. P. Morgan & Co. have recently been large buyers of Erie. The pfd. is a bargain. It will surely cross 70. Keep long of the steel stocks. Since they have become active and attractive within a few days. Specialties—Met is good to hold for a smart advance.

JOSEPH.

Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., Stock Brokers, Toronto, write as follows:—

New York, April 18th.—London came strong this morning, and our market opened up fractionally. Early estimates of the bank statement were favourable. Baltimore and Ohio was in good demand. Metropolitan opened up 3 points, on the more favourable testimony brought out by the company, but as a whole prices were unchanged with very narrow ranges. Sentiment, however, seems to have undergone a complete change and, the best houses are advising the purchase of the good stocks on every reaction. The bank statement showed an increase in reserve of over $3,286,350. Loans increase 2,427,800 and deposits increase 2,459,000, which is fairly good. After the publication of statement stocks under profit-taking sold off fractionally, but the close was strong with Missouri Pacific in good demand. Next week should witness further gains, if nothing unexpected happens. It will be wise to buy standard stocks on all recessions.

Chicago.—Wheat and corn, nothing doing.

Sleepy Railway Travelers.

To sleep at any moment is undoubtedly a sign of physical soundness and Philistine sanity, especially in the matter of the brain and its functions. A physician would have little anxiety about the general condition of a patient who could sleep at will on a railway journey. In these days of hurry and bustle there could be no more encouraging sight to the philosopher than a railway carriage at noonday full of sleepy passengers.

The Boston Boy.

Little Tommy—Can I eat another piece of pie?

Mamma (witheringly)—I suppose you can.

Tommy—Well, may I?

Mamma—No, dear, you may not.

Tommy—Darn grammar, anyway!—Lippincott's.

Too Attractive.

"And here," said the salesman, "is a very fine umbrella. The handle, you will observe, is especially attractive."

"That's just what I want to avoid. Every umbrella I ever owned has been entirely too attractive."

One Reason Why.

"She is very bright for one who has just lost her husband."

"That's so; but you must remember that she is in the honeymoon of her widowhood."

After crosses and losses men grow humbler and wiser.—Franklin.

HER HORRID UNCLE TOM.

What the Girl With Gray Eyes Thought of Him.

"Do you know," said the girl with the gray eyes, "I think he is simply horrid."

"Horrid? Who's horrid?" queried the demure little thing.

"Why, that uncle of mine, of course," rejoined she of the orbs of gray in a tone that evinced surprise that any one should not be fully aware of the individual she had in mind.

The demure little thing looked startled. "He hasn't lost his fortune, has he?" she asked.

"Good gracious, no, thank heaven, but he's just as horrid as he can be nevertheless. Listen. You know I have always had the greatest fondness for Uncle Tom and have without exception told him everything—absolutely everything. That fact that I have had so much trouble with—well, you know the men I have gone with. Last year when that affair with Dick was on I, of course, wrote Uncle Tom, who was then in Chicago, all about it. Now, he had always liked Dick, so he wrote me a beautiful letter—simply beautiful—offering me all manner of felicitations and wishes for a bright and prosperous future.

"It isn't necessary to tell you, my best friend, how bitterly Dick disappointed me by his conduct. I know they say I threw him over and all that sort of thing, but honestly there wasn't but one thing to do, and of course I did it.

"I suppose it did seem a little 'soon' to Uncle Tom when a little over two months after he wrote that letter he received news of my engagement to Jack. However, uncle approved of my course in the matter even though he did prefer Dick to any one else, and I couldn't complain of the letter he sent me in reply, which was as nice as the first one, although he did express some little surprise. All the same, he expressed entire confidence in my judgment.

"Now, my dear, here's where uncle made himself most objectionable. Two weeks ago, when I found that above all I loved Reginald, I received a third letter from Uncle Tom, in which, after acknowledging the receipt of my letter, he said:

"'I desire, my dear, to congratulate you on your approaching marriage with ——.'

"Then he inserted one of those star signs and added in a footnote, 'Here insert the name of the happy man.'"

Costly Treatment.

"My wife found a poker chip in my pocket, and I told her it was a dyspepsia tablet."

"That was clever."

"Far from it! She swallowed the chip, and the doctor's bill cost me more than the jackpot."

Resembled Them Both.

They were jollying the man about his enormous appetite, but he kept "putting away," undisturbed by the taunts. Finally he said in defense: "Well, you see, I take after both my father and my mother. One ate a long while and the other ate a great deal."

A Believer, But—

"Bjinks is a firm believer in the theory that the office should seek the man."

"Yes?"

"Sure. But he always takes care to leave his address where it can be found."—Baltimore News.

Change the Subject.

"How do you like that cigar, old man?"

"Oh, say, let's talk about something pleasant."

A Dangerous Practice.

A common and dangerous practice is to throw outer garments on the bed. Considering that they come in contact with all sorts of undesirable objects, this is inimical to daintiness if to nothing else. Clothing worn during the day should be removed from the bedroom at night.

WATER AS MEDICINE.

Said to Cure Dyspepsia If Taken in Sufficient Quantities.

A physician has called attention to the use of water not only as a remedial and therapeutic agent, but also as a mechanical agent, in the treatment of certain forms of dyspepsia, especially those forms characterised by a fullness in the left epigastric region, with frequent eructations of sour or acrid matter, accompanied by loss of appetite, insomnia and a mental condition closely allied to melancholia.

Let the patient drink from one to three pints of water one hour before each meal and then comfortably seat himself in an easy rocking chair and rock backward and forward for half an hour. The rocking will agitate the water in the stomach, wash the walls completely, detaching any mucus that may be adhering and dilute and mix the contents thoroughly. By this means absorption will be more rapid, and as a consequence the skin, kidneys and bowels will act more freely, eliminating from the blood uric acid and all effete and deleterious matter, while the stimulus of the water will cause the stomach to contract and gastric juice to be secreted in such quantity as to cause digestion to go on uninterruptedly and painlessly.—Farm and Fireside.

A Historic Lemon.

Who ever thinks of connecting such a commonplace article of diet as the lemon with the romantic history of ill fated Anne Boleyn? Yet indirectly she was the cause of its first introduction into England and so into popular notice. Henry VIII. gave such splendid feasts and pageants in honor of the coronation of Anne and of their previous nuptials as had seldom been accorded to queens of the blood royal. These kingly entertainments were in turn followed by the great civic feasts of London, for which the whole world was searched for delicacies to add to the splendor.

At one such banquet, graced by the presence of the royal pair, a lemon was introduced as an elegant novelty. To an epicure such as Henry the acquisition of a castle in France would have proved less acceptable, and such was the importance attached to the discovery—so says an old biographer—that a special record was made of the fact that the cost of this precious lemon was six silver pennies!

Birdlike Reptiles.

The most birdlike reptiles in the world are the beautiful iguanas of tropical America. The smallest members of this family, belonging to the genus anolis, swarm in the bushes and trees of the West Indies and in many points resemble humming birds. Gosse in "A Naturalist's Sojourn In Jamaica" gives a vivid description of them. On a bright day, hundreds of these brilliantly colored creatures may be seen on trees and fences, entertaining visitors by their gambols, leaping from branch to branch, fearlessly entering houses and even alighting on individuals. When irritated, they will suddenly change their brilliant colors for a dull, sooty brown.

Analogous to these, but not nearly so graceful, are the flying lizards of the old world. With hinder ribs prolonged to support a parachute-like expansion, these brightly marked reptiles are often mistaken for birds as they take flying leaps from tree to tree, for they are thoroughly arboreal.

Baldness Due to Indigestion.

"There seem to be fewer baldheaded men than there were years ago," said a physician. "Time was when four out of five men more than forty-five years old were baldheaded or fast approaching that stage. Nowadays the average has fallen nearer to two than to three.

"What's the cause? I suppose there are many reasons, but one certainly is to be found in the general increase of outdoor exercise. Nervous disorders result in the falling out of the hair and impaired digestion brings on nervous disorders. Exercise, as is well known, stimulates digestion, and there above all else is the secret of preserving the hair. Keep your digestion in good condition and your nerves will not trouble you. All the scalp diseases in the catalogue are not responsible for as many baldheads as indigestion."

A Story of Brignoli.

Praise went a long way with Brignoli. One evening at rehearsal in New York the orchestra laid down their instruments as one man and applauded his singing of a favorite song long and vigorously. He was much pleased and, advancing to the footlights with many a bow and smile of satisfaction, said:

"Gentlemen, immediately after the rehearsal there will be a champagne supper at the Everett House. I hope I may have the honor to meet you all there."

It is needless to remark that they were there, every man of them. The supper cost Brignoli $500.

Embarrassing.

A settlement worker, having been requested by anxious mothers to address the younger women of the settlement clubs on "heart interest" topics, decided to do so. She talked with the girls earnestly, urging upon them the deep and intrinsic sacredness of all love and marriage relations, the coarseness and vulgarity of indiscriminate flirtations, the great and growing need for high ideals, standards and action on the woman's part. Then, just as she took her seat, it occurred to her that she might have talked a little bit over the heads of her listeners, and she sprang to her feet with an added remark:

"Please believe that what I say is true, my dear friends," she exhorted earnestly, "and please don't think I don't understand my subject. I know what I'm talking about, girls—I really do."

Once more she took her seat, delighted with the air of general interest, and from the rear of the room came the question:

"Please, Mrs. S., how many times have you been in love?"

The Word "Jolly."

On the adoption of the word "jolly" into the English it had the meaning of beautiful, as it has among the French today. The English dramatist Beaumont of the sixteenth century speaks of our first mother as "the jolly Eve." In time, however, it came to mean hilarious, regardless of physical beauty. But this latter meaning is probably the right one after all, as the word doubtless comes from Yule (Yu-le), the pagan Christmas, so to speak, for be it known that what we now observe as Christmas day was a heathen holiday called Yule, and the Yule festival was one of noisy demonstration.

Yule indeed means noise or outcry, praising in loud voice, chanting, singing, making outcry in honor of their god. From yule, then, to jolly the step is short and easy, both meaning revelry, rejoicing. Ours is a risen Lord, theirs the same. The words are identical. So, too, in large degree the Christmas jollities, praises and those of heathen Yule. Into such close relation do simple words sometimes connect the present with the past.

A Chinese Joke.

In his book on "China and the Chinese" Dr. Giles gives a specimen of Chinese humor which, if the source were not known, might well be mistaken for American humor.

There is a Chinese story which tells how a very stingy man took a paltry sum of money to an artist—payment is always exacted in advance—and asked him to paint his portrait. The artist at once complied with the request, but when the portrait was finished nothing was visible save the back of the sitter's head.

"What does this mean?" cried the sitter indignantly.

"Well," replied the artist, "I thought a man who paid so little as you paid wouldn't care to show his face."

Great Natures.

Great natures are always generous. They are fountains not only of vitality, but of bestowal. However great the rewards they receive may be, these rewards are but a fraction of the worth of the service rendered, and no man ought to be satisfied, whatever his position or work, unless he can feel that he is giving far more than he is receiving, that a very large part of what he does is not returned in money, that however successful he may be on the practical side he must still be counted one of the benefactors of his kind because of the generosity of his bestowal.—Outlook.

Peach Pits.

The statement has been made that prussic acid was made from peach stones. This is altogether a mistake, for, although under certain conditions a trace of the main principle of the deadly poison can be found in peach stones, there is not sufficient to produce the acid without other essential ingredients. Indeed, without the process of fermentation there is no evidence at all of prussic acid in the stones.—Exchange.

Just the Place.

Irate Landlord (to couple who are taking a lovers' walk on his property)—Now, then, can't you read?

Amorous Youth—Oh, yes, we can read.

Irate Landlord—Then go to the end of this road and read the sign there.

Amorous Youth—We have read it. It says, "Private," and that is just why we came down here.

In the Sweet By and By.

"Professor," inquired the thoughtful member of the class, "don't you suppose there will come a time when all the coal and all the coal oil stored away in the earth will have become exhausted?"

"Certainly," said the instructor.

"What will we do then?"

"We shall be playing harps, I hope."

That Settled Him.

Husband—You're not economical.

Wife—Well, if you don't call a woman economical who saves her wedding dress for a possible second marriage I'd like to know what you think economy is!

WHERE HAS GAMEY GONE?

Chief Figure in Bribery Case Missing Since Saturday.

HIS COUNSEL IN A QUANDARY

Considered Throwing Up Briefs Late Monday Night.

LEAVES FROM A CASH BOOK.

Mr. Crossin Discovers on Saturday That Pages Referring to Mr. Gamey's $900 Deposit Were Missing — Trouble With Bank Over the Deposit Slip—Monday's Investigation Has Surprising Results.

Toronto, April 21.—The Gamey case assumed a new phase yesterday, owing to sensational evidence given by Mr. Edward Crossin, the piano man, respecting the disappearance of certain leaves of his cash book, and the simultaneous and unaccountable absence of Mr. Gamey himself. The man from Manitoulin had not been present in court during the day, but that fact did not attract attention until Mr. Crossin related the incident of Saturday, as told in the evidence below.

Counsel in a Quandary.

The admission was frankly made that during the evening two of the leading counsel had considered the matter of withdrawing from the case. The deterrent influence was the interest of the public, who desired the investigation pushed to a conclusion. Shortly after 9 o'clock Mr. C. H. Ritchie, K.C., drove to Mr. S. H. Blake's house in Jarvis street and held an hour's conference with Mr. Gamey's leading counsel. Mr. Ritchie afterwards confessed that he was entirely in the dark as to Mr. Gamey's whereabouts, that he had been trying all evening to locate him, and that he could not understand his action in thus absenting himself. A search was being made through Gamey's brother, but was so far unsuccessful.

Mr. Gamey Left Saturday.

Mr. Gamey left the Walker House late Saturday afternoon, and part of his baggage is said to be there still.

Mr. McPherson announced shortly after 11 o'clock that he had nothing to communicate, and in reply to further questions would not even say Gamey would be here when wanted.

Mr. Smyth, M.P.P. for Algoma, is hopeful, and said he believed Mr. Gamey wanted a rest and he had no doubt but that he would return almost immediately.

Tributes to Sir Oliver.

The Gamey enquiry yesterday was prefaced by brief tributes to the late Sir Oliver Mowat by Chancellor Boyd and Hon. S. H. Blake. The Commission will not sit on Wednesday afternoon, when the funeral takes place, in token of its respect for the dead statesman.

Miss O'Grady's Evidence.

Miss Cecilia O'Grady, clerk of files at the Parliament Buildings, employed in Department of Public Works, was the first witness. She testified that Frank Sullivan was assistant accountant in that Department. She operated a Remington typewriter. She did not remember ever having copied any letters for Sullivan. Asked whether she had had any conversation with Sullivan since she was subpoenaed on Friday last she said: "Yes. He came in on Saturday, and shook hands all around. I said 'Not to say anything, as I don't want to know anything.'"

"Why did you say that?" asked Mr. McPherson.

"I don't think we can permit that question," remarked the Chancellor.

She refused to identify any of the exhibits produced as in either the handwriting of Frank Sullivan or the typewriting of the Department, despite severe questioning by Mr. McPherson.

Mr. R. A. Grant.

Mr. R. A. Grant, solicitor for the Liberal Association of Ontario, followed. He swore that it was a chartered organization, and that his firm, Kerr, Paterson, Davidson & Grant, had acted for the association in a legal capacity for some ten or twelve years. Their work was chiefly with reference to election petitions, either as solicitors or agents. In the Manitoulin petition, they acted as agents for A. G. Murray, of Gore Bay, the solicitor for the petitioner. The $1,000 deposited was handed to him by Mr. James Conmee, M.P.P.

Mr. Grant stated that last summer he handled $17,000 subscriptions for the petitions, but could not give details as to where it came from.

"I keep no memorandum, perhaps I am careless in that," said Mr. Grant.

Mr. Blake—It's very safe!"

Mr. Grant—"It's careless!"

Mr. Blake—"Careless, but safe."

Questioned about Mr. Alexander Smith's connection, he said he did not know what Mr. Smith had to do with money matters for elections. He had the Walker House interview with Mr. Gamey at Mr. Frank Sullivan's request about a timber transaction on the 12th August. Up to this time he knew nothing about Gamey, except that he was a Conservative politician.

He gave to Mr. Alex. Smith's assistant, James Vance, the instructions as to the filing of the petition. It was Mr. Stanton of Hamilton, and not Mr. Vance, who worked up the evidence. He could not remember whether he received Stanton's first letter of Aug. 5 about the progress of his work before the Walker House interview. On July 19 he sent J. P. Stanton, of Hamilton, to look into matters in Manitoulin, and gave him $100 for expenses. The latter subsequently made a report.

The Manitoulin Protest.

Q.—I would ask you kindly to look at the letters and tell me the date of the first letter from Mr. Stanton giving a return. A—29th July.

The Chancellor—That is from Manitoulin?

Mr. Blake—Yes.

A.—Yes, my Lord.

Q.—Please let me know what was the date of the letter that gave you the details; that is, the next letter? A.—That was the 5th August.

Interview With Gamey.

While matters were in this condition with reference to the protest, Frank Sullivan came to him and asked him to go and see Mr. Gamey of Manitoulin. Witness was leaving town that afternoon, but promised to drop into the Walker House on his way to the station. He did so, and in the reading room met Frank Sullivan, who took him upstairs and introduced him to Mr. Gamey. The interview lasted two or at the most three minutes. He had never met Mr. Gamey before, and had never met either him or Sullivan since.

Mr. Gamey Mistaken.

Q.—Do you agree with the statement that Mr. Gamey has made as to that interview? A.—Mr. Gamey is mistaken in one or two respects, at least.

Q.—Then I think I will have to trouble you to give me the portions in which you think that he is mistaken? A.—My remark to him when he was introduced was, "Mr. Gamey, I understand you and Sullivan are considering a timber transaction." I think Mr. Gamey in his evidence said it was stock.

Q.—When Mr. Frank Sullivan spoke to you about a timber transaction was there a twinkle in his eye? A.—No, sir.

He gathered from the interview that Mr. Gamey wanted him to act for him in a timber transaction, and asked: "Is your proposition in shape." Gamey and Sullivan said it was not. He left with the understanding that he (Grant) was to secure a client who was to put in $4,000 or $5,000. There was nothing in the interview which roused his suspicions.

Mr. Blake then proposed to investigate Mr. Grant's relations with the Sullivans, and although Mr. Grant objected to giving private matters the Chancellor said that in this matter he ought to tell and he said he would do so.

The witness said that he had known "Cap" Sullivan for ten years, and Frank Sullivan about two years.

A Meaning Smile.

Asked about Capt. Sullivan, he smiled, and Mr. Blake remarked, "I see West Huron mapped on your face." Mr. Blake referred to the Captain as a "hanger-on" or a "parasite," but Mr. Grant's only knowledge of him in West Huron was that Sullivan was very drunk. He had business transactions with Capt. Sullivan about the purchase and sale of timber limits. In November, 1901, Capt. Sullivan saw him about timber in Rutherford which Shannon would buy. He offered the department $250 for the lots, and a couple of months later Shannon came in and said that as the timber was no good he would not take the lots. In April the department wrote accepting the offer, and he paid the department $250, and got the license in Shannon's name. In May he drew a transfer to the Traders' Bank, which was completed in July. He understood it was sold to Mr. John Charlton, but did not know the price. He was not aware that it was sold immediately after to J. & T. Charlton for $9,000.

The Manitoulin Petition.

Mr. Blake further questioned Mr. Grant as to the Manitoulin petition. Mr. Fraser, the defeated candidate, was the petitioner, and worked with Stanton to get evidence. Their report was most discouraging; they could find no evidence of systematic or organized corruption, and there was but one personal charge, and that susceptible of explanation.

Before the Manitoulin protest was filed there was a joint meeting of both sides about the end of September, at which were present Hon. Richard Harcourt, Hon. J. R. Stratton and himself and Messrs. J. J. Foy, Dr. Beattie Nesbitt and Edmund Bristol, to see whether the number could not be lessened. He thought the Manitoulin protest was really filed by the Government, and he, as the agent for the Government, could deal with it as he saw fit, without consulting the petitioner, Mr. Fraser, the defeated candidate, and he did it. Out of the $1,000 deposit were paid $150 to Stanton, $100 to Fraser and $100 to A. G. Murray, local solicitor. The $100 was paid to Mr. Fraser, because he said he was to considerable expense in connection with the protest.

"Consolation stakes," suggested Mr. Blake.

Balance in Hands of Firm.

The balance of $1,000 was still in the hands of the firm. He made no report to his clients in connection with the withdrawal of the protest. This was the first negotiation he and Mr. Bristol had.

Q.—Is your memory so clear that you would now say that you did not verbally tell, either directly or indirectly, to the Government the result of that application? A.—No, I would not go that far. I may have informed Mr. Ross; he was the only one, if I told anybody. I may have told him because there were other cases involved in the same negotiations.

Q.—You did not get any instructions from Mr. Murray? A.—No, sir. I tell you I am sure I didn't discuss it with anybody or get any instructions from anybody, unless possibly I mentioned it to Mr. Ross. Outside of him, I didn't discuss with anybody any of these matters.

The Chancellor—Do you recollect discussing it with him? A.—No, I do not, but it was possible I did; I saw him frequently.

Mr. Blake—Q.—Would that have been before the dismissal or subsequent to it? A.—It probably would be before the dismissal, but after Mr. Bristol's and my interview.

Q.—Do you remember, as a matter of fact, when the dismissal took place? A.—The formal dismissal was, I think, on the 25th of October; the Court had been notified on the 4th that the case was settled.

No mention of the petition was made by Gamey or Sullivan at the Walker House interview.

To Mr. Riddell:

Q.—You have told us what took place. Was anything said about a stock transaction at that time? A.—No, there was no mention about stock at all.

Q.—Mr. Gamey says that you said that Frank and he had spoken of a stock company in which he could make three thousand dollars in cash in six weeks and two thousand dollars towards spring; is that true? A.—No, I have already corrected that.

Q.—Did you say that you could do it? A.—I said, "If you get your proposition in shape, and it is all right, I can probably manage it for you"—or "arrange it."

Not Solicitor For Government.

Q.—Are you the solicitor for the Government? A.—No; I have no retainer of any kind.

Q.—Have you anything to do with the Government in that way? A.—No, sir.

The Chancellor—Q.—Who did you consider were your clients? Who are your clients in this case? A.—I considered Mr. Faser as much as anybody—perhaps he and the association jointly were the clients in the case.

Q.—And not the Government? A.—No, my Lord. I didn't consider the Government my clients.

Mr. Riddell—Q.—No charges made against the Government? A.—No.

Q.—Nor have the Government paid you anything? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What was the conclusion you arrived at upon the consultation of Mr. Stanton as regards to probability of success? A.—The conclusion we arrived at was the case was not strong and the majority was large, and a very risky experiment.

Q.—Then had you had that conversation with Mr. Stanton before you saw Mr. Bristol? A.—Yes, sir.

He then explained how he and Mr. Bristol went over the list of election protests to arrange "saw-offs," and when they came to South Wentworth set Manitoulin against it, without any instruction from the Government, Mr. Smith, or anyone.

Not Exceptional.

As Mr. Grant was about to leave the box the Chancellor said to him: "So far, Mr. Grant, I understand you to say that in your conference with Mr. Bristol in this matter, representing one side, and you the other, that there was no exceptional treatment with regard to this Manitoulin election. It was dealt with, set-off, cut-off, or whatever you call it, in the same way as you dealt with all the others? A.—Yes, my Lord.

Mr. F. J. Glackmeyer, Sergeant-at-Arms, said that Gamey and Sullivan came to him the day before the opening for tickets, but said nothing about a seat in the House, and he had nothing to do with the arrangement of seats.

A Typewriting Expert.

Mr. Albert S. Osborn of Rochester said he was head of a business institute and "examiner of questioned documents." He was an expert on typewriting in the celebrated Rice-Patrick murder case in New York and in the Sifton will case in London and the Middleton-Wilkinson breach of promise case in Sarnia. One of the characteristics of typewriting, he said, might be due to defects in type faces, and, having produced a letter he showed in technical language the different impression produced. The court then adjourned for luncheon.

$900 Deposit by Gamey.

In the afternoon Mr. Crossin of the piano factory in cross-examination by Mr. Johnston said that at the beginning of April Mr. Gamey paid him $200, $65 and $100. On September 11 he deposited $900, which he received from Mr. Gamey. He was sent then to his office for the book showing the entries in reference to it.

Mr. Osborn was then recalled, and Mr. McPherson, in reply to the commission, said he proposed to show that certain documents arranged in series were written on the same machine. In the first series would be The Globe interview, the typewritten document enclosed in the X.Y.Z. letter; apparently a draft of a speech to quiet his constituents, and the letter from Gore Bay to the Premier, saying he would support the Government; in the second series an unsigned letter and the F. J. S. letter, and the third series exhibits 8, 9, 11, 3.

Mr. Osborn then went on to explain in highly technical phrase all the peculiarities of typewriting which lead to identification of machines, but did not reach the application to the cases in point, when the Chancellor stood him down as he noticed Mr. Crossin come in.

The cross-examination of Mr. Crossin was resumed by Mr. Johnston.

Q.—Have you your ledger? A.—I have the cash book, but there is a leaf out of there.

Q.—The leaf covering the transaction of Sept. 10 and 11th is missing. A.—Apparently; I cannot see it there.

Q.—When did you first discover it to be missing? A.—I did not discover it until Saturday afternoon. You will see there is a gap there.

Q.—The gap commences on July 19th, 1902? A.—Yes.

Gamey Had a Key.

Q.—Who has charge of this book? A.—I have charge of the office of course, and Mr. Gamey has a key to the office.

Q.—You did not tear it out? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Nobody, as far as you know, excepting you and Mr. Gamey, had access to this book? A.—Not that I am aware of. We are the only two that have a key.

The Chancellor—The gap begins at July the 19th and goes down to what date? A.—February, 1903.

Mr. Johnston—When did you last see this book? A.—I used it right along.

The Chancellor—That is the book in current use? A.—Yes.

Q.—In which you keep your daily entries of cash and receipts? A.—Yes.

Mr. Johnston—And in that book you have entered all your cash entries from last spring until the present time? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Prior to Saturday were there no loose leaves in the book? A.—I think there had been, but they were all there.

Q.—Now you showed Mr. McEvoy on Saturday the entry in this book? A.—Entry of what?

Q.—Of the $900? A.—It wasn't there.

Q.—You showed him the entry of the $900 on Saturday in this book? A.—Not in that book; it was in this book ——.

Q.—You swear that you didn't show it to him? A.—Yes.

Couldn't Contradict McEvoy.

Q.—And if Mr. McEvoy saw the September entries on Friday in this book you could not contradict it? A.—I could not, because, as a matter of fact—

SIR OLIVER MOWAT'S DECLINING YEARS.

Some Reminiscences of His Earlier Days.

His Golden Opinions Upon Some Important Subjects.

The last interview given by Sir Oliver Mowat, indeed the only one after he became Lieutenant-Governor, appeared in The Westminster in August, 1902, under the pen name of Donaldson Grant. "In it there are many intimate glimpses of Sir Oliver, from which the following extracts are taken:—"He sat in a low, comfortable chair," says the interviewer, "in a quiet corner, on the south verandah of Government House, with a Scottish plaid across one shoulder, overlooking the rich green of the ravine and enjoying the shaded afternoon sun. He was suffering from an attack of rheumatism, which the damp weather of June and July had aggraveted, but he was as bright and cheery as in his younger and stronger days. There was nothing of complaint or disappointment in his voice, and neither age nor pain had chased away the old-time smile from his face, for the evening of his life has mellowed to a quiet afterglow, the winds at rest and the heat and stress all gone."

The talk turned naturally to Sir Oliver's early life and school days. "Those Scotch Presbyterians had strong convictions," said Sir Oliver, "and they took the schooling of their children seriously," and he went on tell of the discipline and the lessons and the careful instruction in the Bible and the Shorter Catechism.

"O, yes, I remember John A. Macdonald. We went to school together, although he was five years my senior, and was a big boy when I was quite small. He was the biggest boy in the school, and I remember how hard he worked in those days, quite as hard as I ever knew him to do in later years. He was a favourite then with boys as he was in after life with men. No, he was not particularly distinguished as a scholar, but he was kind-hearted and had a taking way.

"I never was far out of reach of Sir John, and all through life our interests touched and sometimes crossed. As a lad I entered his law office in Kingston, and spent four years under him as a student before coming to Toronto. Our associations were friendly for years, and, although we became leaders of opposing political parties, the struggles and occasional bitterness of party contests never destroyed my respect for Sir John's ability, and I am glad to believe that he thought equally kindly of me. . . ."

GREAT SOCIAL CHANGES.

"Great changes, very great changes in every way," remarked Sir Oliver, speaking of the social habits of sixty years ago and of to-day. "Younger people can hardly appreciate the greatness of the changes. You speak of temperance. I remember the first temperance meeting I ever attended. It was while I was in Kingston. Mr. John Counter was Chairman, and Mr. John Dougall, the founder and first editor of The Montreal Witness, and a pioneer of the total abstinence cause, a man who was regarded as quite extreme, almost fanatical, in his temperance views, was the chief speaker. At the close of the speaking the people were urged to sign the pledge, but it was quite a different pledge from that approved to-day. It forbade whiskey, but it allowed free use of beer and wine. And that was considered an advanced temperance position."

POWER OF THE PRESS.

"You have had a good deal to do with newspaper men, Sir Oliver; has your experience reconciled you to the press?"

"Some people say newspapers are an evil; I do not think they are, but if so, they are a very necessary evil. I have had my share of their praise and blame, but I am quite sure that I could not have done even the work I did without the aid of the press."

"Looking back over your own life as a politician, Sir Oliver, do you regard politics as an inviting field for a young man who desires to put his life to the best use?" was a question I suggested.

"I do," was the prompt reply. 'The young man of the necessary equipment in ability and character will find in politics scope for the best that is in him, and opportunities for service which few vocations can equal."

THE CHRISTIAN IN POLITICS.

"But some men say that a man cannot be a Christian and be successful in politics," I ventured to remark.

"It's all nonsense," said the venerable politician, with more emphasis than he had given to any other statement. "It's all nonsense, and it is the duty of The Westminster to make Canadians believe that such a statement is nonsense. I have found public men in Canada as honourable and trustworthy and as sensible of duty as any other class of men with whom I have had to do. A man may not take up with this or that notion or scheme or reform for the moment holding public attention and he may not proclaim his religious beliefs and hopes from the housetops, but his whole life, both public and private, may be governed and controlled and animated by the highest sense of duty and the deepest religious motive. I am satisfied that a man of positive character and personal religious conviction can be just as consistent a Christian in politics as in any other sphere, and it would be well for public men and for the whole body of the people if that fact were more generally believed. To say that a man cannot be a Christian in politics is simply nonsense. I have known too many sincere Christian men among my political opponents as well as among my political allies not to give that statement the frankest denial."

MORAL DUTY SUPREME.

I asked him if there were any one thing in his life which more than another gave him satisfaction as he thought over life's experiences.

He did not answer for a moment, as one trying to recall and judge the past, and then said very quietly:—"Well, in a general way it is a satisfaction to me now that I am an old man, two years past the four score limit, to think that throughout my life I have tried to do my duty. That conviction and the assurance from men of all shades of politics that my own political career has helped to impress a sense of duty on other public men is very satisfying. Duty was made a very real and important thing to me in my early training both in the home and in the school; my teachers impressed it upon me that in my political relations, I was never able, as I was never desirous, to rid myself of the simple imperative of duty. No, it is not a political mistake to do one's plain duty. This is a moral world, and in the long run moral duty is supreme."

IS CONSUMPTION CURABLE?

Patients of the Muskoka Home Say so.

Letters From Those Who Have Undergone Treatment There—Great Need of Money to Carry on the Work.

Not unnaturally, when we remember the opinion that has prevailed in the past regarding consumption, the question continues to be asked: "Is consumption curable?" Do patients who have been under treatment in the Muskoka Home for Consumptives take up their life work again, and remain cured? On file in the office of the National Sanitarium Association, by whom has been established the two homes for consumptives at Muskoka, are many letters from former grateful patients.

From these one or two quotations, only omitting for obvious reasons names and places, are as follows:

A grateful husband writes: "I am speaking for my wife, Mrs. ——. I cannot speak too highly of the benefit she derived from her three months' stay in the Muskoka Home for Consumptives. She has had no visible sign in any shape or form for about three years, and I always look upon her as in that case to be decidedly cured. You may be surprised to hear that two years ago next month she passed through a very severe case of pneumonia, so much so that the three attending physicians thought that there was no hope. But we do not wonder at her contracting this disease when the two old people passed away with the same a short time previous. She also gave birth about six weeks ago to two baby girls, and both mother and babies have done splendid."

One who went to South Africa with the first contingent, and who had been a patient at the Muskoka Home for Consumptives, writes: —"My condition at present is good. I have been in South Africa for the past eighteen months. Have been in all kinds of weather; often sleeping at night in water, and never felt any trace of lung trouble."

The one discouraging feature, perhaps of the work, is the need of money to further extend it, and to make it possible to admit the many who are on the waiting list, as well as to put the trustees in funds to maintain, without overdraft, the large number who to-day are at the institutions. In the two institutions there are at present nearly 150 patients. At the newer institution of the two, the Free Hospital for Consumptives, needy patients are admitted absolutely free.

The head office of the association is in the Mail Building, Toronto, and the Secretary, Mr. J. S. Robertson, is always pleased to answer questions. Contributions for the funds are being received by Sir Wm. R. Meredith, Kt., Chief Justice, No. 4, Lamport avenue, and Mr. W. J. Gage, No. 54 Front street west, Toronto.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Tarte Speak in Budget Debate.

Ottawa, April 21.—In the House yesterday, after feeling references of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Borden and Mr. Clarke to the death of Sir Oliver Mowat and a brief discussion of the northwest lumber combine, Sir Richard Cartwright delivered a speech of nearly two hours' duration upon the budget, that will compare favorably with any he has ever uttered.

Last evening Mr. Tarte spoke for two hours along the lines of his recent utterances, and gave notice of an amendment very similar to Mr. Borden's, with an additional clause dealing with transportation. He stated positively that he had received an offer of a seat in the Imperial House, but that he had not decided whether to accept it or not.

Mr. John Charlton moved the adjournament of the debate.

Ownership of Stage "Business."

One of the peculiar things about a copyrighted play is that any little piece of business or any new lines which may be inserted in the manuscript while a stock company is playing the drama belong thereafter to the man who owns the copyright.

Every time a stock company rents a play for production from the owner of the copyright it is cut, interlined and added to before it is produced. A stage manager, for instance, may interpolate some speeches in order to work up to the introduction of a song or specialty, or he may strengthen the climax by putting in some new and strong lines. Often these interpolated lines prove to be the most striking in the play and make decided hits. If they are left in when the manuscript goes back to its owner, they become his property absolutely and may not be used by the man who wrote them in any other production; therefore shrewd managers, before they return a play to its owner, always take great pains to erase every scrap of correction or interlineation. In this way only may they keep what really belongs to them.

Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure

Costs Nothing If It Fails.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer.

I am a specialist in Rheumatism and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For sixteen years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds the cost is only $5.50. If it fails I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism, must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me, and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you anyway. If it fails, it is free.

Address, Dr. Shoop, Box 47, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured by one or two bottles. At all druggists.

IT FLASHED FOR THROCMORTON

By Bushrod C. Washington

Copyright, 1902, by McClure's Newspaper Syndicate

"Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?" asked the clerk of twelve solemn faced men in the jury box. "We have," responded the foreman, handing a folded paper to the clerk, who read aloud the indorsement on the back: "We, the jury, find the prisoner guilty of murder in the first degree, as charged in the indictment."

"William Throcmorton," said Judge Smithson, with judicial sternness, "after a fair trial, defended by able counsel, you stand convicted of the cruel and deliberate murder of Olive Graham.

"It has been shown that the young woman had promised to become your wife. Her parents, confiding in your honorable intentions, had recognized you as her accepted lover and the door of their home was open to you.

"While the motive in your crime is not apparent, the facts which fasten it upon you are linked into a chain of circumstances strong and incontrovertible.

"You stood with Olive Graham on the porch of her home; an instant later her cry for mercy was heard by her parents above the storm then raging. Hastening to her assistance, they found her murdered body on the slope of the hill a rod from the door.

"You were taken soon after, as it were, red handed, the bloody knife with which the deed was done having been found upon your person.

"You have pleaded 'not guilty,' but have not disproved a single fact the state alleged against you.

"The penalty of your crime as by statute fixed is death. Have you anything to say why the sentence should not be pronounced?"

Throcmorton was a pink of physical manhood, well knit, erect, with a character as straight as his form. He held a medal from "the management" and was the wearer of a watch, the gift of grateful passengers when he was taken from the wreck of his engine. "Throc," as they called him, was more than liked; he was loved by the grimy roadmen.

When the last word fell from Judge Smithson, the character of the man and the stubborn facts of the case stood in solemn contrast. In such a contest character must lose.

The eyes of Throcmorton shone straight into the eyes of the judge. There was nothing of bravado in his manner, neither tremor nor sign of weakening.

"If it please your honor," responded the prisoner, rising as he spoke, "it will shock you and all present when I say I mourn for Olive Graham and am innocent. But what is it worth to say it in the face of the evidence? Had I sat with the jury I must have come to their verdict. I am ready, your honor, for the sentence."

Moved by some sudden impulse, the judge turned to the sheriff and said in a faltering voice: "Remove the prisoner and return him for sentence to the bar of this court. The day and hour the court will later indicate."

* * * * * * * *

Old Graham was a pensioned track inspector, who loved the thunder of trains and scream of whistles.

He had built his house thirty feet from the roadbed. Just back of it and extending down to the track was an abrupt twenty foot cliff of shale, the perpendicular face of which was smooth. It was in front of it that they found the body of Olive.

No. 49 just ran out of the roundhouse, had backed up and coupled to the St. Louis express. It was Tom Doyle's pet engine.

Doyle was looking from the cab window for the signal to start. As an engineer he was a good second to Throcmorton. He was Throc's next friend and was to have been best man at his wedding.

He believed Throcmorton was innocent because he couldn't believe otherwise. But there were the facts, and when he thought of them there was a lump in his throat.

Ted Elsie, Doyle's fireman, had just raked the grate when a squad of the boys came by.

"What's the news?" asked Ted.

"Throc's guilty an' got to swing," came back from the crowd.

"Fifty juries couldn't make me believe Throc killed Ollie Grah'm," said Doyle, emphasizing with his fist on the window sill.

The day had been sweltering, clouds had gathered and the night was black.

It was down grade, and Tom Doyle, with hand on throttle valve and eye on the rails, was ready to slack at the curve.

The storm had burst, and just as the engine struck the curve a flash of lightning and the focus of the headlight met full on the face of the cliff. The sight Tom Doyle saw made him reel and grip the lever.

* * * * * * * *

"A letter for Mr. Absalom Conway!" called out Goggin, the worthy proprietor of a San Francisco gambling den, putting emphasis on "Mr. Absalom." "That's you, Ab, I reckon," he added, tossing him the letter.

Mr. Conway eyed the letter full a minute and, looking nervously over his shoulder, tore the envelope.

W——o, Aug. 4, 1899.

Friend Ab—They say my nerves is broke an' I mus' run half time or throw up. I'll divvy my runs with you, an' if my nerves don't mend yours is the job fer good. Right away you must come. An' it's yours I am, TOM DOYLE.

* * * * * * * *

In the cab of No. 49 sat Absalom Conway to divide the run with Doyle. Ted Elsie was fireman. There was distant thunder; big drops began to patter and the wind raised. A storm was on.

"Jump into the cab, Ted, just 'fore we strike the curve," said Doyle below his breath as he put foot on the engine step.

Forked fire tore the sky, shattered telegraph poles and played in blue flames around the engine wheels as they sped onward.

A flash of tremendous voltage, and the cliff glowed white within the headlight's circle.

Conway's hand dropped from the lever, and he stood dazed and trembling.

"Me and Ted saw it, Ab," said Doyle. "In mercy's name, what made you do it?"

Before he could catch himself Conway exclaimed, "She jilted me, and I swore she'd never marry Throcmorton."

"And how did Throc come by the bloody knife?" asked Doyle.

"I dropped it into his coat pocket as I dashed by him half way back to town," replied Conway and, becoming dogged, quit answering.

* * * * * * * *

The radius of a circle drawn in chalk on the smooth face of the rock marked the place where the headlight focused as the engine struck the curve.

A frame supporting apparatus had been set opposite by Professor White of the State university. It was connected by wires with the town power house.

Judge Smithson, members of the bar and representatives of the press were present. Old Graham and his wife stood by, Throcmorton supporting them, and Tom Doyle, with Ted, was much in evidence.

At a signal from Professor White an intense light from the apparatus was thrown upon the spot.

There was a suppressed exclamation as a picture appeared within the circle.

It was more than life size and became plainer as the light intensified.

There upon the face of the rock stood the grim counterpart of Absalom Conway. His right arm encircled Olive Graham's waist, his left hand clutching the identical knife in half descended stroke.

"Lightning photography," said the professor, "is classed as a freak among natural phenomena. The picture can only be seen under light approaching in brightness the flash that fixed it."

A Mysterious Disappearance.

The disappearance of Benjamin Bathurst, a kinsman of Lord Bathurst, has never been explained. Bathurst was sent on a secret mission to Vienna at the time that England, before opening the peninsula campaign, sought to persuade Austria to declare by way of distraction war against France. Austria soon after crossed the French frontier, and Bathurst received hints of threatened personal doom. Hoping to avoid examination, he took a northerly route in returning to England, and on reaching Perieberg, in Brandenburg, he visited in his agitation the commandant of cuirassiers, requesting that sentries might mount guard at the inn where he stopped. These were supplied, and Bathurst spent the day in writing and destroying letters.

Shortly before his carriage came to the door in the dusk of a November evening he told some troopers who escorted him that they might withdraw. While all the household was on the alert to see him off he walked beyond the circle of the lantern glare and was lost to sight at the head of the horses. This occurred on Nov. 25, 1809, and Bathurst was never seen or heard of more, notwithstanding that England offered £2,000 reward and Prussia 100 Friedrichs d'or for the discovery even of his remains.

What He Really Said.

A gentleman calling on an M. P. one day while waiting in the reception room was attracted by the manner of the small attendant and started a random conversation.

"And how much do you earn a week, my boy," he inquired.

"Ten pounds," said the youngster with avidity.

Being shown into the member's private office just then, the visitor's surprise found vent in words.

"Mighty bright youth you have there to be getting £10 a week," he remarked.

"Why," said the M. P., "he only gets 22 shillings."

"But he told me just now you were giving him £10 a week," persisted the gentleman.

"Nonsense," said the M. P., and he touched the bell. "Billy," he said, "did you tell this gentleman I was paying you £10 a week?"

"No, sir."

"You didn't? Well, what did you say?"

"I said I earned it," was the prompt and stout rejoinder.

Dainty Chairs.

A firm of upholsterers became so busy that they could no longer keep pace with the work they had to do, so they called on a little jobbing cabinet maker and asked him if he would make half a dozen chairs for them by a certain date.

The man took the order and lost but little time in executing it and still less time in obtaining the money for them. The work, however, turned out to be a failure, and the firm sent for the man and exposed to his view quite a heap of the various limbs that go to make a chair.

The practical joiner gave a look of surprise and proceeded to pick up the pieces and place them together without saying a word.

Presently he laid the pieces back again in a heap and, looking at them, exclaimed in a most emphatic manner, "Why, those chairs must have been sat on!"—Kansas City Independent.

Elizabethan Excise Laws.

In striking contrast to the present laws to prevent habitual drunkenness were those passed in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Lansdowne manuscripts in the British museum record that in 1594 orders were set down by the lords and others of her majesty's privy council for the reformation of the great disorders committed by the excessive number of alehouses, which the justices were ordered to reduce. The publicans were compelled to give to the constable of the parish the name and business of every one who frequented their houses and were forbidden to have any games played therein. On Sundays no persons dwelling within a mile of the public house were allowed to enter except substantial householders traveling to church, and then only for a reasonable time to refresh themselves. Curiously, the chief complaint against publicans was the "brewing stronger ale and beer than is wholesome for man's body."—London Chronicle.

Wasn't Acquainted.

"Waiting in the bank directly in front of me was a charming woman of twenty or so who was having her first experience in banking," said the merchant as he lighted his cigar after luncheon. "She was asked the questions usual for one who is opening an account—her name, address, whether married or single and her father's and mother's name. She got along all right until the clerk asked:

"'Mother's maiden name, please.'

"'I don't quite understand, I'm afraid,' she said hesitatingly.

"'I mean your mother's name when she was a girl,' explained the clerk.

"'How should I know? I don't like impertinence, sir! How should I know? I didn't know her when she was a girl. The idea! Are you trying to make fun of me, sir?'"

To Settle the Question.

He was engaged to be married, and every one knows how the engaged man talks when he gets a friend cornered.

"She is the loveliest and best girl that ever lived," he asserted.

"Sure?" inquired the friend.

"Sure! Of course I'm sure. You don't doubt it, do you?"

"Certainly not," replied the friend hastily, "only"—

"Only what?"

"Oh, I suppose it's all right, but I'd like to introduce you to Dobley."

"Who's Dobley?"

"Oh, another friend of mine who told me yesterday that he was engaged to the loveliest and best girl that ever lived, and I'd like to have you two get together and settle the matter."

Western Cities Lively.

The eastern visitor finds the cities of the northwestern coast brimful of life, color, significance, picturesque interest and, though the forces which have combined in their making are somewhat similar, each has a distinct character and individuality. "Lively," a word of the west, may well be applied to them—a sort of brisk activity, youthfulness, ozone. They have the rather unusual capacity of doing big things and talking about them lustily at the same time. It is the cry of the street corners: "Just watch us grow. See us getting to the front."—Ray Stannard Baker in Century.

MUNYON'S Famous RHEUMATISM CURE

TO BE GIVEN AWAY.

WILL BE DISTRIBUTED ABSOLUTELY FREE FROM THE OFFICE of the EXAMINER.

Prof. Munyon Cordially Invites Physicians, Sceptics and Don't-believers to Take Advantage of this Offer and Report through the Newspapers of Peterborough.

THE DISTRIBUTION WILL COMMENCE PROMPTLY 9 A. M., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22ND.—FOR ONE DAY ONLY.

"No Punishment is too Severe for those who Deceive the Sick."
—MUNYON.

"Six years ago I announced to the citizens of Peterborough that I had discovered a positive cure for Rheumatism, and to prove my assertion I distributed nearly 30,000 vials in the Province of Ontario. The name of each person who accepted a vial of this cure was taken and each person was invited to report through the medium of the newspapers the result of his experience with this remedy. It will be remembered that many hundreds of testimonials were published from people who declared most emphatically that this remedy had positively cured them. Many testify that three or four doses of these little sugar-coated pellets relieved them entirely from all pain. Affidavits were taken showing that one or two bottles had cured old chronic cases which had battled the skill of leading physicians in Canada.

"Notwithstanding these unimpeachable facts, there are thousands of people in Ontario to-day suffering from Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago. They have tried so many remedies without benefit that they have little faith in anything they see advertised.

"It is to overcome the prejudice of this class of people that I have decided to make another free distribution of this cure. I want the public to know the truth about this specific. I want every physician, no matter how prejudiced he may be, to procure as many vials of this remedy as he may desire and make a thorough test of it. I know that it will relieve nearly all rheumatic pains in a few hours. It does not put the disease to sleep; it drives it from the system. It enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the general health. The remedy has a larger sale throughout the civilized world than any other remedy. I emphatically state that this cure will do all that I claim for it. There is no 'Perhaps it will cure' or 'Guess it will cure,' but it cures and cures permanently.

"This distribution must not in any sense be considered a charity, but as a scientific investigation, which should interest the rich as well as the poor. If my Rheumatism Cure will do all that is claimed for it, then every physician should give it his endorsement and every sufferer should resort to its use. If it does not do what is claimed for it, then it should be denounced and prohibited by law. By this free distribution the public, who are the most interested, become the judges."—MUNYON.

Concerning "Dorothy Dodd" Shoes

THE FLEXIBILITY OF A "DOROTHY DODD."

With every step the sole of your foot must bend. The proper place for it to bend is at the "ball" of the foot—never at the instep!

To make it bend at the "ball", two things are necessary:—the sole must be extremely flexible, while the shank or arch must be extremely rigid.

Most shoes bend at the shank, thus losing their shapeliness and tiring the weak arch of the foot. This is what makes walking for women so fatiguing.

The "Dorothy Dodd" Shoe has a shank that supports the weak arch firmly. It will not bend. The method of sewing the shank is different from the ordinary. It is sewn through and through—making a strong, firm shank that cannot be obtained any other way. It has a sole that is extremely flexible and will not bend.

THE STYLE OF A "DOROTHY DODD."

Never mind what old-fashioned people tell you—Style and Comfort can live together in a pair of shoes. The "Dorothy Dodd" proves it.

They are the utmost height of style. They are shoes of genuine distinction. The highest praise you can give a shoe is to say

"It has the style of a 'Dorothy Dodd'."

Yet the "Dorothy Dodd" is the more comfortable shoe ever made. You long to walk for the pleasure of walking. It holds the foot firmly around the instep and supports the unsupported arch. You escape the "Slouchy" gait which comes with some shoes. It gives a new poise to your body in walking. Your carriage is more light and graceful.

INTERESTING TALK ON BUTTERFLIES.

The Epworth League Held a Pleasant Evening.

A very interesting evening was provided by the literary department of the George street Epworth League last night. The address of the evening was given by Mr. Elcome, who had for his subject, "Insects," with special reference to butterflies.

The speaker, by the aid of blackboard sketches, dealt with the different stages of butterfly life, first, the grub, then the chrysalis, and, finally, the butterfly, as we know it. The always interesting study of entomology aroused new interest at the hands of Mr. Elcome as he carefully and clearly described the different stages of development in the life of the butterfly, and his talk was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

A short musical programme, consisting of duets by Misses Parnell and Hill, and Messrs. Miller and Dodge, and a solo by Mr. Jas. Browne, was also given. An orchestra, composed of the Misses Smith, Miss Chasty and Mr. Montgomery, assisted in the general singing. Miss McClellan and Mr. George Schneider acted as accompanists, and Mr. George Robertson performed the duties of chairman. At the close of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Elcome for his very interesting talk.

WHERE IS GAMEY KEEPING HIMSELF?

His Mysterious and Unaccountable Disappearance

BLAKE WANTS TO RETIRE.

He and Other of Gamey's Counsel Want to Abandon Case—Chancellor Boyd Wants it to Continue—Adjourned Till Thursday.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Toronto, Ont., April 21.—The Gamey charges investigation adjourned this morning until Thursday, after a fifteen minute session. Mr. Blake referred to the unaccountable absence of Mr. Gamey, and said he and his colleagues were inclined, subject to the wish of the Commissioners, to withdraw from the case. Chancellor Boyd urged Mr. Blake to continue in the case as the public interests demanded a full and efficient inquiry. The Court then adjourned by consent until 10 o'clock Thursday, when Frank Sullivan and his father will be called and their evidence will conclude the case for the prosecution. Mr. Gamey's counsel have heard nothing more of his whereabouts.

WILL BE BENEFICIENT TO SUGAR INDUSTRY.

The Surtax on Unrefined and Refined Sugar.

The Fielding Tariff, which was brought down in the House a few days ago will be most beneficial to the beet suigar industry in Canada. The machinery for the manufacture of beet sugar will come into Canada for the next three years free of duty, whilst a heavy surtax has been placed upon unrefined and refined sugar imported into Canada from Germany. Canada at the present time imports from Germany half a million dollars worth of unrefined sugar and three million dollars worth of refined sugar.

MR. WM. McKENZIE'S NEW STEAM YACHT.

It Will be the Finest of its Kind in Canada.

While in Toronto and Hamilton at Easter, Mr. George Goodwin went through several ship building plants and reports the yacht being built at the Polson works, Toronto, for Mr. William Mackenzie to be the finest thing of its kind in America. She is of composite construction, that is, the keel and stem are of white oak, and the planking of British Columbia fir, while the frames, keelsons and deck beams are of steel. Steel bilge and wale-streaks extend from bow to stern, connected by diagonal straps. The planking is of long narrow pieces, and is bolted to the angle steel ribs. When finished it is likely that the yacht could be supported at the middle or at the ends without buckling.—Lindsay Post.

MR. R B. ROGERS' EXCELLENT ADDRESS.

Illustrated by Many Fine Lime-light Views.

His Subject was "The Waterways of Canada"—Special Reference Made to the Trent Valley Canal.

It had been announced that Mr. R. B. Rogers, Superintending Engineer for the Trent Valley Canal, would deliver a lecture in the local Opera House on the "Waterways of Canada," in which special mention would be made to the Trent Valley Canal. Last night Mr. Rogers delivered a most interesting and instructive illustrated address to a large and appreciative audience, including a large number of ladies, all of whom it is felt certain, went away fully impressed by the fact that when fully completed and in navigable condition the Trent Canal would be of very great advantage to the Dominion both commercially and financially.

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, President of the Board of Trade, acted as chairman and introduced the lecturer, which was only a matter of form as Mr. Rogers is one of Peterborough's most widely know residents.

In the opening remarks to his most masterful lecture, which he recently gave before the Chamber of Commerce at Montreal, the lecturer stated that, in the space of one short lecture it was impossible to enter into details of the waterways of Canada, which was the subject of his address; and only an outline would be given. "There is no question more important" said Mr. Rogers, "than the question of water transportation, and we must ask ourselves the reason of water transportation. We are a young country and have not at present one-tenth the population we will have in the near future." The chief product transshipped by water is grain which comes from Manitoba by train to either Port Arthur, Fort William or Duluth, where it is stored. From these places it is shipped to Georgian Bay ports. Throughout the route from Port Arthur to Montreal there are no less than 48 locks, and some extra 1,100 miles of lake or river navigation before finally arriving at Montreal, and Quebec is 160 miles below Montreal. Starting from Port Arthur the grain traverses the great inland sea of Lake Superior to Sault Ste. Marie.

Excellent lime-light views had illustrated the lecture, but at this juncture some beautiful scenes of Sault Ste. Marie were depicted on the canvas.

After passing through Sault Ste. Marie there come a few miles of lake navigation, through the Hay Lakes, after which the inland sea of Lake Huron, a distance of 296 miles has to be traversed until the Georgian Bay ports are reached. Over 15,000,000 bushels of grain passed through Depot Harbour in 1902, and a similar quantity passed through Midland on its way to Montreal. Then the Welland Canal or the western entrance to which is situated Port Colbourne, has to be traversed. A very large percentage of the grain passing through Port Colbourne goes to Buffalo. Some very pretty scenery is viewed on the trip through the Thousand Islands on the way to Montreal. Quebec is situated 160 miles below Montreal. The canals are largely lighted and operated by electricity.

Referring to the Trent Canal, Mr. Rogers stated that the idea of a canal through the Trent Valley was conceived in the early part of the last century. The money necessary was actually voted and a number of locks built. Shortly after the McKenzie Rebellion broke out, and the Government money voted for the construction of the canal was utilized for other purposes. Nothing was done until 1880, when the Minister of Railways and Canals was so impressed with this route that he ordered continuation of work. In 1887 a Royal Commission was appointed to inquire into the advisability of completing the canal, and after spending two years in gathering information, reported that after fully weighing all their information they thought it advisable to proceed with the construction of the canal.

From Healey's Falls to Washago there is a stretch of 160 miles of good navigable water. If the Trent Canal were completed there would be a saving of 250 miles in distance over the route by the Welland Canal. One great feature of the Trent Canal is that a very large portion of it is natural navigable water, which is an advantage that the Welland Canal has not got.

Major Simons, perhaps the greatest American expert on water transportation, says: "Lake Ontario boats have to be built of very strong material, and are much heavier than the usual type of canal boats. Then, as storms are frequent on the Great Lakes, the insurance rates are very high, while the ordinary canal boats being much lighter, do not require such heavy building material or insurance expense. Then, further, the Trent Canal will keep traffic away from Buffalo, and a great quantity of grain which now goes to that city will by this canal go to Montreal. Another advantage for the canal is the fact that it traverses a very prosperous part of a great commercial province. The canal will be invaluable. Freight rates will be greatly diminished, and factories along the canal route will be greatly benefited. It has been estimated that in four years after it has commenced operations the canal will have paid for itself.

The completion of the canal from Trenton to Georgian Bay will, after the present contracts have been filled, only amount to some $3,000,000.

At the conclusion of the lecture, Mr. D. W. Dumble moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Rogers for his excellent lecture, which was of great interest to all Peterborough people. The vote of thanks was seconded by Mr. John Belheer, County Engineer.

In reply Mr. Rogers said that it gave him great pleasure in speaking in Peterborough, and he hoped that he would have another opportunity to do so.

A special note of the lime light views which were shown by Mr. R. M. Roy, should be made, as many of them were truly magnificent.

The views shown were very numerous. There were scores outside of the Trent Waterway, and those depicting the works on the Trent Canal and the scenery over its route made a splendid panorama of natural beauty. Mr. Rogers is an enthusiastic amatuer photographer, and Mr. Roy has a positive genius for shadowing views to the best advantage both from a realistic and artistic point of view.

THE VARIABLE GAUL.

French Coldness Followed by Effusive Loyalty.

The "Wild West" at Olympia paid England the high compliment of terminating with "God Save the King" to all uncovered. Still a few gentlemen (evidently well-to-do Polish Immigrants), to the surprise of many most courteous Americans, and others around, sturdily kept their hats on This no sooner caught the eye of the Marquis de Leuville, who lately thrashed the notorious pro-Boer (occupying a box) than he cosily sent the foremost stalwart alien's hat into the arena. A blow or two, aimed and parried, began a fracas, but on the Marquis explaining quite clearly to the foreigner that he would follow his hat in person into the arena, respect to the most Loved King in the World was restored for a moment. Unfortunately, at that very minute the electric light temporarily went out, and another tall, stout man, who with his hat on, bumped against the already loyally-ruffled Marquis which was too much for him, and he sent him headlong into the arena. But on the lights being put right the last man was found to be a tall official on duty, who speedily restored the hat pleasantly to its disloyal owner. This little comical episode was fortunate, for of late in England it is often most irritating to see so many hats on during the playing of our National Anthem and if more men mingled this necessary mark of loyalty with pluck; aliens would respect more the Country where they gain both their freedom and their fortunes.

THE KARWARTHA LAKES.

The Bright Waters and Happy Lands

Why Laughing Waters Kiss a Hundred Shores.

The Trent Valley Navigation Company, Limited, but with un-limited potentialities of pleasure providing, has favoured the Examiner with a copy of their neat announcement folder for the season of 1903. It is a booklet of some twenty-five pages filled with well written descriptive text of the beautiful stretches of water, reached by their steamers and the delights of stream and shore, canoe and rod, that meet the traveller at every turn of miles of sinuous stream, or every foot of enchanted shore of beautiful lake. The booklet is profusely pictured with photo-gravures of the scenes it describes and a careful reading cannot fail to superinduce a brisk attack of Kawartha Lakes fever, that is a passionate desire to seek their delights when the long delaying summer heats shall have come.

HALL'S GLEN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Hall's Glen, April 20.

Mr. A. Nelson has again resumed his usual duties, having previously spent his Easter holidays at home, which vacation has fitted him for work once more.

Mr. W. Carveth, who has recently moved out from his shanty on the ninth line, is hard at work on the farm again

Mr. John Darling, president of the N.D.D. Co., deserves much credit for his considerate and judicious management of affairs, for the said company under his jurisdiction.

Some very encouraging reports have recently been received as to the convalescence of Mrs. W. J. Little, who has written home at different time of late; we are all glad to learn of her speedy recovery, and we expect to have her in our midst again in the near future.

Mr. D. Madill's shingle mill, which has been in operation for some time, is adding considerably to the business of the place. Any one wishing to purchase first class shingles may have their orders satisfactorily filled at a reasonable price by applying to the manager.

The Zion Methodist Sunday school, which was reorganized a short time ago, will open on the 3rd May.

On Monday evening last the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Carveth, was the scene of no little excitement, as a large number of their friends and neighbours gathered to participate in the joys and pleasures resulting from the consummation of the sugar making season. The first part of the evening was passed in various amusements and games, etc., in which all took an active part. When the taffy was copiously meted out, great satisfaction was exhibited in the sumptuous participation of the same. After expressing their many thanks and tendering their gratitude to their host and hostess all dispersed.

The Good Templars of Zion Lodge, No. 96, I.O.G.T., have decided to give a lunch social preceded by a suitable programme on Friday evening, May 1st, instead of their annual taffy social. This entertainment will doubtless be of equal profit and a very pleasant time is anticipated by all concerned.

Mr. Jordan Crowe has been spending his Easter holidays in the village, but he expects to return to his studies at Belleville College very shortly.

The North Dummer Football Club expect to re-organise very soon, and make preparations for summer athletic sports. During last summer they were very successful in winning or holding at their will most of the other teams who thought fit to contend with them, and so they deserve much credit. The team has become so famous that challenges are frequently received from teams holding the championship

An Obstinate Case of Eczema.

Mr. W. D. Johnson, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes that his father was entirely cured of a long standing and obstinate case of Eczema by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. His leg and foot were a mass of sores that refused to heal and he suffered terribly from the itching and stinging. Though he used a great many remedies and was treated by first-class doctors no permanent relief was obtained until he used Dr. Chase's Ointment.

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

Athletics Will Enter the Junior C. L. A.

Junior Colts Cricket Club Organized—Some Notes on Baseball.

Peterborough has at least one cricket club, the Junior Colts, being composed of boys between 14 and 16 years of age. It is understood that they are making arrangements with the Millbrook Colts to play here at an early date. The boys should be duly encouraged.

• • • •

The members of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society will, to-morrow evening, banquet the T.A.S. hockey team, the champions of the Trent Valley League for the season 1903. The Stratton Cup will be formally presented to the champions by an official of the League.

• • • •

With two lacrosse teams from Peterborough in the Canadian Lacrosse Association, the City League of last year should not be disbanded. There is plenty of material in town for a flourishing Junior City League. Both the Athletics and the T.A.S. could place a junior team in the league and no doubt the Y.M.C.A. could do likewise.

• • • •

Bobbie Mercier, the celebrated goal keeper of the Port Hope Hockey Club, is now a resident of Peterborough and will be found in the nets for the local seven next winter. Mr. Mercer is one of the best goal keepers in the Province and will be a tower of strength to the Peterborough team. He is in the employ of the Canadian General Electric Company.

• • • •

Amongst the lacrosse players who have located in town of late, who were not mentioned in the Examiner's review of the lacrosse situation a few days ago are—Mangritch who has played with the Excelsiors, of Brampton; Kirkpatrick, formerly of Cobourg; Wilson, formerly of Lindsay, and Kennedy of St. Catherines. Besides the above mentioned players Messrs. L. Dobbin, Vic. Hamilton and Bruce Rickey will be in the game.

• • • •

Oshawa has decided to enter a team in the Midland League and will send a representative to the meeting to be held at the Queen's Hotel, Port Hope, next Friday evening. This will make four clubs in the league, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Cobourg and Port Hope.

• • • •

An effort should be made to have a first class exhibition lacrosse match in Peterborough on May 25th. The T.A.S. team will likely be playing in Lakefield on that day, but the Athletics may be able to get on a game with some Toronto team.

• • • •

It is not altogether likely that Peterborough will have a team in the Midland Baseball League this season, as the baseball fever does not appear to have taken hold of the people of this town. However, it might be well to correct the eroneous reports that have been made concerning the connection of the Peterborough club with the Midland League in the past. It has been stated that the Peterborough club defaulted to Cobourg. This is not correct. The Peterborough club honourably withdrew from the series, and gave due notification to the executive of the league. A team called the Auburns applied for admission to succeed the Peterborough team, and this was granted. The Peterborough club was not in any way responsible for whatever the Auburn club may have done.

LACROSSE.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of the Athletic Lacrosse Club in the Oriental Hotel last evening, when various matters of importance were discussed, and the season's programme was fully marked out. The most important feature of the meeting was the decision of the club to enter the C.L.A. Junior Series.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Fred A. Clarke, second vice-president of the club, and there was a large attendance of members, including new players who have located in town.

It was announced that the proposed Trent Valley League had not very hopeful prospects and that it would be better to consider the advisability of entering the C.L.A..

A motion by Mr. McPherson, seconded by Mr. Ed. Dillon, to this effect was unanimously carried.

The matter of what grounds to practice on was fully discussed, and Messrs. J. J. Howden, R. M. Glover, and C. G. Graham, were appointed a committee to select a suitable place.

It was decided to pratcice on Monday and Thursday evenings on the Central Park, from 6 p.m.

Mr. J. J. Howden, the honorary president of the club, was in attendance and displayed much interest in the proceedings.

Referring to a meeting of the Lindsay lacrosse club, the Lindsay Post says:

"Some discussion took place as to arranging for an exhibition game on May 24th, but the matter was finally left with the committee to deal with. If satisfactory arrangements can be made with Father Phelan we understand the boys will journey to Lakefield on that day and play a game against the T.A.S. of Peterborough. An excursion will be run from Lindsay to Lakefield at a very low rate. The following have left their names with the secretary to be placed on the team: Messrs. Taylor, Cameron, Gillespie, Halward, Lennon, O'Leary, McWilliams, Hambly, Martin, Naylor, Gillogly, Reesor, Buck, Shannon, Torrance, Elliott, W. White, P. White Nicholls, Ross, Thompson, Ewart and Fobert, town, and Anderson, Port Perry.

• • • •

Rev. Father Phelan is endeavouring to secure Lindsay's twelve to cross sticks with St. Peter's T.A.S. at the Lakefield picnic on May 25th, (Victoria Day.)

A number of the T.A.S. members turned out last evening and spent several hours cleaning up the Murray street grounds in order to have them in readiness for the roller. They will resume operations again this evening and a good turn out of workers is expected.

St. Peter's T.A.S. Lacrosse team will open the season on the morning of Victoria Day, when they will play a first class visiting team.

The Victorias of Port Hope, will play in Campbellford on Victoria Day.

Hastings has an addition to their twelve in the person of Stark, who formerly lived in Richmond Hill.

BASKETBALL.

All lovers of the good old indoor game of basketball will be pleased to have another opportunity of witnessing a game on Saturday night, which will take the form of a double header. The Ladies' Hockey Team have decided to show the public that they can play basketball as well as hockey. They have two fast teams practising hard every afternoon in order that nothing but first-class basketball will be played. The two teams are named the Capitals and the Queen City's. Besides this game the Harriers have received a challenge from a picked team who have decided to take the scalps of the city champions. At half time the public will enjoy some gymnastics by a squad of seniors, who will work on the German Horse. Don't forget the date, Saturday night. Admission will be 15c., or two tickets for 25c. Remember the proceeds are in aid of defraying the expenses of the ladies' hockey team and Intermediate Baseball team.

GOLF.

The first of the weekly matches for the President's prize of balls, will be played by the ladies on Friday afternoon, beginning at three o'clock sharp and as this is the first match of the season it is hoped that there will be a large number of entries. This series of weekly games promises to be a very popular feature of the season. As it is a handicap round the new members are urged to compete. A picnic tea will be held at the club house at the close of the match.

WRESTLING.

It is stated that a wrestling match has been arranged to take place on or about either Monday or Wednesday next between Edmunds of Toronto, and Simon of Montreal, for a purse of $50. There will also be arranged a 15-round boxing match for a purse of $50.

CRICKET.

At a meeting held recently by the Peterborough Junior Colts the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. Richard Hall.
President—R. F. McWilliams.
Sec.-Treasurer—G. Greer.
Manager—A. Wood.
Captain—A. Moore.
Coach—Mr. Geo. Bourchier.
Team Committee—Captain, Secretary-Treasurer, Manager, E. Weller, B. Laing.
Patrons and Patronesses — Mr. and Mrs. J. Alexr. Culverwell, Dr. and Mrs. Burnham.

The club will practice on the Nichoval and will soon be ready for a match with Millbrook.

HOCKEY.

St. Peter's T.A.S. Hockey Team, (Trent Valley League champions) and the members of the Dramatic Section who presented the "Rose of Wicklow" on March 17th, will be banqueted by the T.A.S. Wednesday evening in the rooms Caterer Wm. McCullum will provide the spread, and the affair promises to be a memorable one. Those desiring to attend can secure tickets at the rooms of the T.A.S.

BASEBALL.

A special meeting of the Intermediate Baseball Club of the Y.M.C.A. is called for to-night at 7.30 sharp to decide matters of importance. Every member who has a list of subscriptions is asked to make returns to-night in order that funds can be gathered together at once for the securing of uniforms. It is quite likely that there will be a good game here on the 24th between the Intermediates and an outside team. The uniforms are green and red and look exceedingly nobby.

• • • •

A meeting of the Auburn Baseball Club will be held in the Oriental Hotel to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance of members is requested.

Y.M.C.A. GYMNASTICS.

A full attendance of all those taking part in the gymnastic exhibition at Lindsay are asked to be present to-night at eight o'clock, when another strong rehearsal will be held of both the wand drill and marching.

CANOEING.

There will be a meeting of the Trent Valley Canoe Club in the Y.M.C.A. Parlours on Wednesday night.

IMPERIAL LIFE.

A Year of Unexceptional Prosperity and Achievements.

Toronto • • The Executive Officials of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, report that the year just ended has been one of exceptional prosperity and achievements. It is a well known fact that the Imperial Life's past record has been unequalled in life assurance experience in Canada, but the most sanguine of its numerous policy-holders and active representatives throughout the Dominion will be surprised to learn of the following magnificent results:—Applications for assurances aggregated over $4,500,000; the policies actually issued exceeded the large amount of $4,000,000; cash income totalled over $500,000; the accumulated assets reached $1,650,000, while the entire policies of assurance in force exceed $13,500,000. It was also stated that the interest income from investments was again more than sufficient to pay all of the death claims of the year.

THE TORTURE OF BACKACHE.

It ages the young—cripples and enfeebles the old—incapacitates a man for work—unfits him for pleasure.

There is no need to endure the agony of an aching back—to be crippled with a sore, stiff, lame back.

DR. PITCHER'S BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS

Take away every bit of pain, stiffness and soreness — quickly and completely. Here is some convincing evidence:

FREE FROM PAIN.

Mr. Wm. Smith, Pinnacle St., Belleville, says:—"Before using Pitcher's Kidney Tablets, I was very much afflicted with lumbago. Since I used a bottle, I am not only free from that but I am sleeping better. The nervous restlessness has ceased. The dull aching in the small of my back has disappeared. I can vouch for Pitcher's Tablets being a reliable remedy for pain and lameness in the back."

IT HURT TO WALK.

John Histed, 71 Barton St., Hamilton, says:—"Just after a hard lift some three years ago, a severe pain started in the small of my back and over the right hip. It bothered me badly to walk. I was induced to try Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. I got a bottle and they were just the thing; they cured the pain and soreness completely."

There is no remedy in the world to equal Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets for curing, not only backache, but also Bright's disease, diabetes, dropsy, scalding or irritation of the urine, frequent calls during the day or night, blood impurities, skin eruptions, rheumatism, neuralgia, dragging pain in the loins and all kidney, bladder and urinary troubles of young or old.

WHAT IS WORN.

Sashes Coming In Again—Voiles Most Popular Fabrics.

The belt is playing a very important part in the up to date gown. Sashes are again coming in in the form of long ends attached to a wide pointed waistband. The effect is quite in keeping with the new ganged skirts so peculiarly becoming to tall, slight figures. The mode of the moment is much more becoming than the severely plain skirt, which showed up only too plainly every defect both of the wearer and the maker.

VISITING GOWN OF WOOL CREPE.

Voile or eolienne is a fabric which is very smart. The best voiles are those of a silky texture which fall very softly. There is not a great deal of difference between these and crepe de chine, but the former come a little cheaper.

Spots, from the smallest to the largest, are to be tremendously popular. Foulard is admirable in all spotted designs. There is something very chic, too, about a brightly spotted muslin.

The illustration shows a wool crape visiting gown.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Legally Qualified.

An old but sprightly patriarch stepped up to vote.

"How long have you resided in this precinct?" asked one of the judges of the election.

"Let me see," said the old man, musingly. "I moved here the next year after Lamech was born. Seven from nine leaves two. Eight from sixteen is eight. One to carry. Two from nine is seven. Something over 780 years, gentlemen. I am old enough to vote, too—if anybody should ask."

Whereupon, there being no objection, Methuselah—for it was he—was allowed to deposit his ballot.—Chicago Tribune.

The Fever of Unrest.

The expressman ran his pencil down the list of names on the last page of his book, then he looked at the calendar. "It will soon be time for that Miss Hughes to move again. She has been at No. 138 for six months."

"Is Miss Hughes in the habit of moving every six months?" asked the visitor.

"Well," said he, "I wouldn't put it at six months to the day, but her stay in any one place is never prolonged much beyond that period. She is a pretty good customer. I first moved her from a house in Thirty-fourth street seven years ago, and since then I have moved her regularly twice a year. And she is not the only person who gives me a steady job by any means. I have a number of people on my list who move at regular intervals. Some of them make a change every month or two, others only once a year, but no matter how long or how short their residence in a certain house, the fever of unrest is bound to seize them at stated times and along comes my order to move them again."—New York Times.

The Poor Dog.

A Parisian clothes dealer kicked a dog out of his shop. The dog shot out with some rapidity and knocked over a woman with a jug of milk. The woman broke the jug and upset an elderly gentleman, and the jug cut both of them. At that moment a cyclist arrived and was thrown off his machine by the prostrate figures, and simultaneously a cart came up and smashed the bicycle. The magistrate blandly advised the entire squad to proceed against the dog, and they are now looking for it.—London Globe.

Plenty on Hand.

"You would get along a great deal better if you didn't get so excited," said the calm man to his irascible friend. "Can't you learn to keep your temper?"

"Keep my temper! Well, I like that!" retorted the other. "I'd have you understand that I keep more temper in one day than you have in your possession during a whole year!"

It Wasn't All in Him.

"Johnny," said his mother severely, "some one has taken a big piece of gingerbread out of the pantry."

Johnny blushed guiltily.

"Oh, Johnny!" she exclaimed, "I didn't think it was in you."

"It ain't all," replied Johnny; "part of it's in Elsie."

Two Problems.

"Dorothy always begins a novel in the middle."

"What's that for?"

"Why, then she has two problems to be excited over, how the story will end and how it began."

Fortune smiles on the few. To the majority she gives the laugh.

Necessity is the argument of tyrants. It is the creed of slaves.—Pitt.

Where Drums Came From.

Drums are probably an eastern idea introduced by the Crusaders into Europe. They are frequently mentioned in the accounts of the first crusade. When Edward III. of England and his queen made their triumphal entry into Calais in 1347, "tambours" or drums were among the instruments which were played in their honor. Another of these was called a "nacaire" or kettledrum, taken, together with its name, from the Arabs. The poet Chaucer also mentions this instrument in his description of the tournament in "The Knight's Tale."

The king generally kept a troop of these bandsmen or minstrels in his employ, and we read that Edward II. on one occasion gave a sum of 60 shillings to Roger, the trumpeter; Janino, the nakerer, and others for their performances. Another minstrel was called the "cheveretter," or player on the bagpipe.

The Suicide of Hannibal.

Defeated at Zama, Hannibal fled to the east to avoid falling into the hands of the Romans and found temporary security in the dominions of Mithridates. He incited this monarch to engage in a Roman war, and, his advice as to its conduct being rejected, the war proved unsuccessful, and Mithridates was required as one of the conditions of peace to deliver up Hannibal to his enemies, the Romans. The unfortunate Carthaginian heard of his approaching fate, swallowed the poison which for years he had carried about his person and expired just as the envoys arrived to take him in charge.

The Way She Worked It.

"Of course you can't take a hint," she said, looking at him thoughtfully. He couldn't, and she knew it, and that's why she said it. It wouldn't have been necessary otherwise.

"Of course," he replied. "Have you been hinting at anything?"

"Oh, dear, no," she answered, with suspicious haste "I was just thinking, you know."

"Thinking of what?"

"Why, suppose—you suppose, you know—that I was a hint."

After pondering the matter deeply for several minutes he decided to take her.

ST. THOMAS MAN GIVES ADVICE.

Tells His Friends to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for Kidney Pains.

Lew Dake, Well-known Hotel-keeper, Gives his Experience With Canada's Great Kidney Remedy.

St. Thomas, Ont., April 19.—(Special.)—Everybody in St. Thomas and the surrounding country knows Lew Dake, proprietor of the Dake House and one of this railway centre's most popular citizens, and many people know that for years he was the victim of a very aggravated form of Kidney Disease. To-day he is a sound, healthy man. He used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Speaking of the matter recently, Mr. Dake said:—

"I had been troubled for over five years with my Kidneys and pains in my back. Nothing I used could give me any relief till finally on the advice of a friend I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"By the time I had finished one box the pains and Kidney Disease were gone. That is over five years ago now, and as I have had no return of the trouble since, I think I am safe in concluding that the cure was permanent.

"I advise all my friends who are troubled in the same way to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all stages of Kidney Disease from Pain in the Back to Bright's Disease.

Remote Kin.

Kind Lady—How many are there in the family beside yourself?

Little Amie—Four; mamma, papa, sister and a distant relative.

"That is only three. The distant relative is not a member of the family."

"Oh, yes, he is. He is my brother."

"Your brother? Then he isn't a distant relative."

"Yes, ma'am; he is in the Philippines."

Would Avoid the Trouble.

"I suppose you'd like to be worth a million dollars?" she suggested.

"No, mum," replied the tramp. "It 'ud be too much trouble lookin' after the money. All I want is that some feller what's worth a million dollars shall provide fer me."

As Ever.

Bismbodle (discouragedly)—I did everything in my power to make those two young people see that they were not fitted for each other—

As a Precedent.

Tom—Why were you so determined to kiss that plain cousin of yours?

Dick—I wanted to establish a precedent. She has two very pretty sisters you know.

R. McWhinnie

334 George Street.

A Noteworthy Race.

The population of St. Kilda, the most westerly of the inhabited Scottish isles, is a unique one in many respects. The people are the most lonely in the United Kingdom, there being very little communication with the mainland and sometimes not for months at a stretch. Socially the islanders are practically a commune. If the head of a household is injured or loses his life among the rocks, his widow and family share in the proceeds of their labor as if he were there to take part in it. If family illness prevents any one joining in the day's work, he is asked to stay at home, and his interests will not be lost sight of. All questions, complaints, etc., are determined by their mode, or local parliament, whose judgment is final. Early morning conferences usually determine the day's tasks.

St. Kildians are a most industrious and active as well as a religious people, and on the island at any rate the vexed problem of church attendance has been solved. Every man, woman and child capable of leaving the household goes regularly to church, and only some serious disability will keep any person at home.—Scottish American.

Influence of Children.

Childhood in its weakness is often a strength that resists the strain of all the passions, and that holds even when deep hatred exerts its power to drive asunder.

"If it were not for the child, I would not live with you another day," I heard an angry husband say to his wife, when righteous indignation drove him nearly to distraction.

That was quite a number of years ago, and now they have two more children to strengthen the bond between them. This little episode of domestic infelicity was recalled by some statistics that recently emanated from Berlin and which speak volumes.

These statistics have been carefully gathered from the divorce courts, and show that out of 1,000 divorces 540 were granted where there were no children, 214 where there was one child, 139 where there were two children, 60 where there were three children, 25 where there were four children, 12 where there were five children and 10 where there were six children.

He Wasn't Too Deaf.

Deafness is largely a matter of habit, says a writer in the New York Press. I know men who cannot hear you two feet away, though you bawl at them, yet at the distance of a block they will grasp your faintest whisper. Some are deaf for convenience, some for fraud, some for hypocrisy. Beware of the deaf man. One of the noted deaf men was old Matt Griffin, long ago an assemblyman from Griffin's Corners, Delaware county, N. Y. By courtesy deaf members receive front seats in the assembly, while others usually draw lots. When old Matt was excused from drawing a fellow member hotly protested. "But the old man is as deaf as a post," said the house leader. "Deaf!" exclaimed the protestant. "Matt Griffin deaf! Why, bless your honest soul, he could hear a ten cent shinplaster rattle in a bag of feathers!"

A Greater Convenience.

"The nearest doctor is miles away, isn't he?"

"Yes, but the cemetery is right handy."

An Impossibility.

I do not trust to luck, he said;
To thus accuse me is unjust.
I never can be thus misled;
I have no luck to which to trust.

THE ABUSE OF SOCIETY.

A Titled Lady Makes a Few Pertinent Remarks on the Subject.

The abuse of society is a favorite occupation with most people who cannot force an entrance into it. It is not even new. Cynics and satirists, preachers and writers have waged war on social amenities all down the ages. We know how Daniel denounced the Babylonian court and how Horace revealed the profligacy of Augustan Rome. Every leader of a regenerating movement, whether it be St. Bernard exhorting to crusades, St. Francis teaching Utopian poverty or John Knox preaching reformation, has denounced the easy morals and the easier standard of the toleration of current society. The reformers of every age denounce their own contemporaries in accents of varying degrees of violence. Rousseau and Voltaire poured out diatribes from different points of view against the frivolous society which was cut off so abruptly by the guillotine, but their denunciations fell on deaf ears. "Nobody," said Talleyrand, "could have any conception of how pleasant society could be who had not lived before the French revolution." To reform those who will not be reformed is difficult. The grandmother of Ambrosine, holding a scented pocket handkerchief to her nose to keep off the odor of the crowd as she tripped to the guillotine, and Mary, queen of Scots, yawning in the face of Knox, exactly typify the attitude of all ages toward the Jeremiahs hammering at the portals of society.—A Countess in London Outlook.

Musk.

Musk in the raw looks a good deal like axle grease and smells worse. The popular notion that the musk of commerce is obtained from the muskrat is a mistake. There is obtained a somewhat similar perfume from the muskrat, but most of the supply comes from the musk deer, a creature that is carefully reared in India for the sake of the secretion. The secretion is shipped in the crude state and is used not only in the manufacture of the liquid perfume sold as musk, but also in very small quantities to give strength and staying power to many perfumes made from the essential oils of flowers.

Curiously enough, the blossoms of two native plants have a noticeably musky odor. One is the small yellow blossom of a creeping vine known as the musk plant. Its odor is marked and is counterfeited in the commercial perfume called musk. The other is the bloodroot. The pure white blossom of that early spring plant has a distinct though delicate musky odor. A bean known as the musk bean is a cheap substitute for animal musk.

Instinctive Fear in Birds.

The instinctive fear of death manifested by birds is shown by the following: A canary died, was buried, the nesting place broken up, the surviving mate removed to a new cage and the old cage thoroughly cleaned and put aside till the following spring. Never, however, could any bird afterward endure being placed in that cage. They fought and struggled to get out, and if all in vain their efforts they moped, huddling close together, thoroughly unhappy, refusing to be comforted by any amount of sunshine, companionship or dainty food. The experiment was tried with foreign birds that had not been in the house when the death occurred and could not therefore have known of the event by observation. But the result was always the same. For the future that cage was haunted.

How It Really Happens.

"Johnny," cautiously inquired Mr. Sixaweek of her little brother when he called the other evening—"she" was putting the finishing touches to her toilet upstairs—"have you—er does you—er—do you—er—ever hear your sister speak of me?"

"You can't pump me," promptly replied Johnny. "I don't butt into my sister's business."

Then Johnny picked up a shinney stick out of the hall rack and went out.

This is the way it happens in 999 cases out of 1,000, but the funnyists could never be clubbed into believing it.

To-day Its's a Cold, What of the Morrow?

Wisdom Suggests Prompt Action, and There is no More Effective Treatment Than

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Sneezing and running at the nose, stuffed up feelings in the head, sore throat, tickling in the throat and coughing, and soon the cold reaches the bronchial tubes and works its way into the lungs.

This is the natural development of what is in the beginning "only a cold." It is the way in which scores and thousands are allowing colds to develop into bronchitis, pneumonia, consumption or some equally fatal lung trouble.

If colds were promptly cured there would be no need for sanatoriums and hospitals for consumptives. There would be little consumption. Because people have weak lungs they need not become consumptives if they will but guard against colds and cure them promptly by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

This great medicine has proven its right to a place in every home by curing croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and all sorts of coughs and colds. Its record of sales is phenomenal, and increases year by year as it becomes better known and is recomened from one person to another.

When buying Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine be sure to see portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase on the bottle. This will protect you against imitations. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Family size three times as much, 60 cents. At all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 6

Down on the Suwannee River

By WILLIAM HAVEN ROSS

Copyright, 1903, by McClure's Newspaper Syndicate

"Merlinda," drawled Cap'n Eph Biggs as he gave his back tilted chair another hitch toward the wall, "jes' ye stir yerself an' fetch yer dotin' daddy thet air plug uv terbacker he left on the counter."

There was no reply.

"Well!" ejaculated the cap'n. "Thet lazy gal's smoozin' like sixty an' lettin' trade git over inter the next county. M-e-r-linda!"

Still Melinda did not respond in person or by voice. The cap'n looked around in a helpless way. Over to the east he could see a murky stretch of the Suwannee river bending through the trees. There was a dusty, lifeless road in front of the shore. The cap'n reclined and reflected. It was hot, and he hated to move, but he wanted his tobacco, and, being a widower with but one child, his comfort certainly was dependent largely upon her. If she were too lazy to wait on her poor old daf, he thought, it only served to prove that he had wasted money when he bought her a melodeon.

While pondering on her ingratitude and shiftlessness he nearly lapsed again into slumber, but an awful thought intervened. It made him sit upright, bringing his chair down upon its four legs with a bang.

"Sam Womper!" exclaimed the cap'n. "I'll bet thet dodgasted razerback critter hes hed the effront'ry ter cum gallivantin' round hyar ag'in!"

He went through the store and into the house that formed the rear of it. Asleep in the little porch which framed the kitchen door was a small negro boy. Cap'n Eph kicked him.

"House up, Mose," said the cap'n, "an' tell me whar's Merlinda."

"I dunno, boss," said Mose, edging to get out of range. "I hain't seen her fer more'n er hour."

"Look hyar, leetle nigger brat, am ye goin' ter tell whar my darter is?"

"Don't yo' stomp, cap'n! Fer de Lawd's sake, don't stomp!" shrieked Mose, drawing his knees up to his abdomen in the agony of expectation. "I'ze gwine ter tell all I knows."

"Jes' ye tell!" was the cap'n's grim admonition.

"I seed Mis' Merlinda cum outer de doah an' wave her han'. Den I looked over yander," and Mose pointed to the north, "an' I seed Sam Womper up dar at de edge uv de cl'arin'. Den she done went inter de house an' got her bunnit. I seed her go over ter whar Sam wus loafin' round, an' bimeby I seed 'em git inter er dugout an' done go 'long."

"Maybe—maybe," soliloquised the cap'n, "I kin head 'em off at the bend. The river's mighty low, an' thar ain't much current. 'Sides, thet good fer nothin' clay eater am too lasy ter hit the water hard with er paddle."

The cap'n ran through the house and the store, seizing his shotgun on the way, and made over the country toward the woods which bordered the bend. When he poked his head through the underbrush upon the bank, he saw the dugout with Sam and Melinda aboard and less than fifty yards away. The stream was very narrow there, and Sam kept the boat near the shore to enjoy the coolness of the shade.

"I wisht I bed er gun. Did ye hear thet deer a-tearin' through the brush?" he heard Sam ask.

"I got the gun!" shouted the cap'n, drawing a bead on the young man as he spoke. "Ye jes' p'int thet boat right in hyar or I'll fill yer hide with buckshot!"

Sam paused with uplifted paddle long enough to conclude quickly that it was wise to obey, and when it struck the water again it sent the dugout flying toward the bank.

"Whar be ye goin,' Mis' Biggs?" the cap'n inquired of Melinda in fine irony.

"I wus goin' ter git merried, an' I'll do it yit," she replied so defiantly that the cap'n gasped.

"So ye will, so ye will," he responded—"I see ye gittin' too headstrong fer me—but not merried ter him, gal. I'll pick out the man fer ter be my son-in-lor, an' doan ye nevah fergit thet."

The cap'n climbed into the boat and pointed up stream. He sat down at that end of the craft, with his gun across his knees, and grimly suppressed his wrath. They had not gone far before the dugout glided by a big water oak whose branches extended far over the bank and were intwined by a huge grapevine. The fruit was ripe and hung in luscious clusters.

"Hol' on er minit," said the cap'n. "Lemme git er bunch."

Sam backed the boat under the tree, and the cap'n carefully placed his gun where he thought he could get it quickest and reached aloft among the tendrils. Sam let him get a good, firm hold and then drove the paddle into stream for one long, strong stroke. The dugout shot from under the cap'n's feet in an instant, leaving him dangling above stream thirty feet from shore.

"Bloody blazes! What on airth am ye about? Hey, cum back!" shouted the cap'n, but Sam began to beat the water with his paddle and to yelp like a dog. A big alligator shoved his snout out of the water immediately, almost, and, it seemed to the cap'n, blinked its ferocious eyes at him.

"Hey, Sam, quit yer foolin' an' back up hyar," said he. He was stout, and even the grip of desperation was not going to hold up 200 pounds until a hungry alligator went home.

"I ain't foolin'," said Sam solemnly. "I want ter merry Merlinda, an' hyar's whar I does it. Ye am jestice uv the peace an' kin tie us es tite es eny parson in Jawgy. If ye won't do it, why, then, ye kin drap. After thet gater hes chawed ye up thar won't be nothin' ter spile the weddin'. I reckon I'll be keepin' yer store after thet."

"Merlinda," gasped the cap'n, "will ye squat thar an' see yer only parent et up by sich er varmint? Grab the gun, gal, an' give him both barrels in the eyes!"

But Melinda chewed the ribbon of her sunbonnet and gazed far away.

Cap'n Eph felt that his strength was failing.

"Back up, Sam, an' take me aboard. I'll merry ye," he said at last.

"Nary a back," answered Sam. "No man wot hes ever been in politics in this yere county would take yer word fer anything. Yer gwine ter merry us right whar ye be."

The cap'n took another look at the alligator, and it set him in a tremble.

"Merlinda," said the cap'n, striving for a fresh grip, "d'ye take thet ornery cuss ter be yer husban' fer bettah or fer wuss? Thar couldn't be no wuss."

"Yes, paw," said Melinda.

"An' ye, ye dod blasted, yaller faced chipmunk, d'ye take my darter ter be yer lawful wedded wife? An' I hope she'll be like her ma!"

"You bet," said Sam, playfully splashing a little water at the alligator.

"Then I pronounce ye man an' wife. Now will ye back up?"

Cap'n Eph sank exhausted into the boat, and Sam slowly paddled up the river to the landing. Just before he turned the dugout in toward the shore he remarked:

Machinery Can Do No Wrong.

The machine by which railway tickets are printed gives a very amusing little show of intelligence, or what looks to be very like it. Railway tickets are not, as might be supposed, printed in large sheets and afterward cut up.

The cardboard is cut into tickets first and printed one by one afterward. The little blank cards are put in a pile in a kind of perpendicular spout, and the machine slips a bit of metal underneath the bottom of the spout and pushes out the lowest ticket in the pile to be printed and consecutively numbered.

"It is no use trying to print a bad ticket," says the attendant. "The machine finds out an imperfect blank in an instant and flatly refuses to have anything to do with it. Look here." He tears off the corner of one of the bits of card and puts it into the spout with the others, and you watch to see what happens.

One by one the blank cards are pushed out to the printing part of the mechanism with swiftness and precision until the mutilated ticket gets to the bottom and tries to smuggle through.

On the instant the machine stops dead and refuses to budge again until somebody comes and removes the impostor.

Pull out the damaged ticket, and the mechanism will set briskly to work again.—Chambers' Journal.

APPETITE WAS GONE.

TRIED MANY DIFFERENT REMEDIES BUT

MRS. WALTER MANTHORNE, BROOKLYN, N.S.

She says: "I suffered for three years with terrible headaches and rushing of blood to my head. I lost my appetite and became very thin and weak. I tried many different remedies and consulted doctors, but all in vain until I started to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I had not taken more than two bottles when I began to feel better, my appetite improved wonderfully and I increased rapidly in weight. I took altogether four bottles and am now as well as can be, for which I owe my thanks to Burdock Blood Bitters. I can recommend it to all those suffering as I did."

Dr. Chase's Ointment

STARTLED

By some sudden sound she drops the vase upon the floor. She is nervous and may be told that nervousness is a luxury which only a rich woman can afford to indulge in. Nervousness has cost many a woman her position. Sometimes when women run machinery the price of nervousness is mutilation,—a finger lost or perhaps the whole hand crushed.

Nervousness in women is commonly but a symptom of womanly disease. It is useless in such cases to "doctor" for the nerves alone. Cure the diseases which attack the delicate womanly organism and nervousness will be cured also.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, sick women well. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves and induces refreshing sleep.

"In the fall of 1897, I was troubled with nervousness, headache, heart trouble and female weakness," writes Miss Blanch M. Bracey, of Sain, Oswego Co., N. Y. "Last summer I wrote you and you advised me to try your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so and I began to improve rapidly. Continued taking the medicine, half a dozen each of 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery' for the space of five months, and in less than a year had regained my former health."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the muddy complexion.

Would You Banish Dangerous Spring Headache?

Try Nature's Cure

Paine's Celery Compound

And You Will Quickly Rejoice in a New Life.

While headaches are varied in character and are produced by a variety of causes, the majority of victims suffer either from nervous or bilious headaches. When neglected either form will quickly cause serious suffering and will assuredly prostrate the system. Nervous headaches, to which women are specially subject, arise from weak and inflamed nerves, heavy and dull brain, poor circulation and debility. Bilious headaches are usually accompanied by sickness and vomiting. They result from inactive liver, digestive disturbances or sore and constipated bowels.

In the spring time, able and experienced physicians urge upon those who are subject to headaches the use of Paine's Celery Compound. In tens of thousands of cases this wonderful remedy has produced happy and permanent effects after all other modes of treatment had failed. Unlike other medicines claiming popular attention Paine's Celery Compound gives prompt and effective results. It gives to weak and sick people an immediate supply of nerve force, with pure blood, active liver, and perfect digestive vigour. The work of Paine's Celery Compound is not a simple relieving of pain; it effectually reaches the root and cause of disease and permanently banishes the trouble. Mrs. L. Garland, Crawford street, Toronto, Ont., says:—

"Your Paine's Celery Compound has most wonderfully improved my health. Before using it I was weak and debilitated and suffered much from headache. Your Compound has made me a new woman, and I wish it the success it so richly deserves."

First Wheel Clock.

Some say that Archimedes made the first wheel clock as early as 200 B. C., says the London Electrical Age. Others give credit to Wallingford, who lived so late as the beginning of the fourteenth century. But the most perfect water clocks were, long before the latter period, furnished with wheels, so that the only improvement was the substitution of a solid body to act as a moving weight instead of water. It is not to be wondered at that the application of a weight to clocks as a moving power should attract so little attention, as water and sand were undoubtedly thought more convenient by contemporary writers. The oldest complete clock moved by weights is probably that sent by the sultan of Turkey to Frederick II. in 1232. In the thirteenth century many of the church steeples in Italy were furnished with clocks moved by weights, which struck the hours. Hele of Nuremberg is supposed to have constructed the first watch in 1500, and to him must also be given the credit of the spring clock. The fusee was probably invented in England about the end of the sixteenth century. But it was not until the middle of the seventeenth century that the pendulum was first applied to clocks by Huyghens.

Contentment.

One who had tried several times to jump across a stream and had repeatedly fallen in finally succeeded, when he said to a friend, "How much better I am than you in having accomplished a difficult feat."

"Not at all," replied his friend. "I am better than you in not wishing to jump across."

The Difference.

"What a luxury a clear conscience is!" exclaimed the high minded statesman.

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum, "it's a luxury, but it isn't a necessity."

BACK FROM THE FIRE.

The Homeward Trip as Viewed From the Horse's Standpoint.

And after it was all over—when the red and yellow flames had ceased to dance in the empty window spaces, when only the white steam smoke rolled up through the yawning roof holes—the ladders were reshipped, you left the purring engines to drown out the last hidden spark, and you went prancing back to your house, where the lonesome desk man waited patiently for your return.

No loping rush was the homeward trip. The need for haste had passed. Now came the parade. You might toss your head, arch your neck and use all your fancy steps. The driver didn't care. In fact, he rather liked to have you show off a bit. The men on the truck, smutty of face and hands, joked across the ladders. The strain was over. It was a time of relaxing, for behind was duty well done.

Then came the nice accuracy of swinging a sixty foot truck in a fifty foot street and of backing through a fourteen foot door wheels which spanned thirteen feet from hub rim to hub rim.

After unhooking there were the rubbing and the extra feeding of oats that always follow a long run. How good it was to be bedded down after this lung stretching, leg limbering work!—Sewell Ford in "Horses Nine."

A Queer Monument.

Standing in Mount Hope cemetery at Logansport, Ind., is one of the queerest monuments ever erected to the memory of any individual. It is over the grave of William H. Reighter. The statue part of the monument represents Mr. Reighter as he was attired when stricken with heart disease. Mr. Reighter was a ditch contractor and prominent in his locality. It was on a rainy day that death came, and he was well prepared for the weather. He was wearing a broad brimmed hat, a mackintosh over his suit of clothes and his trousers legs were in his rubber boots. The members of the family, wishing to remember him as he looked when last he bade them goodby, employed a man about the same size and build as Mr. Reighter to have his photograph taken in the clothes last worn by the deceased, and when he had carried out the idea they replaced the head on the photograph with the head of a likeness of Mr. Reighter. This picture was sent to a sculptor in Italy, with the request that a life sized statue be made from it in Italian marble. The statue is true to life. It cost $5,000.

The following despatches have been received by E. M. Poussett & Co.:—

New York, April 21st, 10 a.m. — All Manhattan difficulties adjusted. Bankers more optimistic on money outlook. No demand for stocks in loan crowd. Banks gained since Friday $1,698,000. Last week's increase on C.P.R. largest ever had. Atchison expects big earnings on all Western Roads.

DOW, JONES & CO.

After close yesterday there was considerable discussion of action of Judge Sanborn permitting payment of dividend by N.S.; regarded as a modification of federal decision to effect, that while combination found to have been formed and acting contrary to law, it says that no innocent or real holder of sec. of Coy. in the combine shall be injured. Lawyers who have followed case closely, lay stress on decision, and say interpretation will be regarded more important by financial interests, after they have more carefully studied them. London comes good this morning. This leads to observation that market's course is not unlikely to be characterised by advances in specialities of better class, whose friends will accept presentation as sufficiently free from pressing influences to allow moderate improvement in good stocks. On account holiday to-morrow, there is likely to be considerable evening up. Sentiment bullish and rally not unlikely, but for present would take profits on all rallies with view to buying back on soft spots.

M. & M.

New York April 21st, 1.10 p.m. — Impossible to guess on length of advance but on much further rally; I feel sure it is a cinch to sell the market on a scale up.

E. PERKINS.

Break in May wheat caused by profit-taking. Armour bought May wheat on break and caused the upturn. No special news.

M. & M.

Messrs. Haight & Freese, Stock Brokers, submit the following:—

New York, April 21st.—Manh. will surely cross 150 on the spring bull movement. Its future is as secure as any feature can be. Keep long of B.O., M.O.P., P.A., N.Y.C. W. K. Vanderbilt generally celebrated marriages in the family by giving the bride a block of Central. Take on some Rdg. on any slight dip. The Morgan group is getting ready to advance. Hold the steels. It is again to buy copper conservatively. There will be a closing up of short contracts to-day on account of the holiday to-morrow. R. I. is being well bought. Specialties—T.C.I. and Sugar will go higher as will B.R.T.

JOSEPH.

New York, April 21st.—The reaction yesterday morning having somewhat cleared the atmosphere marketwise. We are inclined to look for further important gains to-day. There are likely to be some contracts evened up to-day on account of the holiday to-morrow, and a little irregularity may ensue. We do not believe the anthracite coal trouble will have much effect on prices for the time being. We are very bullish on M.O.P. There are signs that sugar will work a little higher. Atch. recovery yesterday shows the advisability of buying it when weak. The same be said of B.O. The Gaes. party will probably gut L.N. higher. We get bull points on London, Americans irregular.

TOPICS.

Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., Stock Brokers, Toronto, write as follows:—

New York, April 20th,—After a fairly strong opening this morning the market remained in a state of dullness for a long period without any especial feature with the exception that the whole list was strong. The tractions together with M.O.P., and U.P. were in good demand. Principal buying, however, came from the short interest. Shortly after noon a selling movement was started which caused the market to sell off from one to one and a half per cent.; Union Pacific selling to 89 3-4; Missouri 107 7-8; St. Paul 161 and the rest of the list proportionately. About this time the decision in the case of the Northern Securities became known as favourable to the company, and the whole list, turned in a flash, and in the space of 15 minutes stocks had reached, in most cases, a great deal higher figure than at any time during the day; going up by leap and bounds. St. Paul to 163 1-8; M.O.P. to 109 1-2; U. P. 91 1-4; B.O. 93 1-4. This decision should be a far reaching one and will probably be used for all it is worth by the bulls. Money conditions are favourable to higher prices, as well as the record breaking crop of winter wheat. However, it is nothing more than natural that stocks should have a little set back as the rally has been sharp. At the close prices were at their best. It looks as if the corner had been turned for the present, at least, and we look for higher prices in the near future.

Chicago.—May wheat reached highest point, selling 78 1-2. The pool say they will put it to 80. Corn and oats quiet and steady.

WHERE HAS GAMEY GONE?

Q.—Now never mind that. If he says that he saw these entries of September, 1902, in this book when he was at your place you could not contradict him? A.—No.

Q.—Then you have on one side, have you, the cash received, and on the other side the payments? A.—Yes; there is another book besides this.

Q.—Then from the item ending January 27th, 1903, and for nine pages prior to that you have the consecutive leaves running, payments out? A.—Yes; they appear to be intact.

The book showed the following receipts from Gamey: March 20, $100; March 28, $50; April 3, $200; April 11, $55; April 17, $50. It also showed the following payments to Gamey: March 28, $100; March 31, $65; April 8, $200. On September 11 $900 was deposited to the credit of the company by Gamey.

The Chancellor—On April 3rd you got $200 and paid $200? A.—Yes.

Mr. Johnston—What was the object of that? A.—He gave me the $200, and asked me if I would give him a marked check for it. he wanted to transmit it somewhere.

A Missing Deposit Slip.

Mr. Gamey was in his office Saturday morning when he arrived there, and was there twice afterwards. The first time he noticed the mutilation of the cash book was late on Saturday afternoon. He had not seen Gamey since then, and did not know where he is. He saw Gamey make the $900 deposit slip in the bank on Sept. 11, but could not tell the denomination. That was in the morning. A messenger from the bank asked Gamey in the office Saturday morning about the deposit slip. The messenger produced a paper and said, "That is not the slip." He did not hear Gamey's reply. He went to the bank with the messenger, and the receiving teller. Howarth, came back with him. He did not ask for an explanation, and did not know what took place. He saw a deposit slip in Howarth's hand. He had no further conversation with Gamey about the matter. Howarth and Gamey were together about fifteen minutes, and then Howarth went out, followed by Gamey, and "I have not seen him yet," said Mr. Crossin, and he added that he knew nothing more about the slip, except that on the way back to the office they seemed to follow Gamey's route apparently looking for a lost paper. Gamey searched his pockets in the bank for the deposit slip.

Had Lost the Slip.

The Chancellor—Q.—Did you understand Mr. Gamey had got some paper from the bank which he had lost? A.—Yes, I understood it was a deposit slip that he wished to show me.

Mr. Johnston—Q.—From whom did you understand that? A.—From Mr. Gamey himself.

Q.—When did he tell you? A.—In the presence of the messenger.

Q.—That was the excuse which was given, whether rightly or wrongly? A.—That is the only explanation that was given to me.

Mr. Johnston—I am not at liberty to say what the line of action will be, but I should like your Lordships to say that this book (refers to cash book from which pages are missing) should remain in the custody of the court for a few days, sealed up. I have no desire whatever to deprive Mr. Crossin of it, but——

The Chancellor—Do you make any objection to that, Mr. Crossin?

Mr. Crossin—It doesn't interfere with us very much.

Except Sept. 11, the only other deposit slip made out by Gamey was about two years ago. This $900 was the balance which Gamey owed the company to be used in the business. The company was incorporated January 13th last with 500 shares of $100 each, of which Gamey now holds 65. Gamey is now the largest holder of outstanding stock, and holds the majority. There was no transfer of those shares in Gamey's name.

Could Trace the Slip.

Mr. Johnston said before closing his cross-examination that he would like to have Mr. Howarth present. Mr. Johnston stated he could trace the missing teller's slip to Mr. Gamey's hands through the teller, and its non-return.

Re-examined by Mr. Ritchie:

Q.—Have you produced for the inspection of counsel for the defence all the books in your possession? A.—All the books that have ever been in my possession in connection with our business.

Q.—And they were produced to Mr. McEvoy, one of the counsel for the defence? A.—Yes, in our office on Friday.

Q.—Did you hand over all the books to him? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you say, so far as you know at that time, the books were intact? A.—Yes, as far as I know, they were.

Q.—Although there always had been some loose leaves? A.—Yes.

Heard Stock Was Sold.

He had heard that Mr. Gamey had transferred some of his stock, but it has not been formally reported on the books yet.

The Chancellor—Q.—Did you hear of this sale during this enquiry? A.—Yes, my lord, it was last Tuesday.

Mr. Johnston called for Mr. Howarth, but he was not present.

The Chancellor—I suppose you will have to get Mr. Crossin back at some future time.

At this point Mr. Crossin requested the return of his cash book.

The Chancellor—On the understanding that this book remains intact, it will be restored to you.

Mr. Crossin—It will be put under lock and key. I just merely wish to have it.

All Written on One Machine.

Mr. Osborn, the export on typewriting, was then recalled, but the defence made the admission that series No. 2 consisting of the unsigned letter of September, 1902, the letter signed F. J. S. and the X, Y, Z. letter were all written by Sullivan on the same machine. Further, it was admitted that The Globe interview, the typewritten letter enclosed in X. Y. Z. letter, which was apparently a speech for Gamey, and the letter Gamey sent the Premier from Gore Bay announcing his support of the Government, were all written by the same typewriter machine. Finally, it was admitted that letters of Oct. 2, Oct. 10, Oct. 2, and Sept. 10 were all written on the same machine in Mr. Stratton's office.

Expert Without Business.

Mr. McPherson—That covers the entire series and establishes everything I could hope to establish.

Mr. Osborn stepped down.

Mr. Blake said he would proceed with his case to-day, and the court adjourned at 3.50 p.m.

House to Meet To-Day.

Toronto, April 21.—At 3 o'clock to-day the Legislature will meet. In view of the fact that the funeral of Sir Oliver Mowat will be held on Wednesday, it is thought that the House will merely place on record its regrets, extend its sympathies to the family, and adjourn until Thursday.

Premier Ross stated yesterday that he was ready to proceed with the business of the House, and Mr. Whitney says that he is ready, too; so that a further adjournment is improbable.

MR. MORTIMER CLARK, K. C.

Succeeds the Late Sir Oliver Mowat as Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario.

Ottawa, April 21.—Mr. W. Mortimer Clark, K. C., of Toronto, has been appointed Lieut.-Governor of Ontario. His commission was made out last night, and Mr. John J. Magee, Clerk of the Privy Council, will carry it to Toronto and administer the oath of office to the new Governor.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism.

"For years, when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie Macdonald, of Man, Logan County, West Virginia. "I tried everything with no relief, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment. A Gentle but Effective Laxative; not a Cathartic

Character Building.

Character is the wool of honor from which a coat of mail can be woven that the swiftest arrow of shame or the keenest knife of disrepute cannot pierce. Every thought that enters our mind, every act we do and every word we utter adds a link to the golden chain of character. The strength of a steam engine can be estimated to within an ounce of its limit, but it is impossible to estimate the force of a noble character. The hardest hearts are softened and the most repulsive dispositions become fascinating. Our failures and our successes help to form a reputation that may be destroyed by an external force, but the destruction of a character can only be effected by some internal force.—Our Boys' Magazine.

Her Reason.

Dr. Porter had responded to a note left at his door by a farmer asking him to go as soon as possible to see his little boy, who had "a very bad cold."

The doctor took one look at the child and turned to the mother.

"Don't you know your boy is coming down with measles?" he asked severely.

"Yes, doctor, I knew he was," said the woman.

"Then what in the world did you mean by writing me he had 'a very bad cold?'" asked the doctor.

The woman hesitated for a moment; then, looking at her husband, she said, with sullen frankness, "Neither him nor me knew how to spell measles."

MR. R. R. GAMEY IS IN BUFFALO.

Member for Manitoulin Contradicts His Counsel.

SAY THEY KNEW HIS PLANS.

He, However, Excepts Mr. Blake in This Connection.

F. SULLIVAN CLAIMS LIBEL.

Mr. Gamey's Explanations Regarding the Proceedings in Ontario Bank—Commission's Short Session—Prosecuting Counsel Startled by Mr. Gamey's "Unaccountable Absence"—Talked of Retiring.

Buffalo, N.Y., April 22.—Mr. Gamey reached here on Sunday afternoon. Strange to say, this has been the Mecca of Conservative politicians ever since, though his lawyers said they knew nothing of his whereabouts yesterday morning to the commission in Toronto. Mr. A. W. Wright, Conservative Organizer, registered at the same hotel Monday, but says he is here on private business. Mr. Wm. Masson of Owen Sound, a brother of Judge Masson, arrived here yesterday morning, also at the same hotel. Mr. W. J. Hanna, Conservative M. P. P. for Lambton, was also among the arrivals. They all said they had nothing to do with Mr. Gamey.

"Taking a Rest."

The chief actor himself has been about ever since his arrival, without any pretence at concealment. He registered at the Mansion House as "R. R. Gamey, Sudbury."

To a Toronto reporter he said in answer to question "Why are you here?"

"Oh, for a rest, and to get away from you fellows." He went out of the hotel to keep an engagement with some friends at 8 o'clock. He has cousins here, and with them he spent the evening.

Says His Lawyers Knew.

Returning to the hotel about midnight, he said he would return to Toronto as soon as his friends told him he was needed.

"Well, did your lawyers know you were away?" A.—"Why, certainly, they all knew about it." "Well, Mr. Blake said in court that he did not know anything about your absence." A.—"I guess that is right. Mr. Blake did not know, but the others did."

Bank Deposit Slip.

"There are some ugly stories about your absence." A.—"I am all right. What are they?"

"It is said you will be charged with larceny." A.—"Larceny?"

"Well, that deposit slip." A.—"The deposit slip was my own property.

"Well, how do you explain the transaction with the bank." There was no larceny about it."

"It was this way. Mr. Crossin said I paid that money on Sept. 11, and I thought it was long before. After some discussion I decided to go to the bank to see in whose handwriting the slip was, and I took it away with me. I made a copy of it for business reasons."

"What became of the original?"

"If I told you that you would know as much as I do," laughed Mr. Gamey, and that was all the explanation he would give in that regard.

"It is said you will be charged with forging the teller's name." A.—"That is ridiculous; I never signed his name or initials. I merely made an exact copy of the original. Mr. Crossin said in the box that the $900 was deposited in the bank by me, but he is mistaken. I paid it to him, and I wanted to prove in whose handwriting the slip was. I have put $500 into the company since Sept. 11."

The Mutilated Cash Book.

"Do you know anything about the cash book?" A.—"The old man knew it was a loose, poorly kept affair, which we intended to change as soon as we were incorporated."

"Did you tear out the leaves referring to the $900 deposit?" A.—"No, of course not. I was in the office, I admit, but never touched the book. If anyone tore out leaves it must have been Mr. McEvoy," said Gamey, with a laugh.

"You are not serious?" A.—"Oh, no, I don't accuse Him; but I did not."

"It is said that the $900 was part of the $3,000 you claim to have got from Mr. Stratton, and that you gave Frank Sullivan only $600?" A.—"Not at all, I got the $900 before, as I have said. Frank Sullivan divided the $3,000 with me. Why don't they take his evidence?"

"Are you afraid of arrest if you return?" A.—"Certainly not. I have got to go back for my business, and I have a friend or two."

Not Paid to Go Away.

"Have you transferred any of your Crossin Piano Company stock?" A.—"I owned 55 shares of $100 each. Mr. Smyth, M. P. P. for Algoma, wanted to buy fifteen shares, but as I had no fifteen-share certificate I sold him a 25-share certificate for $1,500 and endorsed it, so that I retain ten of those shares. I therefore still own forty shares. This transaction with Mr. Smyth was not entered in the books, and Mr. Crossin is right about that."

"It is said you were paid by the Government to go away?" A.—"That is not true. I came here of my own accord, and will return when I am wanted."

Mr. Gamey's answers to those somewhat embarrassing questions were given promptly and with apparent frankness.

Frank Sullivan Claims Libel.

Among those who arrived here last night were Mr. Frank Sullivan and Mr. J. M. McEvoy, one of the solicitors for the defence. They were on the way to Rochester to make sure that two witnesses there, called by the prosecution, would turn up on Thursday. Mr. Sullivan was very indignant at an item in a Toronto evening paper stating that he had admitted sharing the $3,000 with Mr. Gamey. On the train here he noticed the item in the paper, and instructed Mr. W. M. German, M.P., of Welland, to enter suit for libel at once. Messrs. Sullivan and McEvoy expect to return this evening.

COMMISSION ON TUESDAY.

Absence of Gamey the Chief Feature of the Short Session.

When the court opened at 10.30 the Chancellor asked: "Who is the next witness?"

Mr. Blake—My Lord, I was desirous of having Mrs. Sullivan, the wife of Mr. Frank Sullivan, here, and also the father-in-law, Mr. George Wilson. As to these two witnesses, my learned friend, Mr. Johnston, says that he will have them here at 10 o'clock on Thursday. I propose that we should examine a witness or two in order to show what efforts have been made to serve them with subpoenas, their whereabouts and the like. That undertaking will be perfectly satisfactory, My Lords, and may save the trouble and time of having that examination. It is stated Mr. Wilson is absent in Rochester, and is not in very good health, and my learned friend has said that if possible he is to be here, not absolutely giving that undertaking.

The Chancellor—Subject to the production of those witnesses, have you any other evidence?

Placed in a Difficulty.

Mr. Blake—Then, my Lords, I desire to state a difficulty in which my learned friends that are with me and myself feel placed. My notice, at all events, was not called to the fact of the absence of Mr. Gamey until yesterday. It is an unaccounted absence up to the present; it may be accounted for. I can give no information to the commissioners upon that subject. If this were simply a matter as between Mr. Gamey and the defendants, and the client absenting himself without any information, it might be a fair reason for withdrawing from the case, but I have two difficulties in the way: In the first place, the absence of Mr. Gamey at present is unaccounted for. He is a member of Parliament.

Threaten to Withdraw.

The examination would affect very greatly his character, and I cannot feel satisfied, unless he chooses it, with notice given to him, that these proceedings should be taken in his absence, my Lords. Another matter is this: Supposing that if he be not present here on Thursday, my learned friends and myself would feel very much inclined to drop out of the proceedings, but we feel from what your Lordships have said and generally from the class of matter that it is not a question between Mr. Gamey and others, but it is an investigation in the interests of the public generally, and my learned friends and myself desire to place ourselves entirely in the hands of your Lordships in that respect. It being a client, we would say that would end the matter, but there being the large body to be represented, if your Lordships thought that it was our duty and fit and proper here on Thursday, if Mr. Gamey be not present, still to endeavor to aid the commission by the presentation and examination of witnesses, that we shall do; if, on the contrary, your Lordships think it is only a matter of Mr. Gamey, and that we are not thus bound by other considerations, we shall withdraw.

Not a Private Matter.

At this stage the Chancellor and Chief Justice Falconbridge consulted together, after which the Chancellor said: "My brother and myself think that the aspect of the case is as presented by Mr. Blake; it is not a private inquiry, it is not a private prosecution in respect of a criminal offence, but this is a matter which, as stated in the statute under which we act and under which the commission which is issued, pertains to the good government of the country, which is a matter of public moment, and the commission and the authorities have seen fit to direct that in this case counsel should be retained, and should have the opportunity of presenting the case to the best advantage to assist the commissioners to arriving at the result and the opportunity of conducting the case in such a way as to assist materially in arriving at the facts.

Counsel Should Not Withdraw.

"It would be a misfortune, I think, if, on account of this present absence of the person whom we may call the prosecutor, in form if not in substance, an absence which may be repaired later, Mr. Blake and his colleagues were now to withdraw from the case; it would leave us, the commissioners, in this difficulty; that counsel would be only on one side, and we ourselves, under the old practice of the court, should have to be counsel for the absent party. That would be undesirable, and if Mr. Blake and his colleagues were to retire we should feel constrained to ask some counsel to take the matter up for the purpose of examining witnesses and conducting the case, and so on, which would be regrettable, because you and your colleagues are still in the case, and can conduct the matter with more efficiency and more promptitude, which is of some consequence in this case owing to the meeting of the Legislature. You are in a position to do that much better than any new counsel could. Therefore our wish would be that you should continue in the discharge of this duty till the very end, in order that all the methods of inquiry may be properly made and all honest people satisfied that everything has been done in the interests of truth and justice in this case which can be done by the most skilled counsel.

Would the Case Be Closed?

"I would just ask whether, subject to the production and examination of these witnesses, your case will be closed, because if you say you have no further evidence except to examine these two witnesses that

Miss Alice M. Smith, of So. Minneapolis, Minn., tells how woman's monthly suffering is permanently relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain and could find no relief, but one day while visiting a friend I run across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain, and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change."—MISS ALICE M. THE COMMISSION JUSTIFIED.

(Toronto Star.)

Mr. Gamey's disappearance and the continuance of the inquiry in his absence introduces a new precedent into Parliamentary usage. In the Legislature now Mr. Stratton no longer has an accuser, and without an accuser it is unheard of in British practice that a member of Parliament should be put on trial. If, therefore, the case had gone to a committee of the House, instead of to judges, the inquiry would have come to a stop at this stage for lack of an accuser. The committee would have reported to the House Mr. Gamey's disappearance, and the Government would have been justified in demanding that some one should step into Mr. Gamey's place and assume the responsibility of the charges, or, failing that, the abandonment of them. But the commission of judges has justified itself in this respect also that it has determined to go through with the inquiry, Mr. Gamey, or no Mr. Gamey. In the heated field of a political committee, the investigation would have run into chaos at this juncture. Before the judicial tribunal it is going to be carried on, and carried as much further as Mr. Blake and the other lawyers for the Conservatives see fit, and the public interests demand. We venture the prophecy that for the future charges of the same kind in this country will always be referred to judges, and no one will argue for any other kind of a tribunal.

The Star might have added that the three weeks wasted by the Opposition in trying to show that the Government by appointing a commission was burking investigation, were absolutely wasted, and the large expenditure involved, absolutely wasted also. The Government demanded investigation, and promised the most effective tribunal possible, and, as the Star points out, events have showed that the Royal Commission appointed at the instance of the Government, is affording every facility for the fullest possible investigation.

FATHERS OF CONFEDERATION.

The roll of the "Fathers of Confederation" is getting smaller and smaller. There are twenty-six. The death of Sir Oliver Mowat reduces the list to six, Messrs. A.A. Macdonald, Senator P.E.I.; R.B. Dickey, Senator; W. McDougall, C. B.; Sirs Ambrose Shea, Newfoundland, Charles Tupper, Nova Scotia, and Hector Langevin, Quebec.

A FREE WATERWAY.

(News.)

The receipts from canal dues are so small as to be trivial, Mr. Fielding tells us. The abolition of the dues for two years will cause no appreciable loss to the treasury, and it may aid in diminishing the cost of transportation. Winnipeg advices state that there are still in the Territories and Manitoba sixteen million bushels of last year's crop. The representatives of the lake shippers who waited upon the Minister of Railways and Canals last week submitted a statement showing that the rate per bushel from Fort William to Kingston is to be three and a half cents this year. The total charge to Montreal wil be 6.31 cents. These estimates put the canal toll at one-third of a cent per bushel, so that the abolition of the tolls should make the cost to Montreal as nearly as possible six cents. The cost of sending a bushel of wheat from Fort William to New York via Buffalo is 6.68 cents. The Canadian route should thus have an immediate advantage of two-thirds of a cent.

The lake carriers assured Mr. Blair that with the improvement of the St. Lawrence and Montreal terminals and the better facilities in handling given by the vastly increased Canadian fleet, the net balance in favour of Montreal as compared with New York will be 1.68 cents per bushel. On the sixteen million bushels of last year's Canadian crop alone there should, therefore, be a large saving, which may be swelled to still greater proportions by added American business. The Americans may attempt to meet the competition by reducing the present Erie Canal rate of 3.78 cents a bushel, but with their small barges it is difficult to see how any reduction can be made that will approximate the Canadian rates and leave anything for the United States transportation companies. The only way by which they can do the work as cheaply as we can wil be by an enlarged Erie Canal, admitting boats of doubled or trebled capacity. These, of course, can be operated almost as cheaply as are the small vessels now in use. But to enlarge the Erie would cost a hundred million dollars. The people of New York are to vote on a vote sanctioning this expenditure. Judging from the opinions of the press of the State, the taxpayers will give the project its quietus in short order. Even for so rich a commonwealth as the Empire State a hundred millions is a large sum of money to spend in order that transportation companies may pay dividends and that wheat may be shipped from a port of New York.

MOWAT AND BEACONSFIELD.

Sunday was the death day of Sir Oliver Mowat and the twenty-second anniversary of the death of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, one of Britain's greatest Premiers and patriotic and imperial statesmen. "Primrose Day" has long been a memorial in Britain of his worth. Beaconsfield and Mowat had some qualities in common, one especially, their sterling British sentiment, and their loyal devotion to the Empire. The late queen caused the words: "Kings love them who speak the truth" to be placed on the monument she erected to his memory; the same may be written on any memorial of Sir Oliver Mowat. He was called by some, sneeringly, "th e Christian Statesman." He lived up to his profession, greatly to the good of political events.

HOW TO GAIN HEALTH.

A Simple Plan That Should be Followed by all who are Sick.

If you could buy back your health on the instalment plan—say 50 cents a week, for a limited number of weeks until cured—would you do it? Here is a plan worth trying;—Taking into account their power to cure, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, are the most economical medicine, without exception. These pills have effected cures in cases of rheumatism, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, indigestion, kidney trouble, anaemia, and other serious diseases of the blood and nerves. They have cured hundreds of cases where ordinary medicine had been tried and failed. They have restored helpless invalids to full use of limbs that had long been powerless. That is the best guarantee that these pills will not disappoint when used for simpler ailments. Taking one pill after each meal, (as required for minor troubles) a fifty-cent box of pills gives nearly two weeks' treatment. For chronic diseases, when the larger dose is required, the cost of treatment does not usually exceed fifty cents a week. If you are sick or ailing, is it not worth your while to give so effective a medicine as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial? What the pills have done for other people they can do for you. Every dose makes the new rich, red blood that brings robust health and strength. They are the best tonic medicine to take at this time of the year when the blood is sluggish and impoverished.

Do not waste money on ordinary medicines, or substitutes; see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.

Many People Visiting in Keene—The Telephone Company's New Line.

Keene, April 22.

Miss L. Bull of Toronto, spent the Easter holidays with her cousin, Miss Harrison.

Rev. J. W. McIntosh, of Centreville, exchanged pulpits with Rev. D. D. McDonald last Sunday.

But one license for Keene was granted at the meeting of the Commissioners of East Peterborough last Saturday.

Net fishing in Rice Lake will discontinue this week.

Miss M. M. Campbell spent the Easter holidays in Toronto.

Thos. Wedlock has again opened up business in the corner blacksmith shop recently occupied by Thos. Tully.

Bruce McFee and Lex Secombe have returned to Norwood to resume their studies in the High School.

Mrs. W. A. Eaton is spending the week with her sister, Mrs T. J. Wallace.

A fifth wire is being strung on the main line of the Bell Telephone Company's poles passing through here. This gives a direct service with Villiers and Westwood, which has long been needed. A branch line is also being constructed to the Keene station. When this work of extension is carried on still further so as to give us direct service with Lang, Jermyn, Indian River Station and Warsaw, things will be much more satisfactory. We may mention that this little extension was not considered by the Bell Telephone Co. until a local company resolved to make the complete extension, and the former found that they had not a monopoly.

The Y.P.S.C.E. of the Methodist church are to be commended and congratulated on the excellent entertainment they gave us on Easter Monday evening in the town hall. The numbers were very appropriate to the season, and especial mention may be made of the tableau as a closing number. A number of pretty misses daintily dressed, represented one by one the building of the cross with its essential qualifications as exemplified by Christ. When the cross was constructed the several little misses posed in strikingly loving attitudes, while the yellow light was turned on. The effect was charming.

The citizens are here reminded that Arbour Day is again near, and the duty they owe to their pretty village must again be paid. No one will deny the benefit derived from the day's work, unselfishly given by the good burghers last Arbour Day, and it is to be hoped that they will be repeated this year. Continued dropping of water is sure to wear, so continued aggression in right will win. So let us continue. We have beautiful shade trees, delightfully grassy boulevards and in time will have well drained streets and walks that will wear. Of course a few cows, like the Knight of Atri's horse, are "Turned out upon the public ways, all wretched and forlorn, barked at by dogs and torn by briar and thorn," but their number is smaller than ever this year, and in consequence pedestrians will be less inconvenienced. These things will never right themselves unless we help to right them, so let us continue the good work we have so commendably begun. Let us give a bumper entertainment on the evening of Victoria Day and patronize it, one and all and furnish means to carry out our good intentions.

In these days of so much talk of water power, one wonders why the tremendous power wasted at the Wedlock dam is not utilized. Such a power is not to be had at many villages and we need it. We need it to light our streets, stores, churches and dwellings, to run the elevator and in time to supply power to the farmers. What enterprising company will take the water in hand.

Mrs. (Dr.) Shaw and Jean spent a few days of last week in Warkworth with Mrs. (Rev.) Cauley.

Through the efforts of the Y.P.S. C.E. the basement of the Presbyterian church has been re-seated with comfortable hardwood chairs.

The semi-annual change of officers has been made in the society. Miss Jennie Plunkett has assumed the duties of President.

Mrs. Joseph Lacelle, Ottawa, East, Ont. Canada, writes:

"Peruna is better by far than any other medicine sold in the Dominion for the troubles peculiar to the sex. I suffered with backache, headache and dragging down pains for over nine months, and nothing relieved me a particle until I took Peruna. A few bottles relieved me of my miserable half-dead, half-alive condition. I am now in good health and have neither ache or pain, nor have I had any for the past year. If every suffering woman would take Peruna they would soon know its value and never be without it."—Mrs. Joseph Lacelle.

ON RECIPROCAL RELATIONS.

Cites a Mass of Statistics to Prove Advantages of Such Trade—Quit High Commission—Friendly Invitation Should Not Be Refused—Must Get Fair Treatment or Fight Them With Own Weapons.

Ottawa, April 22.—The entire afternoon session of the House of Commons yesterday was taken up by Mr. John Charlton, who made a very strong argument in favor of reciprocal trade relations with the United States in natural products. He fortified his address with a mass of statistics to prove the advantages which would accrue to both nations from mutual interchange of trade, and insisted that Canada must either obtain fair treatment from other nations or fight them with their own weapons. He counselled a courteous response to the advances made by the United States for the re-assembling of the Joint High Commission, and suspension of the revision of the tariff pending the adjustment of differences.

The election of Dr. Wallace to succeed Mr. W. C. Edwards, now a member of the Senate, in the representation of Russell, was announced by the Speaker. Dr. Wallace was introduced by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. D. C. Fraser.

Mr. Clancy arose at 5.30 and moved adjournment of the debate, to be resumed on Thursday. The House then adjourned till Thursday.

Discussed Salary Increases.

Ottawa, April 22.—In the Senate yesterday, Senator MacDonald urged that the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia be given a salary of $12,000 a year. The increase was consequently on the increased cost of living in the west. The Secretary of State promised to bring the matter to the attention of his colleagues. Other Senators hoped other provinces would not be neglected.

The question of the salaries of judges was also discussed.

The Policeman's Evidence.

Policeman Peter Morris, Toronto, says that for years he was troubled with habitual constipation and although he spent much money in medicine was only disappointed with the results. He now recommends Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to his friends, because it cured him of this troublesome ailment. You can be cured of constipation by this treatment. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box.

A CONSTANT STREAM

Of Visitors Took Last Long Look at Government House.

THE BODY LYING IN STATE.

Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain Cables Lord Minto and Regrets Country's Loss in Sir Oliver Mowat's Death—Premier and Other M.P.'s From Ottawa Will Attend the Funeral—Tributes in the Legislature.

Toronto, April 22.—The body of Sir Oliver Mowat lay in state at Government House last night.

Befitting the quiet and unassuming character of the late Premier and Governor, he will be laid away for his last long rest in a plain casket covered with plain black cloth and with little or no ornamentation, and dressed in his court costume.

The features, upon which there was to be seen a faint smile, were peaceful in the extreme.

Premier Ross, Hon. J. M. Gibson, Hon. F. R. Latchford, Hon. E. J. Davis, Chancellor Boyd and Chief Justice Moss were visitors during the evening.

4,000 Take Last Look.

Fully 4,000 people, citizens of all classes, were present to take a last look upon the remains of the grand old man who had governed this province for so many years.

The doors were opened at 5 o'clock, and from that time till 8.30 there was a never-ending stream, passing single file, from the front door of the house through the main hall to the reception room, past the casket and out through the office entrance to King street.

Between the hours of 5 and 6 nearly 1,500 persons viewed the remains, the number being made up mostly of ladies. After 7 o'clock until the doors were closed, when hundreds were turned away, more men were seen, and most of these were hardy sons of toil, old men who had supported Sir Oliver through his many campaigns and who were looking upon the face of their dead leader.

The floral tributes from colleagues and friends of the deceased statesman from all parts of the Dominion were many and very beautiful.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Will Attend.

Ottawa, April 21—(Special.)—Nearly all the Liberal members from Ontario went to Toronto to-night to attend the funeral of Sir Oliver Mowat. Those who did not go were kept here thru indisposition. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and party left at 7 p.m. by G.T.R. in a special train. In the party were Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. A. G. Blair, Hon. James Sutherland, Hon. Mr. Scott and Senator Templeman. To enumerate the private members who went would be to print a list of Ontario's representation.

Many Conservatives also will attend the funeral.

Chamberlain Cables Regrets.

Ottawa, April 21.—(Special.)—Lord Minto to-day received a code cable message from Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain as follows:

London, April 20.—"I request that you will express to your Ministers the great regret with which I have heard of the great loss which Canada has sustained by the death of Sir Oliver Mowat, who has for so many years occupied so distinguished and honorable a position in Canadian public life. Convey expression of my sympathy for his family.

To Represent Quebec.

Quebec, April 21. — Hon. Dr. Guerin has been deputed to represent the Quebec government at the funeral of Sir Oliver Mowat, and to be the bearer of a handsome wreath of immortelles as a mark of respect to the memory of Sir Oliver. His Honor, the Lieutenant - Governor, Sir Louis Jette, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, left last night for Toronto, to be also present at the obsequies.

SWORN IN ON TUESDAY.

New Lieutenant-Governor Takes Oaths of Office and Allegiance.

Toronto, April 22.—The new Lieutenant-Governor was sworn in yesterday morning at 11 o'clock. The ceremony took place in the Council Chamber in the presence of Premier Ross, Hon. F. R. Latchford, Hon. E. J. Davis, Hon. Richard Harcourt, W. C. Caldwell, M.P.P. for North Lanark; J. R. Cartwright, Deputy Attorney-General; Geo. E. Lumsden, Assistant Provincial Secretary.

Mr. Mortimer Clark took the oaths of office and allegiance, Mr. John J. McGee, Clerk of the Privy Council at Ottawa, administering them. After the ceremony the new Lieutenant-Governor was congratulated by those present, and he then drove back to his home. He will not take up his residence at Government House at present, but will consult the convenience and wishes of Miss Mowat.

THE ONTARIO ASSEMBLY.

Short Session Tuesday Afternoon, and an Adjournment Till Thursday.

Toronto, April 22.—The Ontario Legislature re-assembled at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon after the three weeks' adjournment for the investigation of the Gamey charges. At the opening of the session the Premier and the leader of the Opposition referred to the death of Sir Oliver Mowat, and expressed the sincere regret of the House at the loss of the head of the Provincial Administration.

After tracing Sir Oliver Mowat's long career, Hon. G. W. Ross concluded his tribute to his memory in these words: "The Liberal party has lost a great leader; the country has lost a great man. His strength was in his sincerity. He was true to his conviction of duty, true to his country. That conviction has never been shaken by any act of his career."

Mr. Whitney followed the Premier. He said he wished to add to the eloquent tribute paid by the Premier to the late Lieutenant-Governor. His was a loss which this province and all Canada deplored. In conclusion, Mr. Whitney said: "We, on this side of the House, do not intend to allow our political opponents to be alone the mourners. We, as the opponents of Sir Oliver Mowat, too, say we are thankful that he lived; we are proud of his services; we, too, deplore his death, and we, too, offer our earnest sympathy to his family."

The Premier announced that the address on the speech would be taken up on Thursday and passed pro forma, the understanding being that it will be discussed later on.

Mr. Whitney said there was no objection to the motion to adopt the address, on that understanding.

New York.—Al Adams was sentenced to a term of not less than one year nor more than one year and nine months, and to pay a fine of $1,000, for having paraphernalia for playing "policy" in his possession. An appeal was asked for.

New York.—Two women were killed and one badly injured by jumping or falling from windows. Dennis Kelcher, with his legs crushed and skull fractured by a 3rd-avenue car, for 45 minutes directed the efforts of his rescuers to release him. A 6-year-old boy was also killed by a car. The body of an unknown man was found in the river, and a man was shot on the street, in the course of Tuesday.

DEATH FOR BRITISH SOLDIERS.

Five Privates of Leinster Regiment at Pretoria to Pay the Penalty.

Pretoria, Transvaal, April 22.—Five private soldiers belonging to the 2nd Battalion of the Leinster Regiment were sentenced to death, in the Supreme Court here yesterday, following their trial in connection with a riot which took place at the barracks on March 28. When the military police attempted to arrest a number of drunken soldiers, the latter, reinforced by some of their comrades, secured rifles and ammunition, and opened fire on the military police. One of the latter, a member of the Leinster Regiment, was killed, and sixteen men were injured.

CHARLES WILLIAM KING.

Must Stand Trial For Wilful Shooting of William Freeman.

St. Thomas, April 22.—The Grand Jury at the assizes here late yesterday afternoon brought in a true bill for murder in the case of Charles William King, accused of murdering Willie Freeman at Alborough on Sept. 9 last. The prisoner was then arraigned, pleaded not guilty and Justice Street adjourned the case until 9.15 Wednesday. The line of defence, no doubt, will be that King did not know the gun was loaded when he pointed it at the boy.

Clinton.—The Hotel Clarendon was burned to the ground about 3 o'clock Tuesday morning. The hotel is owned by Mrs. Tufts, of Belgrave, and was insured.

An Obstinate Case of Eczema.

Mr. W. D. Johnson, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes that his father was entirely cured of a long standing and obstinate case of Eczema by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. His leg and foot were a mass of sores that refused to heal and he suffered terribly from the itching and stinging. Though he used a great many remedies and was treated by first-class doctors no permanent relief was obtained until he used Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Rivals in Politeness.

The dangers of excess and the virtue of the golden mean even in good qualities are illustrated in an incident reported from an Irish ball.

One gay young fellow in crossing the room to request Bridget's hand in the next reel stumbled over the outstretched foot of Mr. Terence O'Grady, who promptly arose, and in the politest manner said, "I beg your pardon, sir."

"No offence—no offence, sir, at all," responded the other; "it was my fault."

"I beg your pardon, sir, it was entirely my fault," was the response, accompanied with a graceful wave of the hand.

"No, sir," answered Masther O'Toole, "yer entirely in the wrong, sir; I tell ye, it was altogether my fault."

"I tell ye that it was not sir," responded Misther O'Grady; "do you mane to say I'd be telling a lie, sir?"

"Bad luck to ye, sir, d'ye mane to say I'd be afther telling a lie, sir, when I tell ye it wasn't your fault?" responded O'Toole, quite wroth.

"Bad luck to yer bad brading, ye ignorant polthroon; d'ye think ye'd be a getting the betther of me in manners?" whouted Misther O'Grady, as, with a tip and a blow, he laid the unfortunate O'Toole flat as a pancake.

The latter rallied, and a rough-and-tumble ensued, which ended in the expulsion of both gentlemen from the ball-room.

Concerning "Dorothy Dodd" Shoes

THE FLEXIBILITY OF A "DOROTHY DODD."

With every step the sole of your foot must bend. The proper place for it to bend is at the "ball" of the foot—never at the instep!

To make it bend at the "ball", two things are necessary:—the sole must be extremely flexible, while the shank or arch must be extremely rigid.

Most shoes bend at the shank, thus losing their shapeliness and tiring the weak arch of the foot. This is what makes walking for women so fatiguing.

The "Dorothy Dodd" Shoe has a shank that supports the weak arch firmly. It will not bend. The method of sewing the shank is different from the ordinary. It is sewn through and through—making a strong, firm shank that cannot be obtained any other way. It has a sole that is extremely flexible and will not bend.

THE STYLE OF A "DOROTHY DODD."

Never mind what old-fashioned people tell you—Style and Comfort can live together in a pair of shoes. The "Dorothy Dodd" proves it.

They are the utmost height of style. They are shoes of genuine distinction. The highest praise you can give a shoe is to say

"It has the style of a 'Dorothy Dodd'."

Yet the "Dorothy Dodd" is the more comfortable shoe ever made. You long to walk for the pleasure of walking. It holds the foot firmly around the instep and supports the unsupported arch. You escape the "Slouchy" gait which comes with some shoes. It gives a new poise to your body in walking. Your carriage is more light and graceful.

The bridesmaid was Miss Jennie Macdonald, sister of the bride, while Mr. Joseph Gleason of Markham, supported the groom. After the ceremony a very pretty wedding breakfast was served at 61 Lake street, the home of the bride. The presents were numerous and costly. STEAMER EMPRESS HAS BEEN SOLD.

Trent Valley Navigation Company Own Her.

Capt. Reynolds to Retire From Steamboat Life—Empress to Remain on Stony Lake.

The steamer "Empress," the popular craft of the Stony Lake waters, has been sold to the Trent Valley Navigation Company. The deal was closed yesterday when Mr. W. T. C. Boyd, of the company, met Captain W. V. Reynolds, the owner of the vessel, in Peterborough, and by six o'clock the Empress had changed ownership. The Empress will still navigate the Stony Lake waters, it is said, and will cover the same route as heretofore, the only change being that she will be under different management.

Whilst the people of Peterborough, and visitors to Stony Lake in general, will be pleased to know that the Empress will remain on Stony Lake waters, still they will all join in their expressions of regret that Capt. Reynolds is severing his connection with the boat and with navigation work on the Kawartha Lakes. It is the Captain's intention to devote his entire time to the development of oil properties in the States, in which he is interested. Captain Reynolds has had a long and honourable career in navigating Stony Lake. His genial and obliging manner won for himself and his boat the popularity and good will of the travelling public. Captain Reynolds was known to every man, woman and child, who visited Stony Lake, and his presence from the Empress will be missed throughout the coming season.

The Empress is a new boat, having been launched only a few years ago. She is one of the speediest, and staunchest boats that churns the waters of the Kawartha Lakes. She has a steel frame hull, and was built by the Bertram Shipbuilding Company of Toronto. She is 95 feet in length, 8 feet beam, and has a depth of 5 feet 4 inches. Her registered tonnage is 57.48.

It is currently reported that other boats on the Stony Lake waters may join the Trent Valley Navigation Company's fleet.

The Trent Valley Navigation Company, Limited, which has just purchased the steamer Empress, has its Headquarters at Bobcaygeon. They operate over the Kawartha Lakes a line of steamers, whose quick and efficient service and courteous officials, have done much to make the lakes so deservedly popular. The passenger fleet of the company consists of the Royal Mail Steamer Esturion, the flagship of the fleet, the Manita, a swift screw steamer, and the speedy sidewheeler, the Ogemah. The Empress is the latest addition to the Trent Valley Navigation Company's fleet.

THEY SAID GOOD-BYE TO MR. AND MRS. DAWSON.

South Monaghan Loses an Estimable Citizen.

Intends Locating at Maple Creek, N.W.T.—Address and Presentation.

On Tuesday evening, April 14th, a large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dawson met at their residence, Bailieboro, to bid adieu to them before their departure for Maple Creek, N.W.T., where Mr. Dawson intends ranching, and to wish them success in their enterprise.

During the evening refreshments were served, games were played, music was furnished, and altogether a pleasant evening was spent. The only unpleasant feature of the evening was the nearness of Mr. Dawson's removal to Maple Creek. During the evening presentations were made to Mr. and Mrs. Dawson. Mr. J. W. Dawson read an address, Mr. A. Barnard presenting Mr. Dawson with a gold watch and chain, and Mrs. J. W. Dawson presenting Mrs. Dawson with a set of dishes. Mr. Dawson was taken by surprise but made a suitable reply, thanking the people for their kindness. A speech was then given by Rev. Mr. Drew, in which he expressed the hope that Mr. Dawson would reconsider his decision and remain amongst them. He also expressed his personal regret at their departure.

The address read as follows:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, — It is with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure that we meet to-night — pleasure to spend a social evening with yourselves and family, but regretting that close relationships which have existed for the past years between us, are so soon to be interrupted by your removal to the far North West. During your abode amongst us you have not only taken an active part in the business of the township and church but you have all endeared yourselves to us by your readiness to assist in all good works, your readiness to further the spiritual and temporal interest of the church, and unselfish devotion to duty, and in the various organizations connected with the Master's work here. We have found your counsel and help of great assistance to us, not only as neighbours and friends, but also as ardent and earnest workers in our Sunday school, where you have so regularly and instructed us for our spiritual welfare. We could not allow you to depart without expressing to you both the high esteem in which you have both been held amongst us, and we pray that God may bless you in all your future labour.

As a slight token of our regard we ask you to accept these gifts, not for their intrinsic value, but as a reminder of the many warm friends you leave behind you in Bailieboro and surrounding country.

Signed on behalf of the church, school and township.

HIGH TEA AND SALE AT ST. PAUL'S YESTERDAY.

A Handsome Sum was Realized for the Mission Church.

The high tea and sale which was held in St. Paul's Sunday school last night in aid of St. Paul's Mission, was a grand success and a handsome sum was realized in that behalf. The affair was arranged by the ladies of the congregation, who displayed much energy in their undertaking. Tea was served from five until seven, and during that time a continued stream of townspeople thronged in and out the dining room. The tables were very tastily arranged and handsomely decorated, whilst a very appetizing spread was in readiness.

The tables were waited on by an efficient staff of young ladies under the kind supervision of some of the older ladies of the congregation. A great many of Peterborough's prominent business men paid a visit to the high tea.

The sale of work which was conducted in the alcoves of the Sunday school, was superintended by a number of young ladies, who realized a handsome sum from that source.

Altogether the high tea and sale was a great success.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

A MERE MATTER of courtesy. A correspondent writes as follows:

"In the printed form for appeal, on the back of our Assessment Bill, or duplicate, the applicant having notified the clerk of his or her intention to appeal against the assessment, is made to sign his name under, "I am, sir, your obedient servant." There is a strong argument as to whether the ratepayer or the clerk is the servant, and it is agreed to leave it to the Examiner to decide. If one writes to a Minister of the Cabinet, he invariably signs under, "Your obedient servant." Kindly decide as to above."

There is little difficulty in answering our correspondent. "Your obedient servant" is a perfectly proper subscription prefix. It is not intended to express any statement of fact; in fact, it doesn't mean anything—it is a mere form of courteous expression, a form which a polite King might properly use in writing an informal or unofficial letter to a subject. Various nations have various customs in this respect. The extravagant Spaniard will conclude a letter with the extreme expression, "I kiss your hands." Of ccurse he doesn't, or wouldn't, do anything of the kind; he couldn't if you were a thousand miles away. He merely wishes to use a common form of courtesy, which has no meaning, except a formal expression of respectful attitude, which may, or may not, be sincere. A polite Chinaman will welcome your "honourable presence" into his house and politely inform you that all it contains is at your disposal. Of course he doesn't mean a word of it. If his guest took the value of a cent he would likely be clapped in jail. In like manner, "Your obedient servant," is a matter of form only, and does not express the actual or official relations between the writer and recipient of a letter. "Your obedient servant" is as applicable to a town or township clerk as to a Cabinet Minister of the Crown, for in both cases they are servants of the people; and "your obedient servant," used in a letter addressed, means only formal politeness, not a state of servitude on the part of the writer. This, and similar forms are mere forms, and do not assert or mean anything. They are simply symbols of respect, or form or custom. A man or woman receives an invitation and satisfies the demands of social usage in sending "regrets," when very often there is more of congratulation than "regret" in staving off an invitation, whose acceptance would be irksome or inconvenient. It always pays to be polite, and being polite costs little, and is worth much sometimes.

• • •

THE FORM referred to by our correspondent is the survival of the time when our forefathers were formal, polite, courteous and respectful. In the beginning it may have meant all it expresses, but that time has long gone by, and, sad to say, the times and manners have changed — tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis. Respect and courtesy are sadly lacking in these days. There is no more respect for our "superiors" or elders. There are many living who can recollect the time when children on their way to and from school, meeting their elders, were required to respectfully salute them, the girls pausing to make a "curchey"—courtesy across between a bow and a salute in "the Lancers." Now elders get only impudent salutes in coarse or blasphemous language. We have no more children these days — they are all equal or superior to their superiors or elders. Can it be that courtesy, politeness and reverence for what is worthy of reverence, is no more taught in our homes or schools. The harvest doesn't look as if much of that kind of seed were sown.

• • •

POLITENESS and courteous forms may be very hollow and insincere, but their lubricating power is very effective in making the social and even business machinery run smoothly. An employee in a shop or public office, or railway train, becomes appreciated and popular with the public in proportion to the courtesy and politeness he exhibits in his relations with them, and proportionately valuable to his employer. An employee in a shop or public office should be punished as promptly for discourtesy to even the most humble patron, as for robbing the till—both represent a distinct loss to the proprietor.

A PRETTY GIRL does not need to be told that she is pretty; but she likes it nevertheless. The people of Peterborough do not need to be told of the benefits of the Trent Valley Canal, but they like to hear of them often, and that is why Mr. Rogers' address was so interesting. But we should not stop at admiration. The Board of Trade, whose commendable enterprise brought about the lecture, and others, need to take further action to secure further construction. Now is the time to strike—while the iron is hot—while revenue is booming. A slice of this year's surplus of thirteen millions should be devoted to completing further sections. Let the Board of Trade and others concerned, take action to press the matter upon the Government. In the slang of the street, "Git up and git," and don't be side-tracked by "Sleepy Hollow," whose enterprise in bringing their end of the canal to public attention, shames the apathy and do-nothing of Peterborough.

"ST. GEORGE and Merrie England," is a war cry whose thrill has passed along many a far-flung battle line, and for centuries has stirred English hearts to valour that merged in victory. To-morrow is St. George's Day—the day of St. George, the patron saint of England. St. George may have been as mythical as his down-beaten dragon, but the spirit he inspires is as living a reality as the deeds of the race he has inspired. St. George may not have slain the dragon at all, but the people he has stood tutilary saint to have in a long roll of splendid victories, conquered and subdued the dragons of heathenism, superstition, oppression and wrong, and under the banner of St. George, the crimson cross, have spread the blessings of civilization of the highest, of freedom the broadest, to all the corners of the earth. The Englishman has real reason for observing the day, not only the Englishman, but many others, for the benefits that England has conferred upon the world, have been widely shared, and are to-day widely enjoyed. The Englishmen in Peterborough do not observe St. George's Day with the enthusiasm of the Scot for his patron saint, or the Irishman for St. Patrick. The Englishman may not be so emotional, but his heart is in the right place. He may show his emotions less, but generally speaking, he keeps on "a doin' of things."

THE PETERBOROUGH BOARD OF HEALTH

Met in Discussion This Morning in Town Clerk's Office.

Communications From Dr. Bryce and Lady Superintendent of Nicholls Hospital—Board to Meet Council.

A meeting of the local Board of Health was held this morning in the Town Clerk's office, there being present:—Mr. R. Neill, Chairman, and Messrs. Wm. Eyres, A. Parker, G. Snyder, Dr. Burnham and Dr. McNulty.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The following communications were read:—

From Dr. Bryce, Provincial Medical Health Officer, stating that he had been in Peterborough on Tuesday, April 13th. The hospitals, he stated, were over-crowded and had practically no ventilation apparatus. He pointed out that such a state of things should not be in a modern city and hoped that the Board of Health would take up the matter immediately.

A letter received from the Lady Superintendent of the Nicholls Hospital will appear to-morrow.

Dr. McNulty said there was accommodation at St. Joseph's Hospital for forty diphtheria patients, but at present in the diphtheria ward there were four or five convalescent scarlet fever patients. He said it would be a good thing if one hospital were to take scarlet fever patients while the other, St. Joseph's, took the diphtheria ones. On motion of Dr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Eyres, a committee consisting of the Medical Health Officer, the Sanitary Inspector, Dr. McNulty and the Chairman was appointed to see what arangements can be made.—Carried.

From R. C. Braund, asking that he be permitted to make a cess pool for two houses at the corner of Rubidge and Townsend streets, as there is no sewer within reasonable distance. On motion of Mr. Eyres, seconded by Mr. Parker, it was resolved:

That this local Board of Health recommend the council of the Town of Peterborough to construct a sewer on Rubidge street, from Charlotte to Rink streets for the purpose of draining that locality for sanitary purposes as a local improvement.—Carried.

A certain man complained before the Board that his house was not in a sanitary condition, and that he last night took his little child to the hospital suffering from scarlet fever. The chairman told the landlord who was present, that it would be the best thing to clean up the house.

The Board then adjourned.

It is expected the Board will meet the town council to-morrow night, when several matters of importance will be discussed.

ST. THOMAS MAN GIVES ADVICE.

Tells His Friends to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for Kidney Pains.

Lew Dake, Well-known Hotel-keeper, Gives his Experience With Canada's Great Kidney Remedy.

St. Thomas, Ont., April 19.—(Special.)—Everybody in St. Thomas and the surrounding country knows Lew Dake, proprietor of the Dake House and one of this railway centre's most popular citizens, and many people know that for years he was the victim of a very aggravated form of Kidney Disease. To-day he is a sound, healthy man. He used Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Speaking of the matter recently, Mr. Dake said:—

"I had been troubled for over five years with my Kidneys and pains in my back. Nothing I used could give me any relief till finally on the advice of a friend I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"By the time I had finished one box the pains and Kidney Disease were gone. That is over five years ago now, and as I have had no return of the trouble since, I think I am safe in concluding that the cure was permanent.

"I advise all my friends who are troubled in the same way to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all stages of Kidney Disease from Pain in the Back to Bright's Disease.

A Palpable Slander.

Mrs. Cobwigger (at the opera)—There's that Mrs. Lowcutte in the box to the right. I think her gown is perfectly indecent.

Mrs. Malaprop—So it is, my dear. But what lies are told about her! Her husband once said that every cent he could scrape together she put on her back!-

Enough Said.

Lady (to pretty applicant)—Yes, I want a cook. But why did you leave your last place?

Applicant—B-because the head of the house kissed me, ma'am.

Lady—And you objected, eh?

Applicant—Well—er—his wife did!-

WHY MOTHERS WORRY

Did you ever hear a mother worry over a plump child? There is no better bank of health for a child to draw from than a good supply of healthy flesh.

Scott's Emulsion not only gives a child weight and plumpness, but it feeds the brain, bones and nerves with strength and active power.

Fewer mothers would worry if they knew more about Scott's Emulsion.

Early Political Platforms.

It is in the seventeenth century that the first beginnings of the platform must be sought, but these early traces of its use are very slight. That there must have been some little employment of it in a demagogic way may be inferred from the "Characters" of Butler, the author of the ever memorable "Hudibras." He describes "a leader of a faction" as one who "sets the psalm, and all his party sing after him. He is like a figure in arithmetic—the more ciphers he stands before the more his value amounts to. He is a great haranguer, talks himself into authority, and, like a parrot, climbs with his beak." It is probable, moreover, that the first form of the platform was the conventicle or meeting house of the Puritan or Dissenter, for Butler, in his character of "The Seditious Man," says that "if he be a preacher he has the advantage of all others of his tribe, for he has a way to vent sedition by wholesale." But the platform at this time was of no practical account. Such attempts as there were outside parliament to influence opinion were made by means of the press, partly by the book, partly by the pamphlet and partly by the journal.—C. B. Roylance Kent in Longman's.

The First Lawbook.

The well known Assyriologist, Dr. Hugo Winckler, published an account of the legislation promulgated by King Amraphel of Babylon, which, so far as is known at present, was the first book of laws ever given to the world. King Amraphel lived 2,250 years B. C. and is mentioned in the Bible as a contemporary of Abraham, so that his statutes were drawn up fully five centuries before the laws of Moses. They number 282 and contain the following:

"If a woman who sells beverages gives bad value for the money paid her, she shall be thrown into water.

"If a wife be a spendthrift or if she otherwise neglect her duties, her husband may put her away without compensation, but if a man put away his wife for no other reason than that she has no children he shall return her whole dowry.

"If a betrothal be rescinded, the man shall pay the woman compensation.

"A widow with grown up children may not marry again without permission from a judge."—London Express.

Two Kinds of Wag.

In an Iowa law court an attorney was arguing with great earnestness and eloquence. In the midst of his argument he paused a moment, says the Green Bag, and said:

"I see your honor shakes his head at that statement. I desire to reaffirm it, although your honor dissents."

"I have not intimated," replied the judge, "how I should construe the evidence or what my decision will be in the case, and your remark is uncalled for."

"You shook your head."

"That may be true," the court replied. "There was a fly on my ear, and I reserved the right to remove it in any manner I saw fit. Proceed with your argument."

Caleb Cushing's Dress.

Caleb Cushing's peculiar manner of dress and his eccentricities were frequently the subject of newspaper articles. Although quite a large and portly man, his clothes always seemed to be two or three sizes too large for him and of the cheapest material. He always during both summer and winter wore a large cloth cap pulled close down on his head and altogether looked anything but the brilliant jurist and diplomat. One day, after reading an unusually caustic comment upon his dress, he remarked to the writer, "I guess by the time that fool is as old as I am he will care more for comfort than fashion."

Seen on an Ostrich Farm.

It is no uncommon thing to see a male ostrich strutting about followed by three or four distinct broods, all of different sizes. When the incubating process is completed, the cock bird leads his young ones off and if he meets another proud papa engages in a terrific combat with him. The vanquished bird retires without a single chick, while the other, surrounded by the two broods, walks away triumphantly.

Gave Himself Away.

After preaching on the occasion of the reopening of a restored church the bishop thanked the churchwarden, an old farmer, for his share in the good work. "And I must thank your lordship for your sermon," was the reply, "but I could not help thinking, as you talked about sin, that your lordship must have been a little wildish yourself when you were a young man."

SPRING FASHIONS.

Hats Worn Off the Face In Paris. Flower Toques Popular.

Parisians are wearing their hats slightly tilted off the forehead, showing waved tresses. They are also dressing the hair on the top of the head.

Flower toques are always in demand for the spring season, the favorite flowers being shaded hyacinths, forgetmenots, roses, lilacs, mimosa, etc.

THEATER BLOUSE.

These are mostly mixed with tulle and chenille, and a great deal of nutmeg straw is being used.

The useful toques are mostly made in chip, though a coarse straw in a black and white biscuit mixture is a favorite combination.

Dead white straws are much used. Turbans are still worn tilted forward, and these are the most suitable to wear with tailor made frocks.

The tulle toque has entirely given way to light looking straws, which are certainly more practical, though nothing is prettier for restaurant dining than the white chiffon Monte Carlo toque draped with black chantilly lace and adorned with jet.

The cut shows a theater blouse.

The Final Stages of Locomotor Ataxia

Are Absolute Helplessness, Loss of all Power and Complete Paralysis—Prevented and Cured by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Locomotor Ataxia is a form of paralysis which is becoming frightfully common these days, because of the nerve-exhausting habits of the present age.

Probably you have seen victims of this ailment walking with a jerking motion and putting their feet down in an awkward manner, and wondered what ailed them. It was locomotor ataxia, or paralysis of the nerves and muscles which control motion.

There is a peculiar numbness of the feet and legs, an uncertain feeling when you start to walk, when you go up or down stairs or around corners. The limbs no longer obey the commands of the brain, the soles of the feet seem to have lost their feeling and you feel as though you might topple over or move backward instead of going ahead.

The final stages of locomotor ataxia are absolute helplessness, loss of all power and complete paralysis of the nervous system.

The time to begin treatment is when the first symptoms of nervous exhaustion become apparent. When you find that you do not sleep well, start up suddenly, have difficulty in concentrating your thoughts, suffer from headaches, indigestion and irritability, it is time to take prompt action to restore the vitality of the blood and nerves. For this purpose there is no more satisfactory treatment than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Nervous diseases never get well of themselves, nor can they be cured in a few days, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food assists Nature in restoring vitality to wasted nerves, acts in accordance with Nature's laws, and is certain to do you good, because it forms new rich blood, and nerve cells. Fifty cents a box; six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 7

Dr. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Cures COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, HOARSENESS and all THROAT AND LUNG TROUBLES. Miss Florence E. Mailman, New Germany, N.S., writes:—I had a cold which left me with a very bad cough. I had little faith in it, but before I had taken one bottle I began to feel better, and after the second I felt as well as ever. My cough has completely disappeared.

READ IN THE FLAMES

... By Mary Wood

Copyright, 1903, by McClure's Newspaper Syndicate

Mr. and Mrs. Bergen believed in higher education for women, or, as they told each other, "We will give Katie the chances we didn't have."

Katie was a wild, awkward slip of a girl who wept salt tears when her destiny was unfolded. She never, never would go off to that eastern college. She would die of homesickness. Mrs. Bergen quite melted at the picture, but her husband was firm. It was best for her to go, and go she did.

But the energy that had made her childhood a perilous one flowed readily into the new channels. The first month found her contented, the second enthusiastic. The letters which told of quizzes, exams and profs grew more and more unintelligible to the two old people. She was living in a world into which they could not enter. Even as they thrilled with pride in her attainments they felt a strange pang, as if their firstborn were being gradually stolen and a changeling left in her place.

What with the weary length of the four winters, the brevity of the summer vacations and their inevitable absorption in visits to college chums they felt that the week after commencement brought her back to them almost a stranger.

She was certainly no longer the little Katie who had gone away in tears.

Miss Katharyn Bergen was a tall, self possessed young woman who wore eyeglasses and clothes of a masculine cut.

Mr. Bergen was secretly aggrieved at sight of the eyeglasses. "When she had the makin' of such a pretty girl," he said mournfully to himself, "an' mother an' I havin' such good sight at our age!" He felt that it was a high price to pay for learning.

Mrs. Bergen was shocked by her daughter's taste in clothes. Her stiff collars and hideous vests, the scantiness and brevity of her skirts and her pronounced fancy for shoes of the most broad toed and thick soled variety were all thorns in the motherly bosom. She was, however, a woman of discretion. She recognized in her daughter much of a certain obstinacy which long familiarity with Mr. Bergen had taught her to respect. So she made no comment on the distressing changes.

What she did not say Scotville did. Katharyn was more than a nine days' wonder; she was a perpetual volcano. She had lost none of her original energy; rather it had increased by practice. The town needed to be uplifted, and her hand was ready for the work.

So Scotville was introduced to that new creation, a woman with a purpose, and was not overpleased. Her old girl friends detected an undercurrent of patronizing in all her advances and refused to enthuse over her. The men who had been boon companions in her tomboy days declared that a jolly good fellow had been changed into a prig and voted her schemes for elevation as all tommyrot. She scandalized the old minister who had baptized her when a baby by her open avowal of agnostic beliefs.

Jack Selwyn tried in vain to stem the rising tide of antagonism, but then every one knew it was only because he was too loyal to desert his old sweetheart. Jack had not been able to go to college. There were the young brothers and sisters to whom he had to play a father's part. So he had turned to work as an antidote for longing for the unattainable and was now Mr. Bergen's right hand man. It was even whispered that his employer would have been glad to welcome a nearer relationship.

It seemed, however, that Katharyn had no memory of the promises whispered by a certain Katie. To be sure, there had been a look in her face when he greeted her on her day of homecoming that had sent his heart up into his throat. Perhaps it was not as he had feared; she had not grown beyond his reach. But the succeeding days had brought only disillusionment. The girl, smarting under the almost universal rebuffs of her well meant efforts, classed him ruthlessly among the ranks of her opponents.

If she missed their old time confidences, their happy talks on men and books, she gave no sign. Instead she withdrew more closely into herself.

Her rooms were on the ground floor of the Bergen homestead. There she sat and read or mused bitterly long after she had said "Good night." From her windows the lawn sloped down gently to the river. Often when her head grew weary she would slip out quietly to breathe the freshness of the night.

One evening the moonlight had lured her from her books. The strains of a violin came, softened by distance. All Scotville was at a dance—all but she, and she had refused. Her paltry excuse had been that she and her mother had promised to spend the night at an old aunt's in the country during her father's absence on a business trip, but sudden indisposition had kept them from going, and now Katharyn hurried down the river path, as if to escape the witching sound.

She had wandered farther than she knew when a cry broke the stillness: "Fire! Fire!" She turned and ran back dizzily. Swift intuition told her that the column of smoke and flame rose from her own home. Scotville thought all the family were away. There would be no one to waken and save her mother.

As she panted up the lawn she saw confusedly a string of people. They were passing buckets. These girls in filmy ball gowns (the girls she had patronized), these men in immaculate evening dress (the men she had frowned on), were fighting to save her home. But there was no sign of her mother.

One wing was ablaze, while smoke poured from every window of the main building. Perhaps it was too late.

With a cry of anguish she broke through the inner circle of figures and before they were aware of her presence had darted up the steps and disappeared into the smoke.

A wave of heat as from a furnace met her as she dashed up the stairs. Sparks from the burning landing above rained down upon her head, but she flung open the door of her mother's room and staggered to the bed. The room was empty.

She turned back blindly toward the door. Smoke whirled in upon her, choking, suffocating. The very walls seemed to flash into flame.

She fell forward.

She awoke to the delicious coolness of water dashed upon her. As she opened her heavy eyes two anxious faces bent over her. One was her mother's, pale with terror, but untouched by smoke or flame. The other—she recognized it in spite of burned and blackened skin and singed hair; it was Jack's.

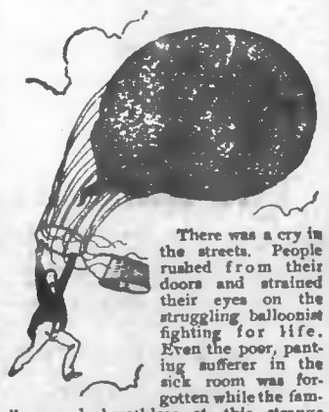
With a little sigh of content she closed her eyes again. These two that she loved best were safe. Yes, she acknowledged it to herself now she loved Jack Selwyn.

And he had saved her. She had felt his strong arm catch her when she fell. After all the months of her studied unkindness he had risked his life to save hers. She had been blind indeed, but she had read her heart in the light of the flames.

Now she put out her hand timidly. "Jack," she whispered softly.

He seized her cold little hand in his. "What is it, Katie?" he asked, his voice trembling with newborn hope that seemed too good to be true.

And when she opened her eyes and gazed up at him trustingly he knew that love had conquered pride and that the sweetheart of childish days was his to have and hold forevermore.



There was a cry in the streets. People rushed from their doors and strained their eyes on the struggling balloonist fighting for life. Even the poor, panting sufferer in the sick room was forgotten while the family gazed breathless at this strange tragedy of the air. Then they went back to the sick room to tell of the terrible struggle for life they had just witnessed. It did not occur to them that under their very eyes a more terrible, more pathetic struggle was going on daily.

There can be nothing more pitiful than the struggle the consumptive makes against disease. The greatest help in this struggle is gained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures obstinate coughs, weak and bleeding lungs, emaciation, and other ailments which if neglected or unskillfully treated find a fatal termination in consumption.

"In 1898 one of my daughters was suffering on account of a severe cough, hectic fever, wasting of flesh and other symptoms of diseased lungs," writes Rev. Joseph H. Pesperman, of Durham Springs, Iredell Co., N. C. "I promptly gave her Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery with gratifying success, and she now enjoys excellent health. This being true, I hereby heartily endorse your medicines."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Read what Miss L. L. Hanson, Waterside, N.B., says: "I feel it my duty to express the benefit I have received from Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. A year ago last spring I began to have heart failure. At first I would have to stop working and lie down for a while. Then I got so bad I had to give up altogether and go to bed. I had several doctors attend me but they did me no good. I could get no relief until urged by a friend to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Before I had used three quarters of a box I began to feel the benefit and by the time I had taken three boxes I was completely cured."

Manners Maketh the Man.

That we are a rushing, busy people is no excuse for lack of "manners." It is just as easy to be polite as impolite and takes no more time.

Bad national manners are the result of bad training, or entire lack of it, at home. If the wife and mother would be very careful about her own deportment, children would learn by example—the only true way to learn. Good manners are the result of the refining influences of home life and cannot be acquired without practice in this way. Culture cannot be simulated or put on for occasions.

Samuel Johnson says, "The difference between a well bred and ill bred man is this—one immediately attracts your liking, the other your aversion."

Manners certainly cover a multitude of other sins. A man may be poor, homely, too small or too large, but if he is innately refined—for true manners are inbred—he will always attract. This is equally true of both sexes. It is culture that maketh man—or woman.—American Queen.

NECESSARY ELEMENTS.

Strengthen your throat and lungs with Angier's Petroleum Emulsion. It cures chronic coughs, makes breathing easy, cleanses the system of impurities, creates healthy blood, fim flesh, and supplies all the elements necessary for the successful treatment of consumption. Pleasant to take. 2a.

Similarity of Animals and Men.

It has been observed that if the tamed dog is taken back to the wild state he loses his voice. These "sounding voices" are produced in the animal throat in a way similar to human language, but are not "voices" proper nor "languages" proper, and yet they are full of psychological expression and reveal the animal's psychic states. If we tickle a chimpanzee in the armpit, the touch produces a grin on the face similar to that of a man under like circumstances. He also emits laughterlike sounds. The same is the case with the ourang outang. The gorilla knits the brow when angry, just like men.

We often observe in apes a complete change in the facial muscles when something is going to happen, be it agreeable or disagreeable. It is so also with the child. In apes there is evidently the same connection between the facial muscles and vocal muscles as in man.

The Noble Character.

Here is Aristotle's definition of a noble character: He does not recollect injustice; for accurate recollection, especially of injuries, is not characteristic of the magnanimous man, but he rather overlooks them. He is not fond of talking of people, for he will neither speak of himself nor anybody else; for he does not care that he himself should be praised nor that others should be blamed.

Patience Rewarded.

Smith—I hear Short, the coal man, has come into a large fortune.

Jones—Well, he's entitled to it.

Smith—Oh, he is, eh?

Jones—Yes; he's been lying in weight for it a good many years.

There is a pleasure in doing good which sufficiently pays itself.—Vanbrugh.

She Missed Her Guess.

The car was crowded with shoppers, each of whom carried the special brand of headstrong and aggressive bundle that shopping alone can yield. The women stood in various attitudes of peril and discomfort and made those who sat still more uncomfortable by jabbing them or half smothering them. A tall woman, with angular bundles in her arms and wrath in her eye, had been torturing a small, shrinking man during the passage from Fourteenth to Seventieth street. There he arose with what sounded like a sigh of relief. The dignified woman pushed him back to his seat, saying, with a smile of grim satisfaction, "I have stood so far, and I am perfectly able, sir, to stand the rest of the way."

He subsided with a gasp, but at the next corner he arose again. "Be seated, sir," she said. "I do not care for your seat."

He choked a little, but managed to sputter, "You can stand if you wish, but this is two blocks beyond my street. I must get off."

The other passengers smiled, but there was an ominous frown on the dignified woman's brow, and it boded trouble for somebody at home.—New York Press.

Paradox in Taste of the Sexes.

"Did you ever notice what women eat?" asked a restaurant man the other day. "See those four women who have just come in? I'll wager that I can tell you what they will order before they are seated. It will be either salad, cream puffs or chocolate eclairs."

The women seated themselves, toyed with the bill of fare and, sure enough, ordered chocolate eclairs and coffee.

"If it were not for the men, we would never sell a piece of pie or meat," the restaurant man continued. "For some reason women rebel at the thought of beefsteak and such things. They want something dainty. Even the feminine acrobats of the stage close their eyes in horror at the thought of roast beef."

When it comes to candy, though, there is a paradox. Confectioners say that almost as much candy is purchased by men as by women. The men buy it often to eat themselves too.

"One of the best patrons we have is a former football player now practicing law in this city," said a candy man yesterday. "He eats everything in the way of sugar from chocolate drops to cream candy and always has a box of it in his desk, just as some other men have cigars to hand out. If you want to make him angry, say that effeminate men are the only ones who eat candy, and he will give you a line of argument that would sell goods if he were a drummer."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

THE WALL STREET MARKET

To-day is being observed as a holiday on the Wall Street market. The Exchange is moving into its new quarters.

Messrs. W. F. Dever & Co., Stock Brokers, Toronto, write as follows:—

New York, April 21.—To-day's buying was of an aggressive character, especially in the Gould issues. The Pacifics and Wabashes being exceptionally strong. The market on the whole showed a continuation of the upward movement inaugurated a Amal. copper was inclined to heaviness during the early hours, but later on shared in the general buying movement in progress in other sections of the list. R. C. was lifted a point during the forenoon buying being considered good. It would not be surprising to see this particular stock sell from 8 to 10 per cent. higher in the very near future. Present action of market would indicate that the leading financial interests are not adverse to a further advance and all but openly express themselves as bullish on the general situation. With winter wheat as it is and railway earnings steadily increasing can see no valid reason why we are not entitled to a still farther advance in prices.

Chicago.—Still think wheat is selling at a fictidious price although manipulation may send it somewhat higher it will suffer a severe set-back as it did to-day it would not be advisable to be caught long of it. Closing prices — Wheat, May, 77 7-8; corn, May, 44; oats, May, 34 7-8; pork, May, 18.07 1-2; lard, May, 9.09.

WRESTLING.

Arrangements were completed yesday for another night's sport at the opera house on Wednesday, April 29th. Dave Simon of Montreal, will attempt to throw Arthur Edmunds of Toronto three times in an hour, or forfeit the match, for a purse of $50. Edmunds weighs 125 pounds, and Simons 150, so some great wrestling is sure to result. Pete Barry, of Toronto, and Nick Collins, of Ottawa, will box 15 rounds, at 125 pounds for a purse of $50. This will be a fast bout as both boys have been training for the preliminary bout for the Callahan-Ryan go in Toronto, which was to have taken place on the 25th, but has been postponed. Some other bouts will be put on and some good sport is promised.

BASEBALL.

The following letter will speak for itself:

To the Sporting Editor, Examiner,—

Dear Sir, — Not knowing to whom to write to arrange a game of baseball for the 24th of May in your town, I thought that you would be the best man.

Now, if you could find out for me if we could arrange a game for the 24th, would you please put the secretary of the ball team in touch with me. I am representing the Ct. Andrew's Baseball Club, a team in the Inter-Association League in this city. Last year we came out second in an eight-team league, so you can judge as to the article of ball we play.

We would like very much to arrange a game in Peterborough, as a lot of the boys come from there, so do your best.

would enable counsel on the other side to get ready to proceed promptly with their case next Thursday."

Mr. Blake—I was going merely to add that, that being the view of your Lordships, if we arrange to sit on Saturday next, whether your Lordships would not allow the matter to stand until Thursday at 10 o'clock, in order principally that the fullest opportunity may be given to Mr. Gamey to consider his course and to be present here if he desires it. We have those two witnesses and one other witness that I do not think will take very long, and then simply an investigation of the bank books, my Lord.

The Chancellor—That is common ground: you both wished to examine the bank books.

Case Should Be Investigated.

Mr. Johnston—As further discussion is perhaps unnecessary, what I have to say on behalf of the parties charged and on behalf of the Government and my learned friends who are with me, I quite appreciate the difficulty in which my learned friend, Mr. Blake, and his colleagues, are placed, and I think it is not unreasonable to take the position which he has taken at the present moment. I may say we are very glad indeed that your Lordships have taken the view which your Lordship has expressed with reference to the position which Mr. Blake should assume towards the further investigation of this matter. We feel that this case ought to be investigated; we desire that it should be investigated to the fullest extent, and, such being the case, we are ready and willing to facilitate in every possible way not only my learned friends, but whatever your Lordships may think necessary, and in regard to our witnesses and everything. As I say, I think it is not unreasonable Mr. Blake should ask for an adjournment until Thursday, and we shall so arrange matters that the court will not lose any time by the adjournment over to-day and to-morrow. Anything we can do we will be very glad to do. I did not know until this moment that Mr. Blake required the two witnesses, he requests, and, having been notified of it, I promptly undertook, on consultation with the parties, to do what I could, and so undertook their production on Thursday morning if within the range of possibility.

The Commission Adjourns.

The Chancellor—That relieves any further difficulty on the score of enlargement.

Mr. Blake—Yes. I only say I am obliged to my learned friend for giving the usual consideration that he over does in these matters.

Chief Justice Falconbridge — We were rather expecting that at the close of the case for the prosecution the defence would want some reasonable time before going on with the evidence, but in view of the intimation which Mr. Blake has given as to the nature of what is left for him to call, perhaps the defence will be able to go on as soon as his case is finished.

Mr. Johnston—Within perhaps half an hour.

The Commission was then adjourned to Thursday next, 10 o'clock a. m.

Toronto, April 23.—The funeral of the late Sir Oliver Mowat yesterday afternoon was a surpassing popular tribute of reverence and sympathy. The little statesman who for nearly half a century had faced the storms of political life was laid at rest. The voice that had so often been raised in the promotion of popular liberty and in the defence of the rights of minorities was quiet in death. In the lull all differences were forgotten, and political friends and opponents united to honor the qualities of the man. The tribute came from the highest and from the lowest, from the shores of the Atlantic and from the prairies and mountains of the west, from the city which gave him birth, from the capital which was his home for so long, from the counties who proudly named him their representative, from the field of Federal politics, which claimed his services in time of political revolution. The nation-builders of the past, like Senator Scott, a father of Confederation: the statesmen who aided him in upreaving a liberal constitution for his native Province; the statesmen who to-day are opening up the northern wilderness whose possession he so stubbornly contested; the Ministers of the Dominion who shared with him for a time the wider outlook upon empire politics; the merchant, the manufacturer and the farmer, who are reaping the reward of his frugal and capable administration—all these were there.

THE FUNERAL ORATION.

Rev. Dr. Caven Alludes to Sir Oliver's Noble Life.

Shortly after two o'clock the funeral service was begun at Government House, conducted by Rev. Principal Caven, of Knox College; Rev. Dr. Maclaren, Knox College; Rev. Armstrong Black, St. Andrew's church; Rev. Alexander Gandier, St. James' square Presbyterian church. The order of the service was:—

Prayer and call to worship, by Rev. Mr. Gandier.

Scripture reading, by Rev. Dr. Armstrong Black.

Address, by Rev. Principal Caven.

Eulogy of Principal Caven.

Principal Caven's was an eloquent tribute. He said:

"We are here to pay the last tribute of respect to one who deserved well of his country, and who, after a long and eminently useful public life, has passed to his rest, honored and revered by all. The public life of Sir Oliver Mowat extended over 46 years, all of which were filled with valuable service to his native Province and to Canada.

"This is not the occasion for giving any detailed account of the public services of him whose death we lament, or for attempting any critical estimate of the intellectual and moral qualities which enabled him to do so much and do it so well. Sir Oliver Mowat was so long before the country, had so prominent a part in its public life, and was withal so transparent in character, that very few men were known as he was.

"That he possessed very exceptional powers of mind soon became obvious to all. The amount and quality of the work done by him in every position which he filled abundantly attest both his industry and his great abilities. The large body of well - considered legislation placed on the statute books of Ontario during the 24 years of his Premiership — whatever share others had in it — is an enduring monument to him. The skill and wisdom of his administration of affairs, and his success in determining Dominion and provincial prerogative are matters of history. He ever showed penetration of mind, soundness of judgment, extreme care—when dealing with any complex question or situation—to keep all the elements of the case fully in view, in forming his decision, and thus to avoid whatever was rash or unjust. His public speaking reflected very truly the qualities of his mind. It was always direct; it put aside whatever was irrelevant to the matter in hand, and it presented with completeness the arguments for his own conclusion, or the reason for the procedure which he proposed to take.

His Splendid Qualities.

"But we are thinking to-day rather of the admirable moral qualities of him who now rests from earthly labor. To say all in one word, Sir Oliver Mowat was a good man. He was truthful, upright, fair-minded, just; he was generous and kind, and he sought the good of all, as he had opportunity.

"The first question which he asked regarding any course of action which might be proposed to him, or which there might appear reasons for taking, was, 'Is it right?' Conscience must be consulted first of all, and he would resolutely obey its command. He knew well that, without adequate support from public opinion, a government or legislature could not do anything which it might wish to do, but he would not, at the dictation of public opinion, do anything he believed to be wrong. Most circumspect and wary in determining his line of action, he was perfectly firm in adhering to it, once the course of duty was decided. This strength of purpose, too, was united with charity and courtesy towards those who differed from him.

High Motives Always.

"The proof that Sir Oliver Mowat was actuated by high motives and was an upright and good man is supplied not by this or that particular act, but by the whole course of his life. That life is now completed, the record of it is crowded with important action, and as we survey it in its entirety the evidence is perfect that Sir Oliver Mowat was an eminently able, wise and good man. Surely Canada has had a treasure in the possession of this rare servant, and the young men of Canada—young men of talent, education and opportunity — have an example which they will do well to imitate.

"A good man in the truest sense is one who lives in the fear of God and in the faith of the Redeemer. The good fruit is the produce of a good tree. Sir Oliver Mowat was quite incapable of parading his religion or of putting forth claims to public support on the ground of it, but he never concealed the fact that he believed the Gospel and placed his hope in God. He was a humble and consistent follower of Christ, to whom alone he looked for salvation. The integrity, the purity, the beneficence which we admire in his course were more than ethic virtues; they came out of the depths of his character, and were Christian graces. His life was clear and beautiful, for it was holy. This is by far the most important thing which I can say regarding him whom we all trusted and admired, and whom all who knew his kindness and gentleness sincerely loved.

"Whither Has He Gone?"

"Sir Oliver Mowat has passed beyond the sphere of our vision, but those who mourn his removal do not need anxiously to enquire whither has he gone, for the Master whom he served and loved has said, 'Where I am, there shall also My servant be. In My Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go to prepare a place for you, I

BACK FROM BUFFALO

Mr. Gamey, M. P. P., Arrives in Toronto Wednesday Afternoon.

AT THE REQUEST OF FRIENDS.

Will Support His Charges Before the Commission—No Explanation of the Missing Deposit Slip—Mr. Crossin, His Partner, Contradicts His Interview—Libel Suit Entered by Frank Sullivan.

Toronto, April 23.—Mr. Gamey returned from Buffalo yesterday afternoon, and the investigation will continue this morning. It was at the earnest solicitation of his political friends that he came back, and among those who accompanied him were Mr. W. J. Hanna, M.P.P., and Mr. William Masson, his Owen Sound lawyer.

There was no demonstration on the arrival of the train. A couple of dozen were there, chiefly railway employes, and they gazed upon him with interest. During the journey he was rather reticent, in contrast to his willingness to talk on the previous night, and had very little more to say than what has already appeared in the Tuesday night's interview from Buffalo.

Where Is the Slip?

There is a serious divergence between Mr. Gamey's story about the $900 deposit in the Ontario Bank and Mr. Crossin's. The latter says that Mr. Gamey is mistaken in stating that the deposit was made on another day than the $1,500 deposit. The bank books show that a $900 deporit was made in the morning and a $1,500 deposit in the afternoon of the same day, Sept. 11. Mr. Crossin also denies the statement that this money was paid to him to make the deposit. He says that he did not make the deposit, but that Mr. Gamey himself made out this deposit slip. Mr. Gamey gives as his reason for getting back the deposit slip on Saturday, that he wanted to see in whose handwriting it was. The one he returned to the bank was a copy, and he declines to say what became of the original. These deposit slips will be heard of again later on.

A Writ For Libel.

A special despatch from London says: A writ was filed here yesterday with R. K. Cowan, in which Frank Joseph Sullivan sets forth that he thereby sues John Ross Robertson, proprietor of The Toronto Telegram, claiming damages for an alleged libelous article. The writ is issued by J. M. McEvoy of this city, who is at present in Toronto acting for the defence in the Gamey investigation. Unstated damages are claimed, but the writ does not contain the article which it is alleged libels Mr. Sullivan. It is one of the recent references to the Gamey trial.

The article referred to stated that Frank Sullivan had admitted receiving half of the $3,000 from Mr. Gamey.

Mr. J. M. McEvoy said Mr. Frank Sullivan returned last evening from Rochester with Mrs. Sullivan and her father, Mr. Wilson, who were called as witnesses by the prosecution.

As to His Absence.

The following telegram from Mr. Gamey was received at The Globe office at noon yesterday from Buffalo:

"You have no authority to state that I contradicted my counsel. I did not tell them or anyone else where I was going. Please contradict your misleading statement. R. R. Gamey."

SELECTED A SITE.

The Peterborough Sugar Company yesterday afternoon closed the deal that has been pending for some weeks past for the purchase of the Howden property at the locks, and sod will be broken immediately preparatory to the erection of their new factory. The site is an ideal one for a factory of the kind and the operation of a concern of this nature at that point will do much to promote the growth of the town in that particular section. In addition to the Howden lot which contains 34 acres the company closed the purchase yesterday of a 2 1-2 acre lot from Mr. Ed. Phelan and a 2 acre lot from Mrs. Hartley, both of which adjoin the Howden property —thirty-eight and a half acres then is really the extent of the Sugar Company's real estate. The acquiring of the two small lots were necessary in order to obtain an entrance to where the factory will be erected.

The Howden property just sold borders on the Otonabee river adjacent to the locks. The factory will be located to the rear of the lock master's residence and office. Of course all the land will not be required for the buildings etc. and some choice building lots will be available.

AN EASTERN VIEW OF ONTARIO POLITICS.

"While we have not the slightest desire," says the Halifax Chronicle, "to condone or excuse corruption in either political party, we must still insist on fair play for the politicians, even in Ontario.

"Fair play says that the presumption ought to be all in favour of the Ontario Liberals. They have had such leaders since confederation as Brown, Mackenzie, Blake, Mowat. They have had such a high and fair-minded leading provincial organ as the Globe, of Toronto, with such undeniably able and honourable press supporters, as the Hamilton Times, the London Advertiser, the Kingston Whig, etc.

"The Conservatives, on the other hand, have been led only by Sir John Macdonald, admittedly a man of few principles and many wiles—a convicted giver and taker of bribes. They have had such a leading newspaper organ, as the Toronto Mail, which is not only disgracefully mendacious but lacking in the ability and, apparently, keen in the desire to conceal the fact. It is backed by a mere host of imitators or slavish quoters.

"The facts are that since confederation six more Ontario Tories than Grits have been unseated for corrupt practices; that since the last election four Tories have been unseated to one Grit. The facts are further that after the last general election, and before the meeting of the Legislature, the Tories were striving and straining quite as desperately to get possession of office as the Grits were to retain office. The present presumption, therefore, is fully as violent that Gamey entered into a conspiracy to trump up discrediting and damaging charges against the Government, as that the Government, through Stratton, entered into a conspiracy to purchase his support. The truth is that at present there is absolutely nothing but Gamey's word to support his charges, and that Gamey is a self-confessed public liar.

"All these things call for suspension of public judgment and the utmost circumspection and fair mindedness. But instead of that from the Tory press we have reckless misstatements and vicious attempts to prejudice the public mind."

GOOD WORK AT OTTAWA SAYS TORONTO NEWS.

Some Appointments That Have Been Made of Late—The Lieut.-Governor.

(Toronto News.)

A high sense of public duty distinguishes some of the recent acts of the Dominion Government. It would seem that the Ministers have determined to break away from the patronage-hunting element and make the public interest more than ever before the dominating factor in public appointments and acts of administration. Many facts in support of this view have appeared during the last few weeks.

In the appointment of Mr. Winchester as County Judge, of York, an important office was filled by one eminently qualified to discharge its duties, but who commanded no particular party, social or financial influence at Ottawa.

The appointment of Mr. Wm. Mortimer Clark, K. C., as Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario must be approved with equal emphasis. He was not the man to seek appointment to public office. He was not entitled to considerature in virtue of any party service that he had performed. He had only fitness for the office and high standing in the community, and these only seemed to have been considered by the Government in making the appointment.

Then the determination of the Government to refer the question of redistribution to a joint committee, in order to obtain a fair delimitation of constituencies within county boundaries, the resolution to appoint a similar committee to devise more effective measures against political corruption, and the intelligent attitude of the government on the tariff, all show a disposition at Ottawa to improve political methods and administer public affairs from higher grounds than Canadian public men have sometimes occupied.

HAVE PURCHASED A WELL-KNOWN STALLION.

Messrs. James Elmhirst and W. J. Renwick of Keene.

Messrs. James Elmherst and W. J. Renwick, of Keene, have purchased the well-known Clydsdale stallion, "Stately City" from Messrs. Graham Bros., of Claremont. The horse will be open for service in this district and the farmers and horsemen in general are to be congratulated upon having so fine an animal in their district.

Stately City is a grand, big, thick horse, of great weight and substance and good quality. He has fine, clean, flat bones, and his action is superb. As a yearling he was second at Hamilton and Lanark. As a two-year-old he was third at Glasgow and first at Hamilton; and as a three-year-old he was fourth at Glasgow in a very strong class, and had the Islay Premium both that year and the following one, and was the Greenock Premium horse in 1901. A two-year-old stallion got by Stately City gained first at Aberdeen Spring Show in 1902 in a class of eighteen. Stately City has only been shown once since he was imported,—at the Toronto Spring Stallion Show in February 1903 when he won the sweepstakes in his class and also the championship as best clydsdale stalliuon show. He is particularly well bred, and is certain to be a profitable investment to breeders in this district.

APPEAL BY DREYFUS

He Wants His Case Reopened and Investigated.

HE RECALLS HIS SUFFERING.

His Letter Is Couched in the Most Dramatic Language—It Is Believed That the Appeal Will Cause a Tremendous Agitation in France—Says Esterhazy Is the Culprit—Has New Facts.

Paris, April 23.—Alfred Dreyfus has submitted to Minister of War Andre a lengthy letter, in which he earnestly asks for a reopening of his case by means of an investigation by the Minister, as the supreme source of military justice. The letter, which is dated Paris, April 21, confirms the reports that Dreyfus has been living quietly here for some time past. It promises to cause a tremendous agitation among the various elements of the political groups for and against Dreyfus.

The first part of the letter is a calm, earnest plea that the court which condemned him at Rennes was improperly influenced, first by the annotated document ascribed to Emperor William, and second by the false testimony of one of the witnesses, Czernuski. After arguing on the extent to which these contributed to his condemnation, Dreyfus recalls in graphic terms the long series of horrors to which he had been subjected. The letter, throughout, is couched in a highly dramatic style, which is likely to make it one of the notable papers of the case.

Recalls His Suffering.

It refers to Esterhazy as "one who stands before the entire world as the culprit." One of the leading passages, showing the rhectosical style, is as follows: "I will not recall, Mr. Minister, what I have endured since 1894. Picture to yourself the horrors of a soldier whose life was devoted to duty, to work, to loyalty and to profound devotion for his country, and who in an instant is stripped of his good name and despoiled of the honor of himself and his children. For five years this soldier is subjected to horrible sufferings. They seek to crush him physically, to annihilate him morally. He is absolutely innocent of all crime and struggles in vain to penetrate the mystery, proclaiming his innocence and struggling with all the forces of his mind and body for that supreme pleasure of vindicating his good name and character. Days, months, years, pass thus in most cruel agony, amid the tortures of a murderous climate. At last he is brought back to France, the guilty one is discovered, and the soldier hears himself proclaimed innocent by those who before reviled him as a traitor. It was thus, Mr. Minister, that I hoped to see his martyrdom end. But, alas, if I returned to find the devotion of friends who had battled for the truth, it was to find also that deadly hatreds had been unloosed.

"In the processes of 1894 I was stabbed in the back. I cannot imagine how such conditions can prevail through falsehood and deception. But so it was, and my second condemnation was but an aggregated reaffirmation of what occurred in 1894. When the guilty one was known and unmasked, and Esterhazy was recognized as the author of the treason, the same men cheated justice for the second time by the same criminal manoeuvres. Conscious of those methods, the Government of the Republic will not permit itself to keep in prison one who is known to be innocent.

Has New Facts to Present.

"In constant thought of ultimate legal revision, I have reassembled little by little all the divergent elements of testimony contributing to my conviction. I have scorned calumines and falsehoods. I have remained silent with the firm conviction that justice surely would have its day of triumph. The victim of criminal tactics and violation of the law twice committed against me, I now address myself to the supreme chief of military justice, and, supporting myself by new facts which have been elicited and by the existence of the pretended bordereau annoted by Emperor William. I beg to ask that you institute an enquiry, first upon the uses made of this false documents at Rennes, and the consequences it produced on those rendering judgment; second, upon the false and fraudulent testimony of Czernuski at Rennes."

After a deferential salutation the letter is signed "Alfred Dreyfus."

The Best Physic

"I have used Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets myself and in my family and think they are the best on the market to-day. They are exceedingly popular in our community," says Mr. J. G. Page, of of Alberton, Ala. Give these Tablets a trial and you will never wish to take another dose of pills. They are easier to take and more pleasant in effect, as they never gripe and leave the bowels in a natural condition, while the use of pills is often followed by constipation. c will come again, and receive you unto Myself, that where I am there may ye be also.' Years of toil or sickness may wear out the frail body, and we lay it in the dust, but the spirit, redeemed and sanctified, ascends to its true home, to gather strength and beauty for the resurrection of the body.

"We unite in thanksgiving to God for this life of lengthened and rare service and in praying 'the Father of Mercies' and the 'God of all comfort' that He will sustain and comfort those who sorrow for a beloved parent. They will be cheered by the thought that he is 'with Christ, which is far better.'"

The concluding prayer was by Rev. Dr. Maclaren of Knox College.

Last Look at His Face.

Just before the lid was placed on the coffin and after the relatives had taken a final look at Sir Oliver's features, a touching incident occurred. A feeble old gentleman, with long, silvery hair and a face bearing the imprint of his 94 years, pushed past the stalwart guards at the door of the mortuary chamber and gained the side of the bier, where he stood with bowed head for some seconds. He was ex-Postmaster Leslie, who was superannuated by Sir John Macdonald nearly twenty years ago.

A SURPASSING TRIBUTE.

Funeral Procession Viewed by Thousands of Citizens.

About 2.30 the bells began to toll, and at three o'clock the body was borne to the hearse by six members of the Caithness Society. They were: Wm. Banks, Sr., Daniel Rose, Sr., Donald Imrie, Dan. A. Rose, Jr., and Gilbert L. Sutherland.

Then the cortege formed and began its long and slow march to Mount Pleasant, via Simcoe, King and Yonge streets. Col. Grasett, chief of police, was marshal of the procession. The colonel was followed by a squad of mounted police, who assisted in clearing the way. Then followed a detachment of the Royal Canadian Dragoons under Captain Van Straubenzie. Then came the bands of the Queen's Own and Grenadiers.

Drs. Primrose and Temple and the attendant clergymen came next. They were followed by bearers of the coffin and the honorary pallbearers, viz.: Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier Ross, Hon. J. M. Gibson, Chief Justice Moss, Chancellor Boyd, and Sir Wm. Mulock.

The chief mourners were Sheriff Mowat, Arthur Mowat, Mr. A. M. Mowat, Master Geo. G. Mowat, Messrs. C. R. W. Biggar, Thomas Langton, L. L. Biggar, F. C. Biggar, Justice Maclennan, C. O. Strange, H. Governor Represented.

The staff of the late Lieutenant-Governor was headed by Commander Law. Then came the following:—Major Maude, representing his Excellency the Governor-General, the commander-in-chief and staff, lieutenant-governors of provinces and staffs, the archbishops, bishops and heads of churches, privy councillors and Dominion Cabinet, including Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. James Sutherland, Hon. Wm. Paterson, and Hon. Mr. Templeman, the speaker of the Senate, Hon. R. W. Scott, Hon. J. Israel Tarte, the chief justices, General Lord Dundonald, members of the Senate, the speaker of the House of Commons, puisne judges of the Supreme Court, judge of the Exchequer Court, and other puisne judges, members of the House of Commons, the Provincial Cabinet, speaker and members of the Legislative Assembly; members of the clergy, County Court judges, foreign Consuls, staffs of the universities and colleges, officers of the civil services, the Mayor and city officials, the bar and medical profession, officers of the militia, other Mayors, trustees and staffs of the Public and Separate schools and institutes, the Board of Trade, societies and clubs, and citizens in carriages.

An Hour in Passing.

The procession occupied over an hour passing a given point. One hundred and seventy-five rigs were in line. Twenty-two carriages were used by members of the Legislature, and the clergy, the bench, the bar and many other branches of professional life were fully represented. Mayors of cities and towns in Ontario were given a place in the line, with the City Council, educational boards and secret and fraternal societies, some of them being on foot.

Several of the foreign Consuls appeared in the uniform of their office. Among the Consuls in carriages were: Samuel Nordheimer, Germany; Nicol Kingsmill, Argentine Republic; Auguste Boltc, France; Edwin U. Gunsaulus, United States; Barnett Laurance, Venezuela; Anton L. Hertzberg, Sweden and Norway; Dr. W. Harley Smith, Italy; Albert Nordheimer, Netherlands; Hon. J. Enoch Thompson, Spain; Geo. Musson, Brazil; Geo. N. Morang, Guatemala.

The Music.

The procession moved off from Government House about ten minutes to three, and it was just five minutes to five when the first of the line arrived at the graveside. There were two bands, the Queen's Own and the Royal Grenadiers. The bands played alternately all the way to Mount Pleasant Cemetery, the following being the musical program: Dead March, in Saul, Chopin's Funeral March, Nearer My God to Thee and Departed Comrades. At the gate, the bands massed, and rendered Chopin's Funeral March until the last of the procession had entered the grounds.

At the Graveside.

Evergreens lined the open grave. The coffin was lifted from the hearse, and lowered into the grave, and, while the mourners stood with bared heads, Rev. Alexander Gandier read the short, but impressive, burial service of the Presbyterian Church.

Then followed the Lord's prayer and the parting blessing.

The mourners remained at the graveside while the undertaker's assistants quietly and reverently entombed in their final resting-place the mortal remains of Oliver Mowat.

A MAIL CARRIER'S EXPERIENCE.

CURED OF KIDNEY TROUBLE AND PAIN IN THE BACK, FROM WHICH HE SUFFERED MANY YEARS, BY

DR. PITCHER'S BACKACHE-KIDNEY TABLETS.

MR. JAMES TAGGART, mail carrier for the past eighteen years, Palmerston, Ont., gives the history of his case as follows: "For a good many years I have had kidney trouble and pain in the back. It is so many years ago that I can hardly say what it came from, but think it came from a heavy lift; after that the back grew weaker and weaker. I tried everything, and never got a bit of relief until I got a bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets. They cleared up the pain, soreness and kidney trouble, and strengthened the back."

The action of Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets is rapid and positive, curing backache, eruptions, blood humors, dropsical swellings, gravel, smarting and scalding of the urine, frequent rising at night, rheumatic pains, and all kidney troubles of young and old. Price 50c. a bottle at druggist or by mail. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto.

MANSLAUGHTER.

Charles King Found Guilty of This Crime in the Freeman Case.

St. Thomas, April 23.—The jury in the Freeman murder case, after being out three hours last evening returned a verdict of "guilty of manslaughter" against Charles King, with a recommendation of mercy. King heard the verdict unmoved, the only sign of emotion being a slight coloring of the face. He was then taken back to jail. Sentence will be passed to-day.

The prisoner was placed on trial in the morning, and after a large number of jurymen had been challenged the case was proceeded with.

No Confession Admitted.

Justice Street ruled out all evidence relating to what King said after the murder had been committed. The reason for this ruling was that Crown Attorney Donahue, who had charge of the case, had asked D. B. Freeman to question King as to his connection with the tragedy. Freeman swore that he told King to make a clean breast of the affair and the law would be easier on him. This the judge held was an inducement, and, therefore, all statements made by accused after that time were not allowed as evidence.

The only reason given for King having committed the murder was that he was jealous of Willie and desired to drive the black team, a privilege not accorded him. No evidence was offered by the defence.

King is quite pleased with the finding of the jury.

King is a Whitechapel product, and his victim was a homeless boy, adopted from an orphan asylum.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 23.—President Mitchell, the district presidents and board members of the United Mine Workers met in executive session yesterday to complete the arrangements for the adjustment of the mine workers' grievances. President Mitchell sent notices to the presidents of the coal carrying roads yesterday that District Presidents Nicholls, Fahy and Dettry had been appointed as the miners' representatives on the Board of Conciliation, and asked that the companies make their appointments as soon as possible so that the meeting can be held.

American Federation of Labor.

Toronto, April 23.—At the session yesterday of the American Federation of Labor Executive here the carpenters and joiners difficulty was referred to the chiefs of the disputing organizations to take into consideration about May 1 the agreement suggested by the Executive. Other disputes between labor bodies were adjusted also, and in the evening about 80 guests sat down to a banquet tendered by the Mayor and Corporation of Toronto. In his reply to Mayor Urquhart's toast, President Gompers said the aim of the Federation was to see that the rights of the most humble of the people were respected.

Rev. Barr's Agents Greedy.

Saskatoon, April 23.—The march of the Barr colonists from Saskatoon across the 171 miles of prairie to their homesteads commenced Tuesday, twenty-five transports leaving at 4 o'clock. A large party with 40 wagon loads of baggage started yesterday. Barr's agents have been among the colonists asking them to pay a dollar a month each for special instructions in farming, but Speers and his men openly advise them against any such thing. A hundred stragglers arrived yesterday afternoon.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Has Proved a Blessing to Thousands of Our School Teachers Who Were Victims of Neuralgia, Sleeplessness and Nerve Troubles.

Neuralgia, sleeplessness, nervousness, dyspepsia, and general run down condition, make life a weary burden for thousands of our schol teachers. When nerve force is low, the brain tired and digestion in a disordered condition, there is irritability, bad temper, impatience, and often great despondency. Under such circumstances the important work of teaching can never be successful. Paine's Celery Compound is doing a grand work for half-sick, weary and run-down school teachers in every part of Canada. Thousands engaged in the work of educating the young are kept well from year to year by the strength giving virtues of Paine's Celery Compound. It is the one great medicine for all classes of society. It maintains its popularity and reputation because it makes people well. Mr. L. A. Belyea, a well known school teacher of Hampstead, N.B., says:

"I was taken with a severe attack of neuralgia in the head and shoulders and gave up the idea of ever being cured. Have taken medicine prescribed by different physicians, but all to no avail. I was induced to try a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound. Before I had taken the half of it I began to feel better. I have taken three bottles of this glorious medicine and to-day I can say that it is the first time in eleven years that I have felt none of those piercing pains to which I had long been a victim. If any one discredits this statement let them write me and I will be glad to inform them of what has cured me of neuralgia and a shattered nervous system."

The Wheat's Coming Crop.

The prospects for an enormous crop this year are exceptionally bright. The acreage is 15 per cent. heavier than last year, and conditions correspondingly favorable.

TWO LOCAL APRIL WEDDINGS YESTERDAY.

Rev. O. C. Elliott, of Belleville, Married at 9 a.m.

Other Happy Brides and Grooms in the Merry Spring Time.

The residence of Mrs. S. Scott was yesterday the scene of a very pretty wedding, the contracting parties being Miss Adeline Scott and Rev. O. C. Elliott, of Belleville, but formerly of town.

The officiating clergy were Rev. Dr. Torrance and Rev. Messrs. Bastow and J. A. Wilson.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of only the intimate friends.

The bridesmaid was Miss Florence Thompson, while the groom was supported by Rev. Mr. Leavitt, of Picton.

After the ceremony a very pretty wedding breakfast was served. The presents were very numerous and beautiful, yet at the same time were such as would in the future be useful.

The happy couple left in the afternoon for Belleville, where they will in future reside.

CROWLEY—NELLIS.

St. Mary's church, Lindsay, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Tuesday, April 21st, when Ven. Archdeacon Casey united in the holy bonds of matrimony Miss Isabella, daughter of Mr. Jas. Nellis, of Ops, and Mr. David Crowley, of Downeyville. The bride, who was attired in castor lady's cloth, with cream silk waist and black picture hat, was assisted by her sister, Miss Susie, who wore brown, with white silk waist and hat to match. The groom was supported by Mr. M. G. Clancy, of Downeyville.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowley left on the 8 o'clock train for Peterborough, where they intend residing. The bride's travelling suit was dark green Venetian cloth. The presents were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the bride is held by her many friends.

ELEGANT AFFAIR AT ALBANY CLUB.

Formal Opening of New Suite of Rooms

Took Place Last Night—Orchestra in Attendance—Officers Elected.

The Albany Club is beginning to be known as a place for promoting genial social intercourse. Last night the formal opening of the new suite of rooms took place. Among the many commendable points of this cosy social club are two rules, which strictly prohibit liquors being served and playing for stakes, and it is very creditable to the club that two such excellent rules are rigorously enforced.

Although the club has just organized, and has only recently been chartered, the membership already numbers over one hundred persons.

The new rooms are four in number, viz., a billiard room, card room, reading room and music room, all of which are sumptuously furnished. There were about 150 men present at the function last evening. An efficient orchestra, consisting of twenty pieces, and conducted by Mr. Gliddon, gave some excellent selections, while many impromptu songs and speeches were made

During the course of the proceedings the following officers were elected:

President—Mr. W. H. Meldrum.
Vice-President—Mr. W. H. Robertson.
2nd Vice-President—Dr. Bradd.
Executive Committee — Mr. G. A. Cox, jr., chairman, and Messrs. E. B. Stone, W. E. Lech, W. H. Robertson and the president.

At the conclusion of the formal meeting, refreshments were served, Mr. E. W. Gardiner, the George street confectioner, being the caterer.

On the whole the affair was a most magnificent success, most gratifying to the members of the club, and their guests, fully illustrating the fact that the Albany Club can do things, and moreover does things, on no mean scale. The club has started excellently and has a large and exclusive membership, and in view of these things its promoters feel that its ultimate success is assured.

THE GAMEY CONSPIRACY EXPOSED.

Frank Sullivan Tells His Story.

EXPLAINS THE WHOLE PLOT.

Tells how Gamey Concocted Story of His Alleged Bribery.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Toronto, April 23rd. — The main outstanding fact in this matter is the evidence of Frank Sullivan, who has been so frequently associated by Mr. Gamey with his alleged operations. The evidence of this witness was explanatory of the whole plot, of which the member for Manitoulin is the central figure.

Just before court adjourned the witness told a remarkable story of an interview he had with Gamey the day before the meeting of the Legislature. Gamey told him that he was having so much trouble with his constituents that he would have to get up a story to satisfy them, and he intended to say that Stratton gave him $3,000 in September, and $1,000 at the time of the Globe interview, and that he had shared the money with Sullivan.

Gamey was not in court to-day, and it was reported that his physician has ordered him to take a rest.

THIS IS ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

The Patron Saint of the Englishman.

Was His Day Observed or Forgotten in Peterborough?

No race on earth, has greater reason to be proud of a national day, whose observance suggests a glorious past, a great present and future, than the English, and in Peterborough no race more apathetically or indifferently notes the reverence of their national day, St. George's Day, which falls on April 23rd. Catch, if you can, an Irishman abroad on St. Patrick's Day, without a brighter twinkle in his eye, a more elastic spring in his cap and without a sprig of shamrock in his button-hole. Catch, if you can, a Scotchman, whose smile is not broader, whose "conceit o' himsel'" is not greater and whose bonnet is not brightened with a bit of heather on St. Andrew's Day morning. But to-day we see no Englishman wearing either the rose of York or Lancaster, or showing by any outward or visible sign, that one of the trinity of great races, whose union is typified by the entwined Rose, Shamrock and Thistle, thinks, or feels, or cares, that this is St. George's Day, and not even on the flag staff of the Sons of England Hall was, at the time of writing, to be seen the flag that bears the blended crosses of which St. George's was the original. Not that Englishmen are to be blamed; it is their own affair if on St. George's Day the rose remains in the florist's shop, or the "roast beef of old England" is eaten in privacy.

If Englishmen take the day so calmly the general public may not know much about St. George, the patron saint of England, whose effigy in the act of slaying the dragon, is familiar to those who remember it as it appears on the Canadian pennies of the coinage of 1857.

St. George was a saint venerated, both in the eastern and western churches, and the patron saint of England. He was canonized in 494 or 496. His origin is very obscure, one of many legends representing him as a prince of Cappadocia martyred by Diocletian. Gibbon has sought to identify this legendary saint with the notorious and turbulent Arian heretic, "George of Cappadocia," who was slain in 361, in a rising of the populace, who had been infuriated by his oppression, and his violence against pagans and orthodox. But the most eminent scholars, both Protestant and Roman Catholic, are of the opinion that the veneration of St. George has been traced up to so early a period as to make it very improbable that a notorious Arian could have been foisted on the Church as a saint and martyr. The killing of a dragon that was about to swallow a maiden is a legendary feat attributed to him. He was adopted by the Genoese as their patron saint, and in 1222 the Council of Oxford ordered that his day, (23rd of April) should be observed as a national holiday in England. In 1350 he was made the patron saint of the Order of the Garter by Edward III.

The Gem of Aroostook is the choicest of all cooking potatoes, either baked or boiled is dry floury and white. There is no waste as they are of a smooth surface and are worth 20c a bag more than any potatoes offered in Peterborough this year. 90c per bushel. E. F. Mason & Co., Grocers. 1d.

Mr. W. Francis Firth who is to appear here May 1st, is not only one of the first baritones of the day, but is fast coming to the front as a song writer. Among his compositions are "O Father Hear Me," "As Violets," "The White Star of Heaven," "A Plea," and "Your Lover's Heart."

Some of these songs will be sung at his appearance here. th-f-m.

PRESENTATIONS WERE MADE.

Speeches Made by Various Speakers—Trent Valley Champions Congratulated.

One of the most enjoyable banquets that has been held in Peterborough in some time was that which was held in the T.A.S. rooms last night and was tendered jointly to the association's hockey team, the champions of the Trent Valley League for the season of 1903, and the dramatic section of the T.A.S. which is so popular with the people of Peterborough.

The affair last night was most unique in as much as at least half of those present were ladies—ladies who have assisted in the dramatic section and ladies who have shouted themselves hoarse in the rink as their favourites ran up goal after goal against an opposing team.

The arrangements for the banquet were complete in every detail and the entire proceedings passed off in a delightful manner. The tables were neatly arranged and were decked out in a handsome manner with flowers etc., whilst the menu was such as to reflect credit upon the caterer, Mr. W. J. McCallum and those who assisted him in his contract. During the evening appropriate and eulogistic speeches were made concerning the dramatic section and hockey team and a presentation was made to each of the membes of the latter organization of a handsome gold ring.

The Chair was occupied by Rev. Father McColl and seated around the head of the table were Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Rev. Father John O'Brien, Rev. Father Phelan, Messrs. J. H. Burnham, R. E. Layfield and George E. Whiten. About 175 members of the society and its friends were also present. At the conclusion of a most sumptuous spread, the Chairman, Rev. Father McColl called the gathering to order. He expressed his great pleasure in being present and in seeing so many friends of the hockey team and the dramatic section of the society in attendance. He had no idea when he received his invitation to be present that the banquet would be so magnificent an affair and it must be a pleasure to them all to assist in honouring such worthy branches of the society. In proposing the toast of the King Rev. Father McColl spoke enthusiastically of His Majesty and said it was believed that the early termination of the Boer War and the recent legislation for the relief of Ireland were to a large extent due to his influence.

The toast was honoured in the usual manner.

"Our Country" was the next toast and in replying to it Mr. J. H. Burnham made reference to the great pleasure he felt in being pesent; to the fact that it differed from most banquets he had attended inasmuch as they had that presence of the ladies. Then the speaker paid his respects to the ladies of the T.A.S. by declaring that a more charming and beautiful company of girls it would be difficult to find. Mr. Burnham spoke of the good work that had been done by the dramatic society and the excellence of the productions they had from time to time put on. After Mr. Burnham had spoken of the success of the T.A. S. hockey team he concluded by declaring that the banquet was a owning achievement and a fitting climax to the progress the society had made for some time.

Mr. R. E. Layfield, works' accountant of the Canadian Geneal Electric Company, also spoke in reply to the toast. After congratulating the boys upon their success during the winter, he referred to the good work the T.A.S. society was doing. He declared that at his factory that next to a man knowing his work, the best qualification he could possess was in belonging to the T.A.S. The employers of labour then know that their men wont be taking a holiday after every pay day. Mr. Layfield thanked the committee for for the invitation to be present and wished the boys and the society every success in the future.

"Our Champion" was the next toast and it brought forth a reply from Rev. Dr. O'Brien, the Hon. Pesident of the Club. It was the first season in the T.V.H.L. and the result had been most gratifying. In recalling a little history of the society, the reverend gentleman paid a tribute to Rev. Father Frank O'Sullivan, the founder of the T.A.S. in Peterborough. However, no society can be kept in a flourishing condition by sentiment alone, so that without in any way losing sight of the main object they had in view, viz., that of promoting total abstinence, they had decided to organize athletic clubs of various kinds in connection with the T.A.S. The reverend doctor went on to speak of the physical and mental benefit to be derived from engaging in true manly sport and he felt that it would not in any way injure the cause of Temperance. He then presented to the members of the team, making feeling reference to each, a handsome gold ring. The rings were 14 k., and were supplied by Mr. Frank Schneider. They were much admired by all who saw them, having the T.A.S. monogram thereon with two hockey sticks neatly crossed and a puck.

Messrs. Wm. Crowley, the President of the club, and Mr. George Lynch, captain of the team were compelled to make brief responses, in which they told of the kindness they had received during the winter from the members of the society.

At this juncture Mr. G. E. Whiten, the photographer, presented to the team a handsome group photo of the boys. Mr. Whiten spoke of the pleasure it gave him to be present and the interest he took in the team throughout the winter.

Rev. Father O'Brien in responding to the toast of the dramatic section said that they were aiming at the development of both mind and body. He spoke on much the same lines as the other speakers as to the general work of the society.

Rev. Father O'Brien's remarks were followed by a solo by Mr. T. J. Begley. It was thoroughly enjoyed, being a parody on Mr. Dooley, with topical references to the work of the T.A.S. team.

The toast of the Trent Valley League was next proposed and was replied to by Mr. E. S. Clarry, Secretary-Treasurer of the League. He spoke of the cordial relations that had existed between the league and himself during the past year and the success of the Trent Valley League. He formally presented to the T.A.S. team the Stratton cup which they won as champions of the league.

Rev. Father Phelan was asked to say a few words and humorously referred to the fact that the first and one of the two defeats the T.A.S. received during the winter was at Lakefield.

Mr. Jack McCabe replied to the toast of kindred sports and President McAulliffe to the toast of "Our Society". -Ex-President Sharpe also spoke a few ords.

Mr. Will George replied on behalf of the ladies.

The Secretary of the society, Mr. D. J. Devine, read the financial statement of the club which showed that a flourishing year had been brought to a close and that $104.67 was handed over to the society.

The Chairman read letters of regret in their inability to be present from Rev. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay and Rev. Father Crowley.

Mr. Tom. Turcott, the genial Secretary of the rooms, was presented with a purse in recognition of his efforts in behalf of the club after which the banquet was brought to a close by singing the national anthem.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir, — I have the highest respect for the late Sir Oliver Mowat, and have no objection to his receiving all honour, and he can't be too highly honoured, but I am awfully sorry that there was a school half-holiday yesterday afternoon. The bad boy had three or four more hours of daylight in which to wickedly slay birds. During the afternoon, I saw two boys, one armed with an air gun, deliberately shoot a robin. The poor wounded bird fell fluttering on my lawn. I ran to it, and it seemed to be suffering intensely, as it soon died. I have no doubt that it was a nesting robin, and had come out to seek food for its young, which will be left to starve from lack of food, or from cold. In this way the dear, sweet robin family is lessened by five or six—the murdered mother-bird, and the nest full of chicks.

The more holidays we have the more birds will be killed, and the more nests destroyed. On the street I live, which is a general way to the country, I see idle boys, armed with guns and catapults, going out into the country, apparently to shoot the dear birds, for at this time of the year, my husband says, there is no lawful game for them to shoot.

If I were a man or a policeman, I could in a few hours gather in a dozen of these bad boys. If the law protects our bird life, the guardians of the law, as well as every citizen, should assist in its enforcement.

I have quite a family of robins which come to my back door, picking the crumbs I scatter for them, and it seems a piece of wickedness to have one of them destroyed.

I wished above that I were a man—on second thoughts I take it back, for I wouldn't be a man like some of the wooden men I know, who seem to let things go at loose ends in this town, and permit all sorts of things to go on without intereference; they let boys and men beat and abuse horses, let boys kill birds and rob nests, and do not lift a finger to punish or prevent. Even the police, the paid servants of the law, seem to be like us women—when we fire a gun we shut both eyes, and the police seem to shut both eyes—when the most open acts of wickedness, such as I have mentioned, would come to their notice if they had their eyes open.

I feel strongly on the subject, and if I could write as well as I could talk this feeling, this letter would be a good deal longer and a good deal stronger.

I do want the dear, innocent, beautiful birds protected, and I think it a great shame that the authorities and men of influence don't do something of the kind. I would like to appeal to our Police Magistrate. He is known to be fond of flowers, trees, birds and other beautiful things. I would like to see him fond enough of the ladies to do something to please them, by preventing the destruction of our beautiful birds, to protect that noble animal, the horse, and the sweet, innocent little lambs, which the butchers tie into knots with cruel cords that cut their flesh, and pack into crates in cramped positions, that must be the most painful torture. For goodness sake, Mr. Dumble, do something to make civilization something more than a hollow sham, and to show that is is founded on the Christianity established by Him who numbers the hairs of our head and notes the fall of the sparrow, and permitted the birds to build their nests under the very eaves of His temple.

Yours sincerely,

CHARITY.

P. S. — I wish to thank you Mr. Editor, for the space you have given me, and to say also that I have no sympathy with women who wear birds or bird wings on their hats. I have done so myself when it was the fashion, but after picking up that suffering robin on my lawn yesterday, I vowed that I would never do so again. C.

BOLSTRAGE'S DEATH.

George Monkman of Dobbinton Must Stand Trial on Serious Charge.

Chesley, April 22.—George Monkman of Dobbinton was brought before Magistrates Halliday and Catto of Chesley yesterday on the charge of causing the death of Alfred Bolstrage of Dobbinton in a row on April 6, and committed for trial. His case will come up at the General Sessions in Walkerton on June 9. He was admitted to bail in $4,000.

Bolstrage died on April 18, and the coroner's jury, after viewing the body and hearing the evidence, brought in this verdict: That Alfred Bolstrage came to his death by wounds inflicted on his left side by some sharp instrument; that we are of opinion that deceased contributed to his own death by neglecting ordinary precautions, both before and after he had medical advice; and we are of the opinion that said wounds were received during an affray on the night of April 6, but we are unable to say by what means the said wounds were inflicted.

CRAFT WENT DOWN SUDDENLY.

Two Men Meet Sudden Death at Tug Launching at West Selkirk, Man.

West Selkirk, Man., April 22.—At 4 o'clock Monday the Government tug Sir Hector was being launched from the winter moorings at the slough. The boat was slowly being let down, when the bow cable gave way and let the craft down suddenly. Eight men were on the water side of the boat and six had a narrow escape. These managed to escape by running into the deep water and swimming around, while one being near the helm ran around to safety. John Davies, who was managing operations, and Ed. Ryder close up to the boat, and were buried beneath it in an instant. The men killed were:

John W. Davies, foreman, a resident of Selkirk, 30 years of age, who leaves a widow and five children.

Ed. Ryder, aged about 20 years, also a resident of Selkirk.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

Mrs. John F. Sillars had Dyspepsia for Seven Years—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Cured Her.

Spring fever is a name often given to a stagnant stomach. When you have walked too much your legs ache and you know it is time to rest them. When your arms ache you know it is time to rest them. Use your stomach in the same way. When it is tired rest it.

The stomach supplies the body with heat. Its work is doubled during the cold weather. With the coming of spring it is tired and worn. It needs to be rested and toned up. It needs Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They rest the stomach by doing its work. They digest the food themselves. They thus bring the stomach to its normal state of activity and health, and that means renewed energy in all parts of the body.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are a natural remedy and sure reliever of all stomach ailments. Those who have used them are enthusiastic in their praises. Take Mrs. John F. Sillars, of Western Bay, Newfoundland, for example. She writes:—

"I have been cured of Dyspepsia by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. For seven years I suffered. I could not eat without suffering intense agony but had given up to die before using them. I tried doctors but they gave me no permanent relief. Then I started to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. From the first they gave me relief, and after the use of five boxes I was well and strong."

Ten Men Killed.

Mexico City, April 23.—Ten workmen engaged in making a tunnel on the Mexican Central's extension at Tuxpan, in the State of Jalisco, have lost their lives in a cave-in caused by several earthquake shocks coming in rapid succession. The first shock caused the falling of interior working, and when the gang of workmen went to clear away the debris they were caught by a second cave-in which resulted from frosh shocks.

The Twinging Pains of Rheumatism

And Sciatica, Distressing Headaches and Dizzy Spells, Made Life Wretched—Doctors and Medicines Availed Nothing but Cure Came With the use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Instead of giving you reasons why Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills should cure you, we prefer to quote from the experience of the cured ones. This case of Mr. Haines was unusually serious because it was of twenty years' standing, and had resisted the efforts of two physicians and all sorts of treatment. It is merely another illustration of how Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills reach the seat of disease and cure when other means fail.

Mr. William Haines, farmer, of Thorold Township, near Port Robinson, Welland County, Ont., states: "I have been subject to severe and distressing headaches since boyhood, and in later life this became complicated with rheumatism and sciatica, and altogether my life was made miserable. The headaches were accompanied with dizziness and vomiting, and I was for days and often weeks unfit for anything. As the trouble advanced I became reduced in flesh, and was wrecked in health and spirits.

"After undergoing treatment by two doctors and trying many domestic remedies and patent medicines, I almost gave up in despair, as none of those did me any good.

"Fortunately I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, thinking that if I were only benefitted it would be a wonder. However, I persisted in using these pills until the time came when the bad symptoms of nearly twenty years' standing disappeared. I had gained nicely in flesh, and began once more to enjoy life. For this great change all the credit is due to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I shall never cease to recommend them whenever the opportunity offers."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have attained their enormous sale because they succeed where others fail. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box; at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 8

Six Doctors Failed to Cure Him.

ERYSIPELAS AND SALT RHEUM WAS THE TROUBLE.

Burdock Blood Bitters

DID MORE THAN SIX DOCTORS COULD DO.

Mrs. Theo. Newell, Argyle Sound, N.S., expresses her opinion of this wonderful blood remedy in the following letter:

"It is with the greatest gratitude that I can testify to the wonderful curative powers of Burdock Blood Bitters. For years my husband suffered terribly with Erysipelas and Salt Rheum. He was so bad at times that he could no sleep on account of the itching and burning. He had been under the care of six different doctors, but they failed to do him any good. I had read different times of the wonderful cures being made by Burdock Blood Bitters, so advised him to give it a trial. He did so, and after taking five bottles was cured without a doubt. I would strongly advise any person troubled with blood disorders to give B.B.B. a fair trial for I am sure it will cure them."

SON OF NOVA SCOTIA

HON. JOSEPH HOWE THE GREATEST ORATOR B.N.A. HAS PRODUCED.

Began Life as a "Printer's Devil"—His Wonderful Oration at the Detroit International Commercial Convention—A Famous Libel Suit in Which He Defended Himself—Confederation Fight.

"I shall depend upon the sober second thought of my countrymen to come right at last, and do me justice, and I hope that justice will be done me by-and-by," said Joseph Howe. After the neglect of 30 years, the province which he loved so well is about to erect an enduring monument to his memory. Nova Scotia, boastful that she has been the birthplace of more great men than any other province, has proved singularly callous to her famous son. Worshiping him at first, some men turned their backs on him, and heard his name with hisses. The act which would be considered by Canadians to-day the wisest in the career of Howe was the sin which his enemies could not forgive. Howe opposed Confederation, therefore Canadians are unmindful of his claims upon their respect and honor; Howe accepted Confederation, so a faction in Nova Scotia hated him.

Greatest Canadian Orator.

Joseph Howe was undoubtedly one of the finest characters this country has produced. As an orator the only man who can be compared with him is D'Arcy McGee, and the Irishman was not a Canadian in the sense that Howe was. Mr. Joseph Pope says of him in his "Life of Sir John Macdonald," he was incomparably the greatest orator that British North America has produced. The most eloquent appeal ever made by a Canadian was that of Joseph Howe in Detroit at the International Commercial Convention. On that occasion Howe's oratory was such that the United States delegates would have decided in favor of the continuance of the Reciprocity Treaty had the vote been taken on that day. And yet in this magnificent oration Howe repudiated annexation, flung it back in the faces of the Americans who yet hung spellbound on his words. Despite the fact that he was an Imperialist of the Imperialists, Howe was probably more popular in New England than in any part of Canada outside his native province. No man of the day was in greater demand at large gatherings in the Eastern States. He did not think of the most pleasant things he could say to Americans, and his Boston speeches might have been delivered in Halifax. No characteristic of Joseph Howe's was more marked than his fearlessness. The people of the United States have never failed to love and respect this quality. Undazzled by the glare of party politics, they formed a truer estimate of the great Canadian than the mass of his own countrymen.

Howe, the Printer's "Devil."

"In the time of persecution," as one of his biographers rather vaguely expresses it, four Howes left England and settled in the United States. Their descendants spread from Maine to California, and numbered not fewer than a thousand at the time of the American Revolution. Only one of them, Joseph's father, chose the King's side, and he was forced to seek a new home in Nova Scotia. A courtly, educated gentleman, his worth was appreciated, and he was everywhere respected. Never an active politician, he yet was honored by those who were, and was made King's Printer and Postmaster-General of Nova Scotia. His son Joseph was born in 1803, and received little regular education. At the age of 13 he went into the office of The Halifax Gazette as printer's "devil." For 11 years he set type, wrote poems and sketches, and mastered the somewhat varied accomplishments of a journalist of the time. In 1827 he entered into partnership in another newspaper, but sold out his share within the year, and secured The Nova Scotian for $5,250. He reported the debates in the Local Assembly himself, traveled about forming agencies, and indulging his love for verse. The famous "Sam Slick" is said to have been one of his contributors at the time.

A Famous Libel Suit.

Until 1835 Howe never spoke in public. A libel suit was brought against him in that year, and arrayed for the prosecution was able legal talent. Howe defended himself, and it took the jury ten minutes to acquit him. At this time there was not an incorporated city in Canada. Towns were governed by magistrates appointed by the Crown, and in no sense responsible to the people. Howe's attack on the system landed him in prison, and brought against him the charge of libel. His speech destroyed the reign of the magistrates, inaugurated responsible Government in the Lower Provinces, and established the freedom of the press. The year 1835 also saw Howe's entry to public life. His official record may be briefly summarized. Until 1863 he was a member of the Nova Scotia Assembly almost continuously. Twice he was Premier. In 1863 he was appointed Fisheries Commissioner; in 1867 he was elected to the House of Commons. For 11 months he was President of the Privy Council, resigning to accept at the hands of Sir John Macdonald the Secretaryship of State. In 1872 he was made Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, an office he held but a few months, when his death occurred.

The Confederation Issue.

From the fact that Confederation was the most important event in Canada's history, there is a tendency to judge public men who touched the great question by their attitude toward it. In the beginning Howe opposed it. The Nova Scotia House, while he was in Opposition, pledged the province to the noble vision, without appealing to the country. In the election of 1867, based on the Confederation issue, the Province of Nova Scotia returned only two members out of 38 in favor of it. Secession was the cry, and Howe was its mouthpiece. The strife was bitter. The extremists called for armed rebellion, and were rebuked by Howe in a notable passage: "I hope to live and die for Nova Scotia, and must be careful for her reputation and my own. In all the struggles of the past for the elevation and advancement of our country, it has been my boast that no life was lost nor a pane of glass broken. I owe it to the living that this policy shall not be abandoned. I owe it to the dead who in honor and sobriety fought by my side that in the autumnal season of my life I shall not go mad and turn our country to a shambles."

Despised by Countrymen.

Every constitutional means that could be used to free Nova Scotia from Canada was seized on by Howe. He went to England and argued his case with all his eloquence before the British Parliament. He was supported by John Bright, but was defeated. Seeing that his cause was lost, Howe accepted the inevitable, and when the original terms upon which Nova Scotia was taken into the Dominion were changed in the interests of that province, Howe advised their acceptance. His death, before the wisdom of Confederation was apparent to all, robbed his declining years of the tribute which was their due. So he appealed to posterity to judge him. Posterity has answered, says The Mail and Empire.

Doan's Kidney Pills

FINALLY MADE A COMPLETE CURE.

Mr. Jacob Jamieson, Jamieson Bros., the well-known Contractors and Builders, Welland, Ont., tells of how he was cured: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with kidney trouble which increased in severity the last five years. My most serious attack was four years ago, when I was completely incapacitated. I had terrible pains across my back, floating specks before my eyes and was in almost constant torment. I could not sit or stand with ease and was a wreck in health, having no appetite and lost greatly in flesh. I had taken medicine from five different doctors and also numerous other preparations to no purpose. I finally began to take Doan's Kidney Pills and before I had taken five boxes the trouble left me and I now feel better than I have for twenty years. Those who know me know how I was afflicted and say it is almost impossible to believe that I have been cured, yet they know it is so. I have passed the meridian of life but I feel that I have taken on the rosy hue of boyhood."

A Neglected Branch.

There is not a more neglected branch of education in Canada than that of reading aloud. Go into our schools, churches and colleges, and listen for an hour to anyone trying to grasp the mysteries of pronunciation, intonation and phrasing, and see how absolutely lacking the mass of our people are in that dramatic power which makes the reader assume the very intonation of the author. Flat, dull, unmusical and not too intelligent, is the usual rendering of the most beautiful bits of English literature. As for the small children in the public schools, their reading is something too terrible to listen to.—Lally Barnard, in The Globe.

Famous Canadian Punster.

Mr. G. G. Pursey writes from Davisville as follows:

Many readers of The Globe will remember Sam. M. Jones, late resident of Toronto (now in Philadelphia) as Prince of Punsters. On one occasion, after listening to a lecture in Toronto, delivered by Dr. Richardson of the Veterinary College, on the mica mines of Sudbury, the irrepressible Sam. propounded this triple pun:

"Wasn't Micah (mica) one of the minor (miner) prophets (profits)?"

For my part, I have never seen this pun excelled, and I think it deserves a place among the first, even if it does not take first place, in the English language.

COUGHED FOR YEARS.

"For four years I had a severe cough. I was so weak and exhausted from coughing that I was unable to attend to my business. Two bottles of Angier's Petroleum Emulsion cured my cough and benefitted me in every way."—A. Milligan, Toronto, Canada. 3a

Melba's Love of Home.

Among the few famous men and women of the present day who can claim as their birthplace the new commonwealth under the Southern Cross, there is none, perhaps, quite so illustrious as Mme. Melba, whose wonderful voice has won for her a large place in the affectionate interest of the music-loving world. The prima donna has recently been visiting the scenes of her childhood, and we learn from an interview in The Melbourne Leader that her homecoming was a specially happy one, and that the joyfulness of the diva was sincerely expressed. "I have come," she said, "to see my dear old father, my old friends and my old home." "You will go to see Steel's flat?" She was asked. "You bet I will," she replied gayly, "and I am going to ride a horse bareback if I can get one." She laughingly added: "Yes, I am going to live in my old home, no matter who is there, whether they ask me to stay or not." Mme. Melba proudly relates, in telling her triumphs, that she has sung before all the royalties of Europe, excepting those of Greece and Spain.

The "Widow" in Parliament.

"If the hon. gentleman persists in his remarks," said the member pestered beyond further endurance in a verbal onslaught, "I shall have to tell the House all about the widow."

The House pricked up its ears. Here was the very verge of a scandal. The member in question, bristling with virtuous indignation, rose in his seat.

"I defy the hon. gentleman," he said with heat. "Let him go ahead and tell about the widow."

Now, the hon. gentleman knew nothing of any widow. It was just an insinuation. But he wasn't going to confess the Grecian tactics, so he simply said: "Which widow?"

And the laugh that followed drowned the protests as it heightened the blushes of the victim.

NIAGARA FALLS.

Is Lord Kelvin's Prediction Near Through Man's Use of the Water?

Above the roar of Niagara Falls some people think they can hear the great cataract's knell being rung by science. Lord Kelvin's prediction that the falls in the course of time will disappear is, they apprehend, near fulfilment. Man has already begun to turn to account some of the tremendous energies of that leap of waters. Immense power works are in operation on the New York bank of the Niagara, and three companies are preparing for the development of electricity on a prodigious scale on the Ontario side. Is this conversion of hydraulic into electrical power likely to continue until the water shall be wholly diverted from its course over the falls into penstocks carrying it into power-houses at the foot of the bluff? Some alarm on this point has recently been expressed in New York State by persons who think that the great scenic features of nature should be conserved, even though demands of science and industry have to be denied. The protests that have been made against the mechanizing of the falls are the subject of a special news article and an editorial in The New York Tribune of Sunday. Artists, photographers, lovers of natural scenery, power interests, and persons concerned in the tourist traffic were interviewed, and a considerable volume of opinion was found inclined to the view that the upper waters will in a comparatively short time be conducted to the lower level through power canals and tunnels. By several practical men, however, the opinion was expressed that the falls would remain, notwithstanding any drain kept up on power account. It is pointed out that the river is higher above the falls than at them, and that consequently the tapping of the stream at points slightly above the brink of the cataract will only accelerate the movement of the stream. That acceleration is not likely to be brought at such a rate as to cause any contraction of the great storage basin, Lake Erie. Until that mill pond declines markedly from its present volume there is little danger of power development greatly checking the impetuosity of the falls. Lake Erie is a shallow reservoir. Its bottom is not far below the level of its outlet, so that the upper Niagara is reasonably certain of continuing to flow as strongly as ever, even though half a dozen power vents are opened for it at the falls. It is complained that the developments on the Canadian side are marring the scenery, because the buildings are unsightly. That complaint is unfounded. The fact that all the contracts for power development have been made with the Queen Victoria Park Commissioners is in itself a guarantee that the natural grandeur and beauty of the spot will be protected. Aesthetic considerations have been taken into account in all the agreements. Unsightly buildings are not likely to be seen on our side if the commissioners continue the present policy of fostering the natural scenery.

HALF A MAN.

When a man is sick and can only work half the time he is practically half a man. It requires his whole physical energy to do half a man's work.

In general the weak run down condition which cuts the strength and energy in half is due to disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. You could not expect a half starved man to work more than half the time. The condition of the man with weak stomach is that of the half starved man. He is weak through lack of nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect nutrition of the body and so restores the strength.

"I had stomach trouble from birth," writes Mr. Willis Seaman, of Washingtonville, Orange Co., N. Y., "and suffered with it more or less as I grew up. At the age of 25 I was broken down with dyspepsia. My suffering was terrible. Could not eat without distress. Could only eat a few certain things and was not able to work half the time. Every thing I tried only gave me temporary relief. My wife finally persuaded me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I then felt so well that I stopped taking medicine. Several months have passed and I can do the hardest kind of work, can eat anything that is set before me and enjoy it. I am 57 years old and this is the first time I have ever been well."

DRS. KENNEDY & KERGAN

The Leading Specialists of America. 25 Years in Detroit. Bank Security.

Nine out of every ten men have been guilty of transgression against nature in their youth. Nature never excuses, no matter how young, thoughtless or ignorant he may be. The punishment and suffering corresponds with the crime. The only escape from its ruinous results is proper scientific treatment to counteract its effects.

The DRAINS, either by nightly losses, or secretly through the urine, must be stopped—the NERVES must be built up and invigorated, the blood must be purified, the SEXUAL ORGANS must be vitalized and developed, the BRAIN must be nourished. Our New Method Treatment provides all these requirements. Under its influence the brain becomes active; the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers disappear; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. The following despatches have been received by E. M. Poussett & Co.:—

New York, April 23, 10.50 a.m.—There is good strong opening with buying well distributed; a fairly large amount handled by commission houses. Most traders have, however, inclined to secure profits, and the selling is supplying the demand. Banks have gained about $2,155,000 since Friday.

M. & M.

10.56—Traders pounding the stock market generally now.

M. & M.

11.40 a.m.—Traders continue principal sellers of stocks. It is a general profit-taking movement and there is disappointment at absence of outside business and indifference of London. Trunk lines and general list showing good buying in St. P., U.P. and Readings. There has been good realizing in M.O.P., Man., Sugar, Penna. and S.P. Call money is 2 per cent. Sales first hour 200,000. We think selling by the traders will soon run its course and we will have a better market this afternoon.

M. & M.

New York, April 23, 11.30 a.m.—Today's opening showed fair advances over Tuesday's close, following London. First 30 minutes was marked by an advancing tendency. Room traders took advantage of the better prices to realize, causing a moderate recession to about opening prices at 11 o'clock. Atchison, R.I. and a few others appear to be favourites of the conservative element. Prospects of a continuation of present prosperity for a long time to come. The market has had an average rise of 8 points, without any serious set back, although a recession of a point or two would not be out of the way and would go a long way towards making a healthy market.

Chicago.—Weather map shows ideal conditions prevailing in the west and north-west; clear and warmer; light showers in the north-west.

ANOTHER NEW CONCERN FOR PETERBOROUGH.

The Colonial Weaving Company to Commence Operations.

The Colonial Weaving Company, which was organized some time ago, held a meeting in Peterborough yesterday, and decided to proceed with all possible despatch, with the equipping of a factory, and the operation of the concern. It is understood that the company will locate in the premises formerly occupied by the Peterborough Underwear Company. It has not been given out just how many hands the new company will employ, but there is reason to believe that it will be a valuable addition to Peterborough's manufacturing institutions. The company proposes to manufacture all kinds of silk, linen and cotton labels, badges, ribbons, belts and ornamental drapings. The capital of the company is $60,000, divided into 2,400 shares of $25 each. Amongst the shareholders of the company are Messrs. J. D. King, vice-president of the J. D. King Company, Limited, Jas. Kendry, M. P., F. J. Jameson, John Nugent, A. H. Stratton and J. J. English, Hastings.

The factory will be in full operation by the 1st day of June.

—Yesterday the Examiner inadvertently mentioned that it was Washington's Birthday. The date was only a month out—his birthday was March 22nd. Canadians naturally have a high regard for George Washington, as a good man — gone wrong—and may be pardoned if inadvertently an error in the date of his birthday is made. Our Yankee friends have good reason for venerating his memory—and keeping the Republic he founded up to the mark he set.

AN EXAMINATION FOR NON-COMMISSIONED RANK

Was Held Last Night—Will be Concluded Tuesday.

Last night an examination of men qualifying for non-commissioned rank took place, the examiners being, Major Stevenson, Capt. L. M. Hayes and Capt. Walker, Adjutant of the Peterborough Rangers. The class has been under the instruction of Sergt.-Major Brittain, and the examination proved most satisfactory, showing that great attention has been given throughout. The examination last night consisted of squad and company drill and some extended order, but owing to the strictness of the examining officers was not concluded, but it is expected will be next Tuesday night when rifle and firing exercises will be taken up. The class was composed of the following, Sergts. Giles, Craig, Hartley, D. Manley, B. Ayers, Colour-Sgt. Henderson, Corps. H. Manley, Abbott and Roseborough, and Ptes. Staunton and Lathangue. Lieut. J. A. Wilson and Lieut. W. H. Smith also attended the class before taking out commissions.

At the conclusion of the examination the class presented their Sergt.-Instructor with a handsome briar pipe in a case.

BEAUTY SPOT OR DUMPING GROUND?

Shall Aesthetic Taste or Slatternly Convenience Prevail.

What a Beauty Spot the Murray Street Terminus of Stewart Street Could be Made.

In a talk with a prominent member of the local Horticultural Society, the following statement was made: "On the hill immediately west of the Protestant Home a most delightful view is obtained. It is a public street, but it is very noticeable that by some strange oversight there stands a disgraceful old shed. People seemingly take a delight in dumping all old refuse, such as wall paper and rubbish of all kinds, the outcome of an annual spring cleaning, over their respective walls. Instead of being a common dumping ground this hillside should be covered with beautiful trees. The eyes of visitors travelling by the Grand Trunk train, which sweeps around the base of the hill, instead of seeing what might be a very pretty spot, view this dumping ground, and turn away in disgust. The town authorities should take the trouble to have the place cleaned up and beautified. With two or three seats, this spot would make a most charming resting place when the summer sun with all its force, strikes the back of the pedestrian. There is no reason why little resting places like this should be littered with all the rubbish of the adjacent yards. Furthermore it is quite time that there should be a stop put to this kind of thing in a town so capable of being made beautiful."

It is pleasing to note that at least one member of the Horticultural Society takes an interest in making the town not only beautiful for the benefit of the residents but also attractive to strangers.

Come celebrate St. George's Day At St. Andrew's to-night, Thursday, April 23rd. Owen A. Smiley, Canada's Entertainer Only one price for adults, 25 cents.

CORDAGE COMPANY'S NEW MANAGER.

The Board of Directors Have Made an Excellent Selection.

It will be interesting to know that The Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Co. have engaged the services of Mr. Alexander Sykes as manager. Mr. Sykes is an Englishman by birth and is thirty-eight years of age, married and has been in the cordage business since 1886, during which time he has been in the employ of Messrs. Waterbury & Co., Samuel Cupples W.W. Co., The Western Twine Co. and the Standard Rope and Twine Company. He is now and has been for several years manager and agent of the Cincinnati and Indianapolis branches of the Standard Rope and Twine Company and the Union Selling Company for the states of Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Mr. Sykes comes to Peterborough very highly recommended by leading bankers and merchants in Indianapolis and other places. The shareholders of the company are to be congratulated upon securing the services of an industrious, enterprising and experienced cordage manufacturer to take the management of their extensive works.

Mr. Sykes was in Peterborough yesterday and made a thorough inspection of the Cordage works. He was particularly pleased with the convenient arrangement of the buildings and the excellent equipment of the factory. He claims that this Company has advantages over any cordage works in the United States on account of its having such cheap electric power.

Mr. Sykes returned to Indianapolis to wind up his affairs and to move over with his family at an early date.

The Belleville City Council Will Take Action.

The city council of Belleville held a special meeting on Wednesday evening for the purpose of taking some action regarding the disposal of the street railway rails.

The Cement Company had offered $16 a ton for the rails, which the Council estimated would reach the sum of $1,-700. Treasurer Price, who was present, in answer to a question, said he had at one time offered $1,800 for them.

It was finally decided to defer action in the matter for a few days.

GAMEY CHARGES INVESTIGATION.

Frank Sullivan Swears That Gamey Concocted a "Plot"

TO HOLD UP GOVERNMENT

Swears That the Member for Manitoulin Offered Him $2,000

TO CORROBORATE GAMEY'S STORY

Gives Interesting Details as to Timber Deals Leading Up—Declares He Did Not See Mr. Stratton on 10th or 11th Sept—He Never Gave or Shared Money With Gamey.

Toronto, April 23. — There was the biggest crowd yet in the court room when the Gamey investigation opened to-day. They evidently expected to hear something sensational about Mr. Gamey's trip to Buffalo, but Mr. Gamey was not in court, nor was there the slightest reference to his absence nor to the incidents of Saturday last.

The counsel for the prosecution, however, gave the spectators a good substitute in the way of sensation by calling Frank Sullivan as a witness. When Mr. Blake asked that Sullivan be called there was a general expression of surprise. Sullivan's story, which he has hitherto kept strictly from the public, is vastly different from Mr. Gamey's. He denies that he ever received any money, or ever gave any money to Mr. Gamey. He said that Gamey came to him the day before the House opened and discussed the details of a plan by which they were to hold up the Government. Gamey agreed to give Sullivan $2,000 if he would back him up in his story, and Sullivan told him to go ahead and get his money. Then it was, too, that Gamey had explained to him that he was going to say that he got $3,000 in September last, and $1,000 in January. They spent forty minutes discussing the plan at the Parliament buildings, and Mr. Gamey asked him to come down to the Crossin piano factory the next night.

Sullivan swears that he and his father had an application in for McGregor Island, and that they had offered Gamey $5,000 and at another time a quarter interest in the island, if he would endorse their application. They had received $5,000 from Thos. Niban, for this purpose, but the deal had not gone through. Sullivan said that he had gone with Gamey to call on Mr. Stratton only once.

There was another discussion about the pronouncation of Mr. Gamey's name. Sullivan persisted in calling it Gammy, and Mr. Blake objected. Judge Falconbridge said that everybody from Manitoulin called it Gammy—even his own brother—and suggested that the witnesses be allowed to pronounce it that way if they wanted.

George B. Wilson, father-in-law of Frank Sullivan, who was brought from Rochester to give evidence, after some leading up testimony, flatly denied that he had stated at Newmarket that Frank Sullivan had told him Mr. Stratton had paid money to Mr. Gamey, and that Mr. Sullivan had got half. Frank Sullivan never mentioned money to witness nor the name of Mr. Stratton nor Gamey. Witness said that he did not know that there was such a man as Stratton till he saw his name in the papers. To Mr. Johnston witness said that he had no idea that he would be called as a witness, or he would not have gone to Rochester on a visit.

FRANK SULLIVAN CALLED.

The humdrum proceedings were greatly enlivened when Mr. McPherson said: "Call Frank Sullivan," and there was a great craning of necks as the now famous Frank, dapper and smooth, stepped briskly to the witness box. His examination was at once began by Mr. Blake.

Q.—What is your occupation, Mr. Sullivan? A.—I am a contractor. I have been working as a contractor all my working days.

Q.—You have been in the employ of the Ontario Government? A. — I was in the employ of the Government—first, I think it was for the session—of '97. I am not positive; I was just here for the session, then I was on again for another session two years ago, and then a year ago last October I was employed to do some work in Mr. Edward's office.

Q.—What was the nature of your earlier employment with the Government? A.—As sessional clerk in the office of Mr. Kent, who looks after the private bills coming before the House. I did some typewriting, and attending to different private bills.

Q.—And later? A. —I was then put in Mr. Wheeler's office for a couple of weeks, and then I went to Mr. Edward's office. He wanted some one to do bookkeeping and accounting work, and had canvassed the buildings to get some one, and as I was satisfactory, I was taken in there, and had plenty of work.

Q.—What office is that? A.—Public works office. Mr. Edwards is secretary and Mr. J. P. Edwards accountant; and I was his assistant.

Q.—How long was your first employ with them? A.—I went there a year ago last October, and remained there until Christmas time, when I took a trip away for a short time. When I came back I remained there until that explosion in the House, when I resigned.

UPS AND DOWNS.

Q.—You went up with the explosion? A.—Yes, but I came down again.

Q.—When Mr. Edwards was out of the office you tried to perform his duties as accountant? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where is your bank account, Mr. Sullivan? A.—I have no bank account except a small balance in the Bank of Hamilton, which I put there two or three years ago.

Q.—Where do you keep your present bank account? A.—I have none except that small balance.

Q.—Where do you keep any money you have? A.—In my pocket.

Q.—Always? A.—Yes, always.

Q.—You never had an account at the Ontario Bank, the Traders', or the Bank of Commerce? A.—Never.

Q.—No deposit account or any balance in any of these banks? A. —Never.

Q.—Did you pay a visit to Newmarket in this month of April? A.—I did. I don't know the day.

Q.—Do you keep a diary? A.—No, I do not.

Q.—Has Mrs. Sullivan, your wife, a bank account? A.—No, I give her what money she requires.

Q.—Do you remember writing a letter to Mr. Gamey on the 8th September? A.—I remember writing a letter in September—three or four of them.

Q.—Can you typewrite yourself? A.—Yes, I can and do.

Q.—You do write letters on a typewriter? A.—Yes, I do.

Q.—Is this the letter you wrote to Mr. Gamey (exhibit 4)? A.—Yes, to the best of my recollection that is the letter.

Q.—You have no doubt that that was written by you? Why didn't you sign it? A.—Well, at that time I hadn't written very many letters on the typewriter, and when I wrote that—

Mr. Blake.—Now, this has all to be taken down, and to be paid for, and if you insist on answering at a great length I think you will have to pay part of the cost.

Sullivan—I have no reason for not signing the letter.

WANTED A TIMBER DEAL.

Mr. Blake questioned Mr. Sullivan about the deals referred to in the Sullivan letter that was unsigned. Sullivan said he and Gamey wanted to get some deals through. The examination continued as follows:

Q.—Did the deal go through? A.—No, it did not go through.

Q.—What was the deal? A.— The getting of McGregor Island was the deal.

Q.—What was the meaning of the expression "He will pay all expenses and make it worth your while"? A.—Well, I had an arrangement with Mr. Gamey regarding McGregor Island.

Q.—What other deal was there under discussion? A.—There was the Clemow deal.

Q.—How was that to be worked out? A.—Mr. Gamey was to see about the terms.

Q.—Did you keep a copy of the letter? A.—No, we talked the matter over in September, and this letter was merely a continuation of that conversation.

Q.—You had read the papers containing Mr. Gamey's account of these incidents? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the difficulty in the Clemow deal? A.—Gamey didn't get the required information regarding the timber on the limit, and so on. It dragged along, and we decided to let it go until the session.

Q.—That was a long time. A. — We didn't know then it was going to be a long time.

Q.—You thought it would be January anyway before the House met? A.—Well, there was rumours then that the House might meet earlier.

Q.—What was Gamey to do in connection with the Clemow deal? A. —He was to see Clemow, see what the timber was worth, and get all the papers and information necessary.

Q.—Where does Clemow live? A.—In Sudbury, I think.

Q.—Did Gamey see Clemow? A.—I think he did.

Q.—Did you expect to get this deal through? A.—Well, I expected to got it under way. I can't say that I expected to get it completed.

Q.—Did you ever write Gamey again? A.—Yes.

Q.—What date? A.—I couldn't say.

Q.—Did it happen in the exhibits? A.—No.

Q.—Did you keep a copy? A.—No.

Q.—Mr. Gamey mentions Stratton in connection with the first deal, you know that? A.—Yes.

Q.—And the other deal was that he should go to Algoma and the Soo? A.—Yes.

Q.—And this was the real meaning of the deals mentioned? A.—Oh, no.

Q.—I mean that is what he said? A.—That's all right; he may say that; I don't.

Q.—Did you arrange to meet him at the Soo? A.—No.

At this point Justice Falconbridge interrupted to ask Mr. DuVernet if he was a counsel in the case. He was sitting at the counsel's table. Mr. Du Vernet answered "Not just now."

Mr. Blake continued:

WALKER HOUSE MEETING.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Gamey around the 9th or 10th of August? A.—Yes.

Q.—Tell us the when and the where? A.—I saw him at the Walker House on the 9th of August.

Q.—Did you live at the Walker House? A.—No, I lived on Sherbourne street.

Q.—Had you lived at the Walker House? A.—I lived there about a year ago.

Q.—Why did you go to the Walker House on the 9th? A.—To see my father, and to get any mail that there might be for us if he was not there.

Q.—Why do you say "us"? A.—Many of my business letters came to the Walker House.

Q.—And your father's letters always went there? A.—Yes.

Q.—For how long? A.—For four or five years.

Q.—Did you know that Mr. Gamey was there? A.—I can't say that I did.

Q.—Think that over? A.—I may have known; I am not positive.

Q.—Were you expecting him down? A.—I can't say I was.

WANTED TO MEET MINISTERS.

Q.—What did you talk about? A. —Well, we talked about the Clemow deal. He talked about wanting to be taken up to the Parliament buildings, and wanted to be introduced to some of the Ministers or members of Parliament.

Q.—Did you introduce him to the Minister in your department? A.—No, I am not acquainted with him.

Q.—Whom did you know best of the Ministers? A.—I knew Hon. J. R. Stratton best.

Q.—How did you know him better than Mr. Latchford? A.—I met Mr. Stratton a number of years ago at the Soo first, I think. I have seen him a number of times since, always generally through the sessions.

Q.—Did you go to the House with Mr. Gamey? A.—No, I made arrangements to meet him there.

Q.—When did you see Mr. Stratton about meeting Mr. Gamey? A. —After I met Mr. Gamey in the buildings I left him in the hall and went in to see Mr. Stratton, and told him that Mr. Gamey wished to be introduced.

Q.—Did Mr. Gamey appear to be anxious about his protest? A.—He asked me to ask my father to see if I could find out what evidence they had against him. He said that he had met my father at Allandale. He also said that he had learned on the Island that they were pressing him pretty hard. He said that he had made the trip from Manitoulin just for the purpose of finding out something about his protest. He wanted to get rid of it.

Q.—Was any letter produced at that interview? A.—No.

Q.—Are you positive? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was your interview in the afternoon or forenoon? A.—I couldn't say.

INTRODUCED GAMEY TO STRATTON.

Q.—I should like you to let me know if the morning he saw you was the morning he went up? A.—I cannot tell..

Q.—You cannot tell whether he went up immediately after being introduced? A.—No.

Q.—You had gone up and had seen Mr. Stratton, and had some conversation? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you went up and brought Mr. Gamey in? A.—Yes, I introduced Mr. Gamey to Mr. Stratton.

Q.—Did you withdraw? A.—No, I took a chair a short distance from the desk.

Q.—You sided in the conference? A.—No.

Q.—Why did you remain? A.—I remained merely to escort him home.

Q.—Was it as dangerous an office as that? A.—No, I had no reason.

Q.—No reason to safeguard him? A.—No reason except that given.

Q.—What took place? A.—Mr Stratton shook hands with Mr. Gamey and said that he was glad to see him and took out some cigars and passed them around.

Q.—Do you smoke? A.—No.

Q.—Just put them in your pocket? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the conversation? A. —General conversation.

Q.—Was the protest mentioned by Mr. Stratton? A.—No.

Q.—Did Mr. Gamey mention it? A. —No.

Q.—Why, that was troubling him? A.—No, it was in August that he came down with all his troubles.

Q.—What about these troubles? A. —I don't know anything about them.

Q.—You read the papers? A. — Oh, yes I know in that way.

ELECTED TO SUPPORT ROSS.

Q.—What else was discussed? A. —Mr. Gamey talked of his position in the House and said that he had been elected to support the Government in power.

Q.—Was that the reason his election had been protested by the Government? A.—I don't know anything about it.

Q.—Unusual to protest a supporter of the Government? A.—I should think so.

Q.—What then? A.—When Mr. Gamey said that he was elected to support the Government in power, Mr. Stratton and I laughed at it.

Q.—Why not, everyone knew it was a straight election between Liberal and Conservative? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, after Mr. Stratton's laugh what next took place? A.—Gamey spoke something about after being elected that they should protest him.

Chief Justice Falconbridge — This interview is the 9th of September?

Mr. Blake.—Yes, my lord.

Mr. Blake—What did Mr Stratton say to that? A.—I had a paper in my hand—I was looking at it, and I don't remember.

Q.—Well, you remember something more? A.—I think Mr. Gamey said something about seeing Mr. Grant about his protest.

Q.—Was this in August? A.—This was the September interview in Mr. Stratton's office.

Q.—Was it in August that it was suggested that Mr. Stratton should be seen? A.—O, that was my own.

Q.—Nothing said about it later at that interview? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Quite sure? A.—Reasonably sure.

Q.—How is your memory, Mr. Sullivan? A.—I think it is very good.

Q.—Possibly you think everything about yourself is very good? A.—I do.

Q.—Now you remember the parting on that interview, did they agree to meet again? Was it said to see Mr. Grant, or what? A.—My recollection is Mr. Stratton said see Mr. Grant, and Mr. Gamey did not want to see Mr. Grant.

Q.—Did Mr. Stratton say "see Mr. Grant"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was there any reason to see Mr. Grant? A.—Mr. Grant had charge of the protests.

Q.—What good would it do to see Mr. Grant? He was acting only for the Government. Why should he see him? A.—Why he said he was going to support the Government.

TO MR. AYLESWORTH.

Q. — Mr. Grant would not take instructions from Mr. Gamey, would he? A.—I don't know, but Mr. Gamey said he would not go.

Q.—What then? A.—Mr. Stratton said to go and see Mr. Aylesworth.

Q.—You are sure? A.—Yes.

Q.—That took place on Tuesday, the 9th? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did Gamey answer to the proposal of Stratton? A.—He said all right, he would go and see Aylesworth.

Q.—You remained there all the time? A.—Yes, I was looking at my paper.

Q. —The conversation? A. — I don't think anything of interest escaped me.

Q.—You had your eyes on the paper and your ears on the conversation? A.—Yes.

Q.—Your memory is so good that you are sure nothing was said about a letter? A.—Yes.

Q.—Well, you left together? A.—Yes.

Q.—You went out and what happened then? A.—Outside, Gamey asked me if I would go with him to Mr. Aylesworth's office next day. I said I would.

Witness went on to testify that he often called at the Walker House to see his father on the sub-contracting business they were interested in. His father was once a forest ranger under the Government. The examination continued:—

Q.—Can you remember anything further on the 9th? A.—No, I arranged to meet Gamey next day.

Q.—Nothing else? A. — I think Gamey suggested something to Mr. Stratton about an appointment. Mr. Stratton said it was not in his department and that he would refer it to the department.

Q.—Appointment with Aylesworth? A.—No, I think it was the appointment of Thomas Flesher as justice of the peace.

Q.—Your memory is so good that you remember this? A.—Yes.

Q.—To what department was that appointment to be referred? A. — Attorney-General's, I should think.

Q.—On the next day where did you see Gamey? A.—Corner of King and Yonge street?

Q.—By appointment? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you know where you were going? A.—Mr. Gamey had asked me the day before if I would go with him to Aylesworth's next day, and I said yes.

Q.—In pursuance of this you did meet Gamey, and did go? A.—Yes, to Mr. Aylesworth's office.

Q.—When was that? A. —About fifteen minutes or half an hour after o'clock on Wednesday, September 10.

Q.—Up to that time had you heard anything of a letter? A.—No.

Q.—Why did you go? A. —Gamey said it was to talk about the protest.

Q.—When you went there was Mr. Aylesworth there? A.—No.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I walked to 'phone and walked across to the 'phone, under a stairway. I saw Gamey behind me. I 'phoned my wife from there.

Q.—What next? A. — Returning,

THE GAMEY CHARGES INVESTIGATION.

Gamey was ahead of me, Mr. Aylesworth was at his desk. He must have been between Gamey and me as we entered.

Q.—What took place? A.—I introduced Gamey and myself.

Q.—What did Gamey want? A.—He wanted Mr. Aylesworth to act for him.

Q.—What did Mr. Aylesworth say? A.—He said he couldn't do that. He had been retained by the Government, and that Gamey was a Conservative. Gamey said he was going to support the Government." "Is that so?" said Mr. Aylesworth, "Yes," replied Gamey, "I am going to support the Government." "Then," said Mr. Aylesworth, "I would like to have something to show your good faith. Read that letter, and sign it, if you are in full accord."

Q.—What did Mr. Aylesworth say would happen to the petition? A.—He didn't say.

Q.—If he were willing to sign the letter, what then? A.—There was no inducement.

Q.—But you contradict Mr. Aylesworth? A.—No, I do not. If Mr. Aylesworth said a thing, I guess it did happen.

Q.—I want to test your recollection further. What was to become of the petition? A.—I don't know anything about it.

Q.—Your mind is a blank as to that? A.—I did not pay any attention.

Q.—For what purpose were you there? A.—Just to go down with Gamey. He did not know where Aylesworth's office was.

Q.—You did not follow what happened? A.—No.

In response to Chancellor Boyd, Mr. Blake read from Mr. Aylesworth's examination: "If you are willing to sign the letter, there is no reason why I should not act for you," referring to Mr. Aylesworth's consent to act for Gamey.

Frank Sullivan.—I don't know anything as to that. My recollection is the way I have put it.

Mr. Blake.—Was it before that that Mr. Gamey said he would support the Government? A.—Yes, before that. When Mr. Aylesworth said: "I cannot act for you as I am retained by the Liberal party."

Q.—Did Mr. Aylesworth seem surprised? A.—I can't say that.

Q.—Can you recollect anything more that took place? What became of the letter? A.—Mr. Gamey took the letter and read it carefully, following the lines with a pencil, laid it on the desk, signed his name, and wrote something on the top of it.

Q.—Then what became of the letter? A.—Mr. Aylesworth said he would keep the letter. Gamey hesitated. Mr. Aylesworth said: "I'll keep it. It will be all right in our vault." Mr. Gamey still hesitated, and Mr. Aylesworth shoved the letter over to him.

Q.—Was there anything else? A.—Mr. Gamey hesitated again and said: "I'd like to borrow some money." Mr. Aylesworth asked how much. Mr. Gamey said he wanted to raise something on stock or chattels. I think he said stock. Mr. Aylesworth said he did not look after that in the office. He would have to get it from some one else. They also spoke about Manitoulin, but I did not catch that.

Q.—Then what happened? A.—Mr. Gamey put the letter in his inside pocket and went out of the office.

Q.—Did you say anything? A.—I may have said something about the letter being all right. I would not say.

GAMEY'S FRANK ADMISSION.

Q.—What next did you do? A.—We went out of the office and up King street to the Arcade, where the Grand Opera House is. We stepped inside. I do not think Gamey had spoken coming along King, but when we were in the Arcade Mr. Gamey said he thought he had made a fool of himself in Mr. Aylesworth's office. "How?" I asked. He said: "About the money." I told him I didn't think so, but he said again he had made a fool of himself.

Q.—What next? A.—I left him.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Stratton that afternoon? A.—No.

Q.—Was there anything more that day in connection with this matter? A.—Nothing that day.

Q.—Was there anything more between you and Gamey? A.—He wanted some money, and wanted to get ahead through to get it. He was short of money, owing to his election.

Q.—Did he say he needed money to fight his protest? A.—I would not say that he said that.

Q.—Did he say anything about the cost of the protest? A.—He did not say anything.

Q.—Did your father speak to you about the Manitoulin protest? A.—I don't think he did, except that father told me they had damaging evidence.

Q.—Did your father say Mr. Gamey had been speaking to him? A.—No, but I know he did, for Mr. Gamey brought me a message from father at Allandale.

Q.—Nothing further? A.—No.

LIGHT ON TIMBER DEAL.

Q.—What was the deal in August? A.—For McGregor Island. McGregor Island is an island in Georgian Bay, with timber limits in it. Father was applying for it, and when we heard Gamey was going to support the Government we thought it would be a good thing to have Mr. Gamey endorse it on certain conditions.

Q.—On what conditions? A.—He was to have one-fourth interest. He was to have $5,000 first as his share in the profits. George McCormick and other men were after it, and "got wise" to Gamey going to support the Government. Gamey came to us and said McCormack offered bigger inducements. Then we told him we would give him $5,000 and more if there was anything more in it. Mr. Gamey then said he would stick to us.

Q.—What was the advantage of Gamey's endorsement? A.—The island was in his constituency, and we thought it would be a good idea to have his endorsation. Dr. Beattie Nesbitt was in the deal with Geo. McCormick.

Q.—In the same deal? A.—They were after the same thing.

Q.—Not with you? A.—No. They were trying to get Mr. Gamey with them.

Q.—In whose name was this transaction carried out? A.—My father had applied under the name of Conlon Brothers of Little Current and Thorold.

Q.—Had the Conlons anything to do with the deal? A.—No, I don't think so, except that they were to have the first claim to the timber.

Q.—What price? A.—My father attended to that detail.

Q.—Why were they to get it? Because they were good Reformers? A.—I do not think there was anything in that.

Q.—They were just big lumbermen, and would be good dealers to handle it? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mr. Gamey, was to get $5,000 and one-fourth of anything more there was in it? A.—Yes. He first got $5,000.

Chancellor Boyd—For what was he to get it? A.—For his endorsation.

Q.—The second arrangement was to be $5,000, or a proportion, in addition to the $5,000? A.—He was to take a chance on what the amount would be; his share was to be a fourth; if a fourth would amount to $8,000 he would get $8,000, and if $4,000, he would get $4,000.

Q.—By the first arrangement he was to get $5,000 anyway, and a fourth of anything over that? A.—No, the first was a straight $5,000; then when he came back with this story of his he said that he had expected that there would be more than $5,000, when we would get a little the best of it. I said the agreement will be that you will take your fourth interest.

Q.—Was he only to do the work of endorsing your application? A.—No; he was to endorse the application, but he was also to assist us in every way he could.

The Chancellor—I would like to have this more clear. I don't understand it yet. The witness then went over the schemes again, and made them clear to Chancellor Boyd.

Sullivan further testified that it needed very little money to carry on their negotiations, and the examination went on as follows:

NOT AT MR. STRATTON'S OFFICE ON SEPT. 10TH OR 11TH.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Stratton in the afternoon or evening of the 10th September? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—Did you see him next day? A.—No.

Q.—When did you next see him after the 10th September? A.—I used to see him quite frequently around the halls; I never saw him after that in his office.

Q.—What report was made to him as to the result of the interview in Mr. Aylesworth's office? A. I don't know.

Q.—Did he never say anything to you about it? A.—Never; I don't think that Mr. Stratton ever knew that I had been down to Mr. Aylesworth's office.

Q.—You made no report? A.—No, I did not. The matter passed right out of my mind.

Q.—This interview in August, that you had with Gamey. What date in August was that? A.—There was a number of different days he was here. I went down to the Walker House quite often, and saw him there.

Q.—Was this first meeting in August the first occasion on which you talked about deals with Gamey? A.—No, I had had previous conversations with him. I had seen him at Sault Ste. Marie.

Q.—Had you no talk within the year with Gamey except this August? A.—I don't know that I had; we had talked various things over every time we met.

Q.—You hadn't had any deals? A.—No, I had not.

Q.—Do you remember that you saw him prior to August? A.—No, I do not remember.

Q.—Had you seen him within the year? A.—No, I don't say.

Q.—What was the beginning of that deal in August? Is that what you described as the McGregor Island deal? A.—That was not the first deal we considered. We considered first about Clapperton and Thetford Islands.

GAMEY NOT A BUMP ON A LOG.

Q.—Is that the very beginning? A.—There was a lot of conversation to lead up to this. I was waiting one day in the Walker House for my father to return from Orillia, where he had been looking at a wharf that was about to be built there.

Q.—Was that the occasion of his meeting Mr. Gamey at Allandale? A.—Yes, I think it was. Mr. Gamey came into the hotel there. I had not seen him since his election, so I congratulated him. He told me that father had told him to tell me that he would not be down until next day. He told me then that he wasn't going to sit for four years in Opposition, and be a "bump on a log," a mere voting machine; he was going to throw in his lot with the Government.

Q.—What did you say to that? A.—It struck me then as a good idea to interest him in the McGregor Island deal.

Q.—Did your father teach you politics? A.—I don't know that any person taught me politics.

NO RELIANCE ON GAMEY.

Q.—What next? A.—I asked my father what about Gamey supporting the Government, and told him about it, and he replied, "Oh, you can't go much on what Gamey says."

Q.—Your father didn't believe it? A.—Apparently.

In commenting on Mr. Gamey's opinion of him, the witness (Mr. Sullivan) said: "Gamey seemed to think that I could do anything or find anything out just for the asking."

Q.—He thought you were a kind of a wizard? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Gamey that your father had said there were several strong cases against him? A.—I told him that there was strong evidence against him, and that was all.

Sullivan then related a conversation when Mr. Gamey said that the Conservatives had given him very little support in the contest, and the only thing they did was to send in a French speaker, to whom he had to pay $250.

Q.—Tell me now the use you thought you would make of the Government? A.—I thought that it would be a good thing to have his support before it would be made public that he was going to support the Government.

Q.—Now begin with the first interview. When was anything first said about using Gamey or the like? A.—I spoke about the timber on Bedford or Clapperton Islands.

Q.—What was it? A.—We were applying to cut the cedar on the island, for cedar was selling at a big price then. I asked my father about it, and he told me there was nothing in it there, as people had been operating there off and on for some time.

Q.—What was the proposal Gamey gave? A.—I was to apply for the island and he was to help me.

Q.—What then? A.—We talked of McGregor Island, but we were at a loss to finance it.

Q.—You did not know how to utilize the bonanza of a willing member of Parliament? A.—That was the idea.

Q.—What then? A.—It occurred to me that as we had had a number of business transactions with Mr. Grant we would interview him, when he might suggest a lumberman who might be got into the deal.

Q.—What was the lumberman to do? A.—Well, you see Mr. Gamey wanted his money at once to wipe off some indebtedness, and if the lumberman came in he would have the money at once.

Q.—He wanted $5,000 down. A.—Yes.

Q.—You wanted the fourth man to advance some? A.—Yes, we wanted some one to go in who knew the value of the stuff.

Q.—Your father, by the way, is a Captain—military or naval? A.—Naval.

Q.—Then the arrangement was that each—yourself, Mr. Gamey, your father and the fourth man—were to receive a share? A.—Yes.

Q.—At first Mr. Gamey was to get $5,000? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now you say you arranged at first to get a lumberman in. Now how would you do this? A.—We were a little green then.

Q.—Don't say that you were green, Mr. Sullivan; surely not? A.—Well, we discovered our mistake as soon as we saw Mr. Grant at the Walker House.

THE GRANT INTERVIEW.

Then Mr. Sullivan related the story of the brief meeting of Mr. Grant, the witness and Mr. Gamey at the Walker House.

Q.—In this conversation, at this meeting, Mr. Grant said something about wanting to raise money? A.—Yes, Mr. Gamey replied, "We want to raise some money on a timber deal." Mr. Grant replied, "Have you got it in shape?" and Mr. Gamey said no. Mr. Grant then said, "Well, you get the proposition in shape, and if it is any good I will arrange to raise the five thousand for you."

Q.—You were very anxious that Mr Gamey should get his money? A.—No, but I knew that if the $5,000 was put in I would get my share.

Q.—But nothing could be carried out without Mr. Gamey supporting the Government? A.—Yes.

NEVER GOT RECEIPT FROM GAMEY.

Q.—By the way have you a receipt about you for $1,200? A.—No.

Q.—Not one that was given you by Mr. Gamey? A.—No.

Q.—Have you any receptacle where you keep matters of that kind? A.—Just at home.

Q.—What receptacle? A.—Not any place particular.

Q.—Have you no notes, mortgages, bonds or securities there? A.—No.

Q.—Will you swear that you never got a receipt from Mr. Gamey? A.—Yes.

Q.—For any amount? A.—Yes.

Q.—This would be recently? A.—Yes.

NEVER GOT MONEY FROM GAMEY.

Q.—Did you ever secure any money from Gamey? A.—I never secured a cent from Gamey.

Q.—Did you ever pay Mr. Gamey any money? A.—I never paid him a cent.

Q.—Did you ever see Mr. Gamey receive any money A.—Never a cent.

Q.—Did you ever see him pay out any money? A.—May have seen him pay his bill at the Walker House sometimes.

Q.—Now, why did you register a letter at Yorkville under an assumed name? A.—I registered the first one under the name of A. B. Crossin at Gamey's suggestion. Mr. Gamey told me when I wrote to sign only A.B.C., or X.Y.Z., and he told me when I registered letters to use the name of Crossin. I found out what Mr. Crossin's initials really were and then I decided not to use them, and I used the initials A.B.

Q.—Why did you not always use that method? A.—Because up to that time Mr. Gamey had not given me a reason for doing so.

Q.—What reason did he give at this time? A.—Well, after the Globe interview Mr. Gamey said he wouldn't have a friend on the Island. "They will be watching my mail. The fellow I am most suspicious of is that man McGregor. He is always hanging around the post office there. In fact the judge has had to speak to him about it. I wouldn't trust him at all, and I wouldn't be surprised if he would try and get some of my letters."

Q.—And that you swear is the reason he gave for telling you to register letters under the name of Crossin? A.—I swear it.

Q.—Then the telegram of Jan. 27. Do you remember that? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you send it? A.—I wanted to see Mr. Gamey to talk over a matter about which we had been talking for a month. I wanted to see him quickly.

Q.—What was the matter in question? A.—It was in connection with a fishing deal at Kegwany Lake, right at Mr. Gamey's own door.

Q.—Did you make any arrangements? A.—Nothing was done; the deal was postponed.

Q.—But the Globe interview was not postponed? A.—I know nothing about that.

Q.—You know about the Globe interview? A.—I tell you I know nothing about its postponement. How should I know?

Q.—Can you give me the date of Mr. Gamey's arrival in response to that telegram? A.—No, but I know he reached here before I expected him from my telegram.

Q.—Had you seen Mr. Stratton around this time? A.—No; I may have seen him passing along in the corridor, but I had not been talking to him.

Q.—Did you know Mr. Gamey paid a visit that week? Did you know he was giving the Globe an interview? A.—I knew he was giving the Globe an interview that evening because I was waiting for him.

Q.—Did you see the Globe reporter? A.—Yes, I looked in at the door once and saw them sitting at a table together with a paper between them.

Q.—Did Mr. Gamey tell you he was going to give the Globe an interview? A.—Yes, he said he had an interview that he was going to look over.

Frank Sullivan, continuing, said, on the same date Mr. Gamey asked him to introduce him to some one in the Colonization Roads Department, and he introduced him to Doherty. He thought that this was on a Thursday but he was not certain. It was the day before the Globe interview appeared.

Mr. Blake—Now did you ever go back to see Mr. Grant? A.—No.

Q.—Why? A.—Father had arranged to get the $5,000 from a party.

Q.—Who was the party? A.—I don't think it's fair to ask that. It wasn't anyone in connection with the Government.

Q.—Did you give the money to Gamey? A.—No.

Q.—Didn't he feel the same need for money as he did before? A.—I think Gamey had made other arrangements.

Q.—When did you first think that? A.—I don't know that he did, you know. He was always out for the stuff, though.

Witness did not think that endorsement was any good.

Q.—How was that? Did you think the letter of September 10 was absolute? A.—I did and I did not; I did not know whether he would carry it out. I didn't believe him.

Q.—What would be the object? Didn't you trust him? A.—I don't trust everybody.

Q.—What would be the object of his signing a letter of that kind? A.—I don't know. I only know what he said in Mr. Aylesworth's office.

Q.—You had confidence in Gamey? A.—As much as anyone else. I do not believe everybody. I want to know where I am at before I go too far.

Q.—As to the protest would that be pressed? A.—I don't know.

Q.—The common sense result would be not to press it, wouldn't it? A.—If he supported the Government there would be no sense in unseating him.

Q.—That being so you might have carried on the application in the Crown Lands Department? A.—I wanted to see if he were the best man.

Q.—Waited too long? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Have you hope in McGregor Island yet? A.—I don't say. The application is still there.

TWENTY DEALS ON.

Q.—As to the fishery matter, was that substituted? A.—Gamey had about twenty deals on. I was willing to go in with him on all.

Q.—On sea or land? All was fish that came to your net? A.—Yes.

Q.—What about that fishery matter?

Witness said it was on Kagawong Lake, and there was a man likely to go in with them on it.

Q.—Had you to use someone's name? A.—Could use anyone's—mine for instance.

Q.—Any statement or probability? A.—Later.

Q.—When? A.—When he came to Toronto we discussed it. Finally he said, "I am down on business and have to go right back. Wait till the session."

Q.—In what connection was it mentioned? A.—As to the Lake deal or the Noble fishery on the North Shore.

Q.—What was the Noble fishery? A.—Noble wanted a member of the Government side to support his application, and he asked me to write Gamey.

Q.—What advantage was all this? A.—Gamey said to me that if he got the patronage he would have to give a lot to the other people up there. He didn't want to so he said he would refer them to me.

Q.—What were you to get; what the gamblers call a rake-off? A.—I don't know, but I wasn't working for my health.

Q.—Lake deal, Noble deal, McGregor deal; any others?

Witness then told of free gold down at Massey or Webbwood, known to a Miller.

TO KNIFE MILLER.

Q.—Who was to knife Miller? A.—Gamey.

According to witness, Gamey arranged that they were to take out a blanket claim, wait till late in the season, until Miller prospected the property, and then step in and enjoy the benefits. Miller was about the only one who knew about the gold, but Gamey was a friend of his. Thus, Miller was to defray the prospecting expenses, and Gamey and Sullivan would have the gain. Sullivan was quite willing to be in on this or any other deal with anything in it.

Q.—You didn't pull away from this this man who was not honest? A.—No more than you pull away from him.

Q.—Do you think the cases are alike? A.—No, not at all, but you have no right to ask me such a question.

Mr. Blake—Well, if I have hurt your feelings, I am sorry. I withdraw the question.

Q.—Who furnished the $5,000 to you? A.—Thomas Nihan.

Q.—Did he make arrangements to pay you this. A.—He did not arrange to pay me anything. Mr. Sullivan's further answer was ruled out by Chancellor Boyd, and was unfinished.

Q.—When was the date? A.—I could not say.

Q.—About August? A.—Yes, it was at that time.

Q.—Now, about these castles of Machor of which you have spoken, was there anything else? A.—Later

Q.—At what time? A.—Just before the House opened; Mr. Gamey approached me.

Q.—What about? A.—About a slick story he had been telling to the Conservatives.

Q.—What was it? A.—About the exposure made.

Q.—What was the exposure? A.—Mr. Gamey came to the House to see me about getting his seat. I went down to Mr. Chase's desk and asked his assistant (Mr. Chase was absent) if the plan of the House was out. It was not, and then I went to the chamber, which was locked. I had left him by the elevator on the second floor, near the lobby, and when I went back I took out my watch to set it, and asked him the time, and he said it was ten to ten. Then he saw a man coming down the corridor, whom he supposed to be the Mail reporter. He wished to avoid being seen by him and said, "Can we step in here?" We went into the office on the north side. After the reporter passed we stepped out, and Mr. Gamey wanted to know if there was a place where we could have a private conversation.

GAMEY'S "STICK STORY."

I said we could be alone in the by, and he said he was up against a hard thing, and he wanted me to help him out. After the Globe interview he said the Conservatives in Manitoulin and in Toronto had been hounding. "I was in awful shape," he said. "I had to make some sort of an excuse, so I told them I had received money for doing it, and would expose it. I want you to back me up." "What statement did you make?" I asked. He said he had had said he got money in September from Stratton, and for the Globe interview. "Those were the two times you were with me in the Parliament Buildings. I must have corroboration, and so I have picked on those days. I told them I had got $4,000, and had divided it with you." "That's a nice story to tell, when I never got any of it," I said. "Do you think I'll endorse that?"

He then elaborated the scheme. That Stratton gave the money to Myers, and that Myers brought it to us in the smoking-room. I told him could not risk my position in the Parliament Buildings and that I had not got the $2,000. He said he would arrange that. I said "I have got to see the money." He said he would do it all right. By throwing down the Government he would be made Minister of Mines. I said "Go in and see about the money." He said, "I'll make it all right. I'll see you this afternoon."

We were talking about forty minutes and later went to Mr. Glackmeyer's office and got tickets for the House. Then I took him to the Public Works Department and introduced him to Mr. Edwards and Miss Gray. It was then a few minutes after eleven. I thought I would write the whole plan down, and show it to Stratton, but it was late and I went home and sat in my room, thinking what would be the best plan.

Witness, continuing, said: On the afternoon I went over to the Parliament Buildings. Mr. Gamey came and said he was going to Col. Clarke's office to get sworn in. "Have you got the money?" I asked. "I didn't get it," he said, "but I have made arrangements for it. You are getting nothing here. I can make it worth your while. The Government can't stick an hour if we hold to this story. I can get the money. You come down to the Crossin piano factory to-morrow night and we'll talk it all over.' I said, "All right, when you get the money."

I had an engagement with the dentist for three o'clock, and on the street going down I met Mr Stratton. I said to him, "Gamey has been to see me. I don't think you better count on him." Mr. Stratton replied, "I never expect much of those fellows.' Well, I thought, if Mr. Stratton does not want to know what sort of a fellow Gamey is, all right. After being at the dentist's, I went home.

At this point the Commission rose for luncheon.

An Obstinate Case of Eczema.

Mr. W. D. Johnson, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes that his father was entirely cured of a long standing and obstinate case of Eczema by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. His leg and foot were a mass of sores that refused to heal and he suffered terribly from the itching and stinging. Though he used a great many remedies and was treated by first-class doctors no permanent relief was obtained until he used Dr. Chase's Ointment.

New Government House Soon to Be Erected in Toronto.

Ottawa, April 23.—Some three years ago authority was taken to tear down the present Government House in Toronto and erect a new residence. His Honor the new Lieutenant-Governor, William Mortimer Clark, would prefer to remain in his own home till the new building is finished. He will be given the desired permission.

Lady Laurier left by private car yesterday afternoon for New York. The party consists of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Davis, Madame Brodeur, Madame Henri Laurier and Madame Carroll.

The 200 delegates to the congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, which meets in Montreal August 17, arrived in Ottawa yesterday.

There are no new developments in the Canada Atlantic trackmen's strike.

Word reached the city yesterday of the death in Vancouver of Captain Elmer J. Steele, a former Ottawa boy. The late Captain Steele was a brother of V. H. Steele, the well-known Ottawa cricketer. He was about 41 years of age, and was through the Northwest rebellion, in 1885, and served for five years in the Northwest Mounted Police. He went to South Africa with Strathcona's Horse as a regimental sergeant-major, and was promoted to lieutenant on the field. He was a nephew of Col. Steele.

Sir James Grant Honored.

Ottawa, April 23.—The fiftieth anniversary of Sir James Grant's medical career was fittingly celebrated at a banquet tendered him by the physicians of Ottawa at the Russell House last night. Sir James was presented with a handsomely-engrossed address and a testimonial. In reply he delivered an eloquent address reviewing the advancement made by medical science in the half-century. Sir Frederick Borden was among the guests. Sheriff Sweetland presided and there were about 80 physicians present.

$100 Reward $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Umbrella 100 Years Ago.

In the reprints from its own columns of 100 years ago, The London Times recently reproduced a speech of Sheridan's at a time when the new-fangled umbrella was an object of mirth in the House of Commons: "For instance, sir," said Mr. Sheridan, "you whom I have the honor to address might dispense with the expensive splendor of that elegant house which is now building for you, and all the state attached to your official suite, whenever you are to obey the orders of this House; in going up to present an address to His Majesty you will have no occasion to take up with you that shining bauble which is here the symbol of your power, nor to travel in that splendid gewgaw the gilded coach, at present an appendage of your office. You have only to walk up to St. James', wrapt up in your virtues and a warm surtout, and if it should rain you will have the privilege of carrying an umbrella. (Bursts of laughter.) There will be no occasion for all the state attached to the movements of your judges on circuit; they can travel in the mail coaches, and the bar move as outside passengers, if they should not prefer the salutary exercise of walking. (Repeated laughter.)"

LOCAL HOSPITALS AND CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

Interesting Letter From Lady Supt. of Nicholls Hospital.

The Letter of the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health.

In the report of the proceedings at the meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday morning, lack of space prevented the use of two important communications read and dealt with at the meeting. These are given below to-day. Comment upon them is unnecessary ;the letters are self-explanatory.

MISS COLEMAN'S LETTER.

The first letter is from the Lady Superintendent of the Nicholls Hospital, and is as follows:

Peterborough, April 1st, '03.

Gentlemen, —The Nicholls Hospital received your communication of March 31st re scarlet fever and diphtheria.

Every patient affected with either of these diseases is kept until all possibility of carrying infection or contagion is fully passed.

Each patient's clothes are fumigated. Each patient is bathed daily for some days before leaving. All discharges are either burned or thoroughly disinfected. The wards are daily dusted with bi-chloride. On going out each patient receives a hot soap and water bath, head and all, also a bi-chloride bath.

The names mentioned in the papers, (of March 30th, I think) are names of patients who were never in this hospital and if they are mentioned against any institution I think it only right to mention the institution and not include the innocent one with the supposedly guilty. As dates etc. were mentioned in the papers it is very unlikely that the second patient contracted the disease from the first, so that the accusation against the hospital from which the patient was discharged was very likely unjust.

It is a shame that a town like Peterborough has not a proper Isolation Hospital. It should have one and should support it.

The Isolation hospital should have four separate wings, one for scarlet fever, one for diphtheria, one for measles and one for small pox. Each wing should have two wards, one for men and one for women. It should also have from two to six private rooms, proper accommodation for nurses, a recreation room for the convalescents, a pantry, three baths for patients, a dressing room and a small crematory.

In connection with the hospital, part of it there should be several rooms in which suspected cases could be placed until a proper diagnosis is made, an office and other apartments for a resident doctor, kitchen, laundry and proper accommodation for servants. There should be a laboratory fitted with microscopical and other appliances for making pathological examinations. (When such a laboratory is provided, patients affected with other diseases could have sputum and other discharges examined and the fees from which examinations would tend to cover expenses.) There should also be a properly constructed fumigating plant and a morgue.

Since the present outbreak of diphtheria, we have had to convert our drying room into a ward for that disease; this is a plain room with no appliances whatever. Every bit of water must be carried up and carried down. Disinfecting etc. entails an enormous amount of unnecessary work and expense. all of which could be avoided with proper appliances. The nurses eat, drink and sleep in this ward where all patients are, and I do not wonder they feel ill with all the odors from the diphtheria throats, results of calomel and salts etc. It is needless to say that it is well nigh impossible to sufficiently renumerate nurses and attendants working under such conditions. I do not mind the actual work, but when it comes to nurses eating, sleeping and working and patients passing the acute stage of disease, dying or convalescing, to food and medicine being kept and taken, all in the same ill-ventilated room, it is nothing short of courting disaster, and no civilized town should allow such a thing to happen a second time.

Yours truly,
The Nicholls Hospital,
(Signed) S. M. COLEMAN,
Lady Superintendant.

By order of the Board of Trustees for Nicholls Hospital.

DR. BRYCE'S LETTER.

The following correspondence from Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, was also received:

Registrar-General's Office,
Toronto, April 13, 1903.

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your letter of the 9th inst., giving me the statistics I was asking for.

I regret not being able to see you, but was busy all afternoon in Ashburnham.

I 'phoned Mr. Hill hoping to meet him after supper, but found he was in Toronto.

I am sending a brief report, a copy of which you may forward if you deem proper to the hospital authorities of Nicholls.

Trusting your Board will take prompt action with regard to the matters therein dealt with, and hoping to meet you soon again, I remain

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) P. H. BRYCE,
Secretary.

S. R. ARMSTRONG,
Town Clerk, Peterborough.

Registrar-General's Office,
Toronto, April 13th, 1903.

Dear Sir,—Having been in Peterborough Thursday, and finding it possible after having completed other duties, I made an inspection of the hospital conveniencies for contagious diseases at the Nicholls and St. Joseph's and beg to report thereon:—

At the Nicholls hospital I found in a single room, heated by a wood stove, some eight persons, the air space being about 33 x 13 x 10 or adequate for at the most three persons and attendant nurse. What was more to be regretted was that there was not a single convenience for ventilation, bath or closet, and when I learned that at one time two nurses were constantly shut in there to sleep and no separation from eight children with diphtheria while taking needed rest, I could hardly comprehend that it was in a modern progressive city with a local Board fully empowered by law to supply all necessary hospital accommodation at the people's expense.

The excuse of the hospital authorities that they have not been contracted with by your Board to supply, under Sec. 106 of the Act, necessary accommodation, may be sufficient reason why adequate accommodations and comforts have not been supplied for the cases sent; but it can be no excuse for any further continuance for any such insanitary conditions by crowding children together in a way which makes medical skill and nursing largely useless when children are being poisoned by foul air.

With regard to the accommodation for scarlet fever; it is almost equally wanting. Three rooms with a small bath and closet convenience, which would be tolerable for a few, became utterly unadequate for sixteen patients and two nurses to be permanently cooped up in. The location of the rooms, the heating and lack of ventilation are such as ought not longer be tolerated in your town.

As to the remedy that must be promptly supplied. I beg to refer you to the recent scarletina and diphtheria Regulations to be read with the Act.

St. Joseph's was in every respect much more commodious and tolerable.

What the situation demands is that the Board at once contract with the hospital authorities to supply, at a specific rate per week, enough tent space for the separate treatment of scarletina and diphtheria, preferably one disease at each hospital, the hospital to supply necessaries and nursing and medical assistance either through the family physician or the physician for the month.

This arrangement may be extended to an agreement whereby the hospitals will build separate permanent buildings, adequately constructed and ventilated, or what probably will prove more satisfactory, your Board will at once make arrangements for the construction and maintainance of a contagious diseases hospital, directly under the supervision of the Board and its officers.

I regret to have to report this state of affairs as I had hoped that my conference with your Board some weeks ago would have resulted in several of these matters being attended to at once. I shall be obliged if you will report the action of your Board in this matter promptly.

Be good enough to supply a copy of this report to the several hospitals, and oblige

Yours truly,
(Signed) P. H. BRYCE,
Secretary.

Lindsay Post.

Pete Johnston, of bag punching and patent medicine fame, is likely to find himself in the clutches of the law very soon on a charge much more serious than that of obstructing the walks, for which he spent some days in Castle Jackson, Lindsay, last summer.

Since his departure from this town a few months ago, Pete has been residing with his mother on a farm in Laxton township, four or five miles north of Coboconk, and little has been heard of him, but apparently his well known mental peculiarities have been accentuated by the change from a strenuous life in a busy town to the semi-solitude of back country existence. Last week he started out to liven up things a bit, with the result that the following telegram was received last night about 10.15 by G.T.R. Despatcher Piersey from the station agent at Coboconk, with instructions to forward the message to County Magistrate Deacon:

Coboconk, April 22.

J. Deacon, C.M., Lindsay:
Sworn Statement—

"Peter Johnston of Laxton township on April 22 shot at Frank Burden four times with intent to kill. Two balls entered left shoulder, one grazing right shoulder. When contents of revolver had been fired he fiercely jabbed and struck me about the heart with a pitchfork.

"(Signed.) Frank Burden."

The Coboconk agent added that apparently Johnston had received no provocation. Burden had gone to the farm for a load of hay and when he had part of it on the wagon Johnston made his appearance and at once commenced shooting.

Dr. Thompson, of Coboconk, was summoned to attend to the wounded man, and pronounced his injuries to be serious, but not necessarily fatal.

Chief Nevison and County Constable Nelson left town at an early hour this morning for Johnston's home, armed with a warrant for his arrest and are expected back this evening. Liveryman Armstrong furnished his swiftest team for the expedition, and handled the ribbons in person. Some of our citizens who know Peter well think that he will take to the bush when he catches sight of the officers. If he does his long limbs will carry him far and fast and the officers will need seven league boots to overtake him.

Johnston is well known in Peterborough, having spent the greater portion of last winter here.

Charles Lever's Characters.

Whence did Charles Lever get his rollicking Irishman? Prof. Oman, in his preface to the re-issue of William Grattan's "Adventures With the Connaught Rangers," discloses the secret, says The London Outlook. It was clearly he avows, from the domestic annals of the old Eighty-Eight Foot in Peninsular days that Lever drew the greater part of the good stories which made the fortune of "Charles O'Malley." Many of the characters in that romance appear in the flesh in Grattan's reminiscences. Notably:

"The eccentric surgeon, Maurice Quill, whose fame was so great throughout the British army that the novelist did not even take the trouble to change his name. His colleague, Dr. O'Reily, was almost as great an original. Many of the humors of Micky Free seem to be drawn from the doings of Grattan's servant, Dan Carsons.

"Comparing the real thing," Mr. Oman goes on, "with the work of fiction, one is driven to conclude that much of it was only a photographic reproduction of anecdotes that he had heard from old soldiers of the Connaught Rangers."

Recruit Drill was Held Last Evening in Drill Shed.

The weekly recruit drill, which is under the instruction of the Sergt.-Major, was held last night in the drill shed. A very large percentage of the recruits turned out and the Instructor complimented the men on appearing in such large numbers, hoping that it would be kept up, and that each man would try and not miss a single drill. The men were put through the rifle exercises, and for beginners gave a very creditable exhibition.

On Tuesday evening next, the Regiment, without arms, or accoutrements, will hold the first march out of the season, and it is hoped that all who can possibly attend, will do so. It might be mentioned that recruit drill is held every Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

BICYLE BY-LAW

Comes Into Force To-day—The Parade.

A bylaw of some importance to both cyclists and pedestrians comes into force to-day. It is that, stating that all cyclists shall have a bell attached to their machines and that they shall not ride within the limits of this corporation at a rate of speed exceeding eight miles an hour.

In view of the fact that this bylaw comes into force to-day a lot of youngsters and a lot of employees chiefly of the Canadian General, procured cow-bells and rode down the streets at about 6.30 o'clock last night, making a most ear-splitting din. This performance was called a bicycle parade.

The City of Peterborough will make her first trip to Rice Lake on May 25th, when she will be engaged for excursion purposes. Some steamers from the lower end of Rice Lake have been as far as the locks, but owing to the lock gates being off, have not been able to go as far as the Wolfe street wharf.

THE SPRING ASSIZES OPEN ON TUESDAY.

There are Four Cases Set Down for Hearing.

There are no Criminal Cases—Webb vs Canadian General up Again.

The Spring Assizes of the High Court of Justice for the County of Peterborough will open at 1 o'clock on Tuesday, before the Honourable Mr. Justice Street. There are no criminal cases set down for hearing and only four civil cases. These are: Webb vs. Canadian General. This is a case with which Examiner readers are familiar. The plaintiff is Andrew Henry Webb, and the defendant is a manufacturing corporation carrying on business in Peterborough. The plaintiff seeks damages for injuries. The case was tried by Mr. Justice Meredith last fall, but on appeal a new trial was ordered.

John Green for Plaintiff; Denniston, Peck, Kerr, & Stevenson for defendants.

Christie vs. Christie.—The Plaintiffs are Wm. Christie, a farmer, residing in the Township of Asphodel in the County of Peterborough, and Margaret Christie, his wife, who resides with her co-plaintiff, at the said township of Asphodel. The defendant is Wm. Christie, Jr., and is the son of the plaintiffs.

The action is brought by the plaintiffs to set aside a deed and lease of a certain parcel of land lying in the township of Asphodel in the County of Peterborough, being composed of the west half of lot of number 15, in the second concession of the said Township of Asphodel. The plaintiffs set out that at the time of execution of the deed and lease the plaintiffs were much advanced in years and from old age and physical and mental infirmity were utterly incapable. The defendant they say fraudently by undue influence, intimidation and by abuse of confidence reposed in him, inaduced the plaintiffs to make the said conveyance. They have been deprived of all their property, so they state, and are without adequate means of support in their old age.

The defendant in his statement of defence, sets out that he did not unduly solicit, influence or persuade the plaintiffs to execute the deed and lease, and that they had ample opportunity to obtain professional advice, and they did give the matters due consideration; that the defendant is the only son of the plaintiffs who remained at home and worked, all the others having been provided for and that the plaintiffs promised and agreed that they would give the land in question to the defendant.

D. O'Connel for plaintiff; L. F. Clarry, Hastings, for defendant.

Webb vs. Langford. — This is an action that arises out of an accident that occurred at the time of the erection of Peterborough's new skating rink. The plaintiff is Edward Webb of Peterborough and the statement of claim sets out that he was a workman within the meaning of the "Workman's Compensation for Injuries Act." He seeks to recover damages from the defendant, Contractor William Langford, of Peterborough, for injuries alleged to have been received by being struck on the head by falling bricks. He alleges that the foreman and superintendent did not take proper precautions to see that the plaintiff was protected from being struck and injured by such bricks falling from a certain scaffold. He asks $500 damages.

The statement of defence denies that the defendant was guilty of any negligence, and contends that the accident was caused through the plaintiff's own carelessness.

D. O'Connell for plaintiff; DuVernet, Ferguson and Jones, Toronto, for defendant.

Jory vs. Wilson. — This is a case in which the plaintiff, Thomas Edward Jory, a farmer residing on the west half of lot No. 21, in the 5th concession of Douro, seeks to recover damages from John Wilson, a farmer residing on the west half of lot No. No. 20, in the 5th concession of the said township for alienation of his wife's affections. He asks the court to grant him ——— damages for the debauchment of his wife and alienation of her affections, and for the loss of her society and assistance, $4500; damages for the trespass of the defendant upon the premises of the plaintiff, $200; an injunction restraining the defendant from further entering upon and trespassing upon the plaintiff's said premises; damages for assault, $200; such further and other relief as the nature of the case may require.

The defendant in his statement of defence denies the allegations contained in the plaintiff's statement of claim and puts the defendant to the proof thereof.

O. A. Langley, Lakefield, for the plaintiff; Stratton & Hall, for the defendant.

OBITUARY.

The Death of Mrs. Robert Cronn, of Otonabee.

The funeral took place Thursday morning of the late Mrs. Robert Cronn whose death took place last Sunday in Chicago. On its arrival in town the body was taken to the residence of Mr. John Conroy of Otonabee. The deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. P. McGrath of Otonabee and was married in 1861. She leaves a husband and six children, who will, indeed, greatly mourn her loss from their midst. After leaving the residence in Otonabee the cortege went to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic Cemetery where the interment took place.

OBITUARY.

The Late Mrs. Morgan.

After an illness extending over four months, Mrs. Morgan, wife of Mr. H. W. Morgan, entered her eternal rest. Death came last night at the residence of her father, Mr. Henry Owen, No. 366 Water street, where she had resided for some time. The deceased was a native of Peterborough and about 8 years ago married her bereaved husband. One child was the fruit of their union. The funeral will take place at 3.30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

AN ENTERTAINMENT IN ST. ANDREW'S HALL.

Mr. Owen Smiley was the Chief Artist —Other Numbers.

St. George's night was celebrated in Peterborough by an entertainment given in St. Andrew's church lecture hall, by Mr. Owen A. Smiley, assisted by] local talent. It was under the auspices of the Junior Boys' Guild. The lecture hall was well filled and it was an appreciative audience that greeted the artists. As an opening number Misses Tully and VanEvery rendered an instrumental duett. The Rev. Mr. Potter made a few remarks by way of of introducing Mr. Smiley who then gave his first number of the evening. In response to a very vigorous encore he remarked that as the occasion was one on which the patriotic spirit was to the fore he would give his hearers a selection suitable to the occasion. He then recited Rudyard Kipling's poem, "England's Flag." All of Mr. Smiley's selections were given in that manner that never fails to draw from the audience hearty applause and it is difficult to name any particular one as being better than the others. Mr. Walter Stocker and Mr. Jas. Morgan sang several solos during the evening, and received the hearty applause of the audience. During the intermission the Misses Campbell contributed very acceptably a pianoforte duett.

Miss Tully and Mrs. McClelland acted as accompanists during the evening.

The programme was brought to a close by the singing of the national anthem.

Mr. Smily is not a Stranger in Peterborough, having appeared here on several former occasions, and on this, like all the others, he has proved a drawing card to all lovers of the humorous.

SONS OF ENGLAND PLAYED BASKETBALL

And had a Very Enjoyable Evening—Speeches and Songs.

St. George's day was appropriately commemorated by an oyster supper held in the Sons of England Hall last evening, preceded by a friendly game of carpet ball, between teams of the Sons of England and Canadian Order of Foresters. Mr. R. Warren acted as chairman for the evening. Appropriate toasts proposed were responded to and songs were sung by the skips Messrs. G. Stenton, T. Stenton, and C. Stenton and R. Shepherd and others. It was unanimously resolved that the games be continued weekly. After a most enjoyable time the evening was closed with singing the national anthem.

Fell Exhausted and Unconscious.

Mrs. R. W. Edwards, 33 McMurray street, Brantford, Ont., suffered for five years with nervous exhaustion, headache and dyspepsia. "The pain in my head would almost drive me crazy. I could not sleep nights, but would walk the floor in agony until I fell exhausted and unconscious. For the past nine months I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and from a mere skeleton this medicine has built me up in flesh and weight until I am strong and well." It would be scarcely possible to produce stronger evidence of the wonderful power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Among the other interesting features of the programme will be a fifteen round boxing bout, also for a purse of $50.

LACROSSE.

The boys had another good practice last night. About seventeen players turned out and for over an hour the boys kept the rubber constantly moving about the field. Some good work in stick handling was displayed by several of the players, but their running and catching was a feature.—Lindsay Post.

The great Sox Clark, whose name has appeared in nearly every paper in Ontario during the lacrosse season, and who has been billed to play with a score of different teams, is now in Port Hope, says the Guide. He likes the town and the people, and has decided to don the "old gold and black" for the season of 1903.

A full turn out of the members and friends of the T.A.S. Lacrosse Club is asked for on the Murray street school grounds on Friday evening at 7 o'clock, in order to put the finishing touches to the grounds before being rolled. Workers are requested to come around with a rake and other tools necessary in order to clean up the grounds.

BASEBALL.

An effort is being made to organize a City Baseball League in Peterborough and a meeting for that purpose will be held in the Oriental Hotel on Tuesday evening next. The following teams are asked to send representatives:—The Excelsiors, Auburns, Cereal Co., Wm. Hamilton Co., Dan McCabe's pets and the Canadian General.

CANOEING.

At a meeting of the Canoe Club Wednesday evening the following statement was made by the secretary, Mr. Chas. Whiten:—

"I have here a clipping from one of our Saturday papers. It is reported that two members of T. Y. C. C. can tell how cold the water in Little Lake is. Now, I would like to have this explained, as we have not been told of it. If anyone here to-night can give us any clue of who the culprits were, I think they should be expelled, as a lesson to others. Surely there is no one here who were ejected from their canoe into the cold waters of the Little Lake. If, in the future, anyone desires to find the temperature of the water, I move that they apply to the Commodore, who will carry a thermometer."

As no one gave any information the above was deemed untrue, and the resolution was passed and carried unanimously regarding the commodore's thermometer.

It was moved by (Com.) Stock that the parade announced for the 1st of May be postponed till a later date, as there are not many canoes ready for the water at present.

It was also decided to hold the weekly club outing on Monday and Friday evenings, also Wednesday afternoons when convenient to members.

The report on the portage below cemetery was satisfactory and the club had been informed by engineer that, the very latest style was being constructed.

It was also decided to send padlers to different regattas, Orillia on July Sturgeon Point, also A.C.A. regatta. In the meantime those who are considered fast paddlers are requester th show their mettle, as the club are desirous of getting the best men to enter the regattas.

It was also moved that the club have an Honorary President, also Patrons and Patronesses. Mr. J. H. Connal was elected Honorary President; the Patrons and Patronesses have not been interviewed.

It was also decided to buy a new lock for front door so all rack holders will be supplied with a new key.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Messrs. Roy and McPherson who have kindly consented to tow the canoes on parade nights.

JOHNSTON IS NOW IN CASTLE JACKSON.

Was Arrested by Coboconk and Norland Constables.

Chief Nevison and County Constable Nelson arrived at Coboconk yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, only to find that their man—Pete Johnston—had been apprehended an hour before by Constables J. Wakelin and W. Adair, of Coboconk and Norland respectively. Johnston left his home the previous night and took refuge in a sandy waste about two miles distant, where the constable descended upon him from opposite directions. He made no opposition, and on the arrival of Chief Nevison and assistant was handed over to their care. They reached town with their prisoner the same evening.

On the way down Johnston, in the course of conversation, admitted that Burden had not given any provocation. "A thought came into my mind and I had to shoot," said the prisoner, whose trial will come off next week.

Burden was shot and wounded on Tuesday—not Friday, as stated last evening.—Lindsay Post.

The following despatches have been received by E. M. Poussett & Co.:—

New York, April 24th, 10.15 a. m. — With the short interest pretty well driven in market will feel elimination of this support. Mr. Morgan sails for Europe to-day. Mr. Gates is booked to go May 8th and Mr. Keene is also arranging for an European trip. Mr. Harriman in San Francisco. It therefore looks as though we can expect nothing better than a narrow traders' market for some time to come.

M. & M.

Explosion in Dominion Coal mine, 5 men killed. Now selling at 108.

New York, April 14th, 9.45 a. m. — Manhattan statement for March quarten will make very large showing. Any advance in M.O.P. div. unlikely. Banks gained since Friday $2,155,000. Atchison officials took for increase in traffic for next six months. Time money and mercantile paper working easier. H. H. Rogers continues to improve.

The news of threatened rupture between Russia and Japan has had bad effect on market at London and has led to suspension of activity. Americans in London are heavy on profit-taking by local jobbers and New York selling. Conditions are good but there is lack of outside interest in market. Sentiment generally friendly to market but for present can see nothing but narrow traders' market and advise profit-taking on all bulges. Money continues to work easier.

MORLEY ROBERTS.

M.A.P. Talks of the Author's Very Adventurous Career.

In a sketch of the adventurous career of Morley Roberts, the well-known author, M.A.P. says:

Although as a boy he had woven thrilling romances and written poetry as a young man, he had no idea of literature as a profession until his two friends, Mr. George Gissing and Mr. W. H. Hudson, the eminent Argentine naturalist, put it into his head. By the courtesy of Messrs. Chatto and Windus I take the following from Mr. Roberts' article in "My First Book," wherein numerous celebrated authors relate the history of their first-born: "I was ignorant, and astonished at the wild idea of writing anything salable. However, in desperation, for I had no money, I began to write, and went ahead in the same way I have so far kept to. I wrote it without notes, without care, without thought, save that each night the past was resurgent and alive before and within me, just as it was when I worked and starved between Texas and the great Northwest. Each Sunday I read what I had done to George Gissing; at first with terror, but afterwards with more confidence as he nodded approval, and as the end approached I began to believe in it myself." "The Western Avernus," containing over 90,000 words, was written in less than a lunar month! . . . . He is fairly tall, muscular, though in no wise bulky, with brown hair, brown eyes, very keen and lively, and brown moustache; he has rather a hard-bitten air. One feels that he has seen and done strange things: that he has looked for a moment behind the veil. A restless being and a man of moods, now jovially humorous, now sardonically bitter, especially when he talks of modern life, now frankly pessimistic. Although the tempestuous days of youth are past, the old spirit of revolt against contention and cant, the old love of freedom and fresh air, are just as strong in his breast as they were nigh thirty years ago, when he went down to the sea in ships and took death by the throat, and, looking in his eyes, flinched not.

THE MOTHER.

I wander to the churchyard where
A little grave has all my care,
For I have left my baby there.

No stone or cross my love attest,
The mound with simple flowers is dressed
It looks so small among the rest.

The robins round it hop and sing,
And there the rain and sunshine bring
The earliest blossoms of the spring.

The little heart that sleeps below—
There was so much it could not know,
One hoped the coming years would show,

There was so much left all unsaid,
The dreams on which my spirit fed,
When I would clasp his golden head.

The little tongue that scarce could say
The simplest words of love and play,
How much with it has passed away.

And though no eye my woe can trace,
I carry round from place to place
The longing for a baby face.

And ever at the close of day,
When work is done, I steal away,
And by his grave I kneel and pray.

Sweet baby soul, now passed from sight,
God fold us 'neath His wings to-night,
And some day bring us forth to light.

—Frederick George Scott.

Mr. Chamberlain Quoted Poetry.

When Joseph Chamberlain was a Liberal a good many years ago, he made a speech at Gloucester, England, in which the future Colonial Secretary quoted a nursery rhyme with great effect. Mr. Chamberlain was criticising Lord Beaconsfield and Lord Salisbury on their return from Berlin. One of them had used the word "if" a good many times in the course of a speech explaining their action. "It reminds me," said Mr. Chamberlain, "of a rhyme I learned from my nurse:

"If all the seas were bread and cheese,
If all the rivers were ink,
If all the lakes were currant cakes,
What should we have to drink?"

The effect of this apposite nonsense on the audience was tremendous, and the quotation is ranked as one of the great oratorical hits of the Birmingham statesman's life.

Successful Resuscitation.

There are still undeveloped possibilities in electricity. A man in an apparently moribund condition was recently taken into the Melbourne Hospital, and in order to revive him an electric shock was administered. The results were startling and unexpected. A demoniac energy was instantaneously infused. He sent the doctor sprawling on the floor and flung a couple of assistants out of the window. Then he proceeded to wreck the ward, while nurses ran away shrieking and barricaded themselves. He had done a hundred pounds' worth of damage before the police, who were telephoned for, arrived. Electricity as a medical agent seems to be as yet imperfectly understood.—London Chronicle.

NEW ERA IN EDUCATION.

Proposed Changes in School Curricula—Nature Course Study—Outline of Studies in a New Field.

The Education Department of Ontario recently issued the tentative draft of the new Public School and High School regulations, which came up for discussion at the Ontario Educational Association meeting during the week ending April 18. Below is given a detail of some of the new courses of study proposed, with special reference to the course of studies in manual training, household science and nature study. It is in these subjects that the most portentious changes are being made in our present educational system, and a glance at the courses proposed will give some idea of the marked trend of the times in matters educational.

In the literature prescribed for Form I. of the Public School course an innovation is made which may have some influence in checking the undue materialism of the age. The course prescribed calls for myths, fairy stories and fables, stories and poems illustrating nature-study lessons and appropriate to the time of year and to the various holidays.

In drawing for Public School students a new feature is the introduction of color. The spectrum with the six standard colors and their shades and tints will be called into play.

Nature study for Form I. includes the habits of pet animals, their care and food; domestic animals on the farm, their care, habits, and use; birds, their preparation for winter, their development; economic fruits, dissemination of seeds, roots and stems, etc.; plant life, life on the farm, observations of rain, snow and frost; effects of sun and moisture on the soil, etc.

Nature Study.

In Form II., III. and IV. the regulations for drawing, manual training and nature study provide for a continuation of the studies as begun in Form I. In Form II., for instance, in nature study, the student advances to a study of the form and uses of trees; activities connected with forestry and lumbering, and connected with the study of pioneer life and present conditions on the prairie. In manual training the student advances to clay modeling of natural forms and common objects. In Form III, the course in nature study develops into studies of the adaptation of different kinds of animals to their respective habits; life histories of moths, butterflies, beetles, and grasshoppers; useful insects, as ladybird and dragon fly; harmful insects and methods of destroying them, etc. In plant life the student now comes to study the culture of farm and garden crops and orchard and shade trees; the observing and distinguishing of the common forest trees, etc. He also proceeds to studies of local minerals and rocks, their properties and uses; tests and methods of purification of water; sources of heat ventilation, methods of transmission of heat, causes of winds and ocean currents, etc. Finally, in Form IV., the pupil is led up to comparatively advanced studies in the processes of nature, such as combustion, practical uses of heat, steam and electricity in connection with the study of industries.

In the departments of drawing, household science and manual training there is a similar gradation in the courses of study. In household science the Public School girl of Form IV. will be expected to study the uses, selection and care of kitchen equipment; the proper care of the house; the human body as a machine for doing work; foods, their function, necessity for variety, effects of cooking, etc.; practical work in the economical preparations and serving of vegetables, cereals, fresh and dried fruits, soups, eggs, meat, bread, etc.

Duties of Citizenship.

In the subject of history there will be no departmental examination and teachers will be allowed great freedom in dealing with the course. The chief object of the course as laid out is to arouse an interest in historical reading and to give an acquaintance with those leading points in our history which every citizen should know. In Form IV. a brief outline of the duties of citizenship and of the provision for civil government in Canada is prescribed.

The High School curriculum is based upon these main divisions: The lower school (a two or three years' course), the middle school (a one or two years' course), and the upper school (a two years' course). The program of studies has been prepared for the general student in particular. To all pupils the lower school courses (now Form I. and II.) are obligatory in geography, arithmetic and mensuration, English grammar, penmanship and reading, with English composition, English literature, history and physical education, throughout their period of attendance. This ensures for all pupils, whether they specialize or not, in languages, household science, manual training, art, etc., a good fundamental course of general knowledge.

In any locality where there is more than one High School building, the board may make such a differentiation of the courses taken up as it may deem expedient. This clause at present effects Toronto only, and refers to the optional courses.

High School Entrance.

In the High School entrance examination there will be no written examination in literature, history, art subjects, physiology and hygiene, or nature study. In these subjects candidates must have a certificate from school principals or inspectors to the effect that they have satisfactorily completed the courses.

No candidate who shall not have completed the seventeenth year of his age before the close of the examination shall be admitted to any of the non-professional examinations for teachers.

At the different examinations a more exact knowledge will be required than heretofore, and the examination papers will be constructed accordingly.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

Mrs. John F. Sillars had Dyspepsia for Seven Years—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Cured Her.

Spring fever is a name often given to a stagnant stomach. When you have walked too much your legs ache and you know it is time to rest them. When your arms ache you know it is time to rest them. Use your stomach in the same way. When it is tired rest it.

The stomach supplies the body with heat. Its work is doubled during the cold weather. With the coming of spring it is tired and worn. It needs to be rested and toned up. It needs Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They rest the stomach by doing its work. They digest the food themselves. They thus bring the stomach to its normal state of activity and health, and that means renewed energy in all parts of the body.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are a natural remedy and sure reliever of all stomach ailments. Those who have used them are enthusiastic in their praises. Take Mrs. John F. Sillars, of Western Bay, Newfoundland, for example. She writes:—

"I have been cured of Dyspepsia by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. For seven years I suffered. I could not eat without suffering intense agony but had given up to die before using them. I tried doctors but they gave me no permanent relief. Then I started to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. From the first they gave me relief, and after the use of five boxes I was well and strong."

OWNED BY THE KING.

Queer Treasures Possessed by His Majesty—Lord Napier, Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener Contributors.

Quite apart from the treasures which become the property of every British Sovereign, and which consist for the most part of gold and silver plate, weighing altogether twenty-eight tons and valued at nearly two millions sterling, King Edward possesses a private collection of curios of which little is known.

The museum near the equerries' entrance at Windsor was really established as recently as 1896, when some workmen engaged in repairing the castle brought to light a number of relics dating from the Stuart period, and these, with such as were personally collected by Queen Victoria, have been set apart with several attendants to look after them. War mementos are present in large numbers, every campaign of recent years being represented since the Abyssinian War, at the conclusion of which Lord Napier presented the Queen with King Theodore's cap and gold seal. Subsequently Lord Roberts added the scarlet saddle edged with gold and the silver bit captured from the late Ameer of Afghanistan and Lord Kitchener presented the crimson banner of Wad Bishara taken at Firket.

The collection of old china was got together by the late Queen and is composed of 10,000 pieces, its value being put at £150,000. Every piece is tabulated in a book kept for the purpose, and against each record is a record of what the article in question is worth, with a brief account of its history. One dessert service alone represents £30,000, it being of sevres ware of extreme beauty; while a breakfast service given to George III. on his birthday, in 1810, by his five daughters, whose initials are on every piece, are worth £10,000. Among the furniture is the writing desk given by Henry VIII. to Anne Boleyn on their wedding day; also an old Venetian chair used by the Doges and dated 1670. A solid silver table of the same period is another treasure on which the King sets great store.

The King's collection of feather cloaks is valued at £10,000. They are composed of gold, black and crimson feathers from the wings of a now extinct species of parrott, and were given to George IV. by the King of the Sandwich Islands in 1824. Some of the feathers are so minute as to make each cloak a marvel of ingenuity. Another treasure, which at one time belonged to a savage potentate is Tippoo Sahib's eagle, taken from his throne at Seringapatam. The bird, nearly life-size, is of solid gold; the beak and wings are tipped with diamonds. There is also a gold tiger's head from the same source, the eyes of which are of priceless crystal.

Not far away may be found the collection of walking-sticks King Edward inherited from his mother, numbering 187 in all, and many of them of great value. One of these, purchased at the Culloden sale in 1897, is carved to represent Wisdom and Folly, £160 having been paid for it. Another of black oak, originally belonged to Charles II., while a third is made from wood of the luckless Alabama, the handle being carved to represent Captain Semmes, the skipper.

The royal library which now consists of 126,000 volumes, owes its origin to the late Prince Consort, and could not be purchased for £100,000. A second collection of 50,000 volumes, for which the King was himself responsible while Prince of Wales, reposes at Sandringham. In the Windsor collection are many books of priceless value, notably the Mentz Psalter, of which only one other intact copy exists. Its value is £8,000. There are also the MS. of Mozart's first opera, and the copy of Shakespeare's works used by Charles I. Among the pictures are 21,000 engravings after such masters as Raphael, Da Vinci, etc.

Not the least interesting features of the King's private museum is his collection of gold keys which have been presented to him at various times when opening public buildings. To each is attached a concise account of the ceremony with which it was connected, the total value of the collection being placed at £5,000.

A Witness' Excellent Retort.

Witnesses, as well as jurymen, are expected to express some respect for the court in their attire, and many a laboring man has been reproved for entering the witness-box without paying due attention to his toilet. Only one has ever been known to make an effective retort, and he was a bricklayer who appeared before Lord Ellenborough.

"Really, witness," said his Lordship, "when you have to appear in this court, it is your bounden duty to be more clean and decent in your appearance."

"Upon my life," replied the witness, "if your Lordship comes to that, I'm thinking I'm every bit as well dressed as your Lordship."

"How do you mean, sir?" demanded Lord Ellenborough angrily.

"Why, faith," explain?d the ready-witted bricklayer, "you come here in your working clothes, and I've come in mine."

Australia's Miniature Volcanoes.

A curious feature of the breakup of the protracted and devastating drought in Australia was the number of miniature volcanic explosions in various parts of the Commonwealth. The ground had become so parched and dry that it cracked, and the fissures thus formed became the receptacles of heated air. When the long prayed for downpour of rain came at last, the water met the hot air in these fissures, and little geysers and volcanoes were manufactured in a moment. Many farmers, hearing the explosions and seeing columns of steamy stuff arising from the earth, wondered what new plague had come to afflict them and whether they were out of the frying pan into the fire.

Tricks of Paris Cabmen.

Paris is full of counterfeit coins, and the cabmen make use of them quite ingeniously. You take a two franc fiacre ride, and when you reach your hotel you in the generosity of your heart give the cabman 3 francs.

You have just got within the vestibule when you notice the cabman has followed you.

He apologizes, but the coin you have given him is bad. You look at it. Yes, it is bad. It is nothing but a bit of lead.

You are pretty certain in your mind that it isn't the coin you gave the man—which in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred it isn't—but you don't care to haggle in a hotel corridor and be subjected to the ignominious glances of other folks as a foreigner who gives poor French cab drivers bad money. So you take the bit of lead and give a good coin.

Of course the cabman has changed the coin. You gave him a perfectly good three franc piece at the start, which he has in his pocket, and he has bluffed you into giving him another 3 francs in exchange for a useless bit of lead. To visitors to Paris let this be a warning.

Pneumonia More Fatal Than Smallpox.

Statistics Show a Rapid Increase of Deaths from Pneumonia — Prevention and Cure Found in

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Ten times as many people die of pneumonia as of smallpox and yet the fear of smallpox is so great that many people almost forget that there is such a disease as pneumonia.

Health authorities are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out smallpox and ignore the conditions that cause pneumonia. Damp, unventilated houses, dirty alleys and streets, stagnant pools of water, insufficient food and clothing—all these things cause pneumonia.

Any one who is in a weak and run down condition and contracts a cold is liable to have pneumonia, and, therefore, the object of every person should be to keep their health at high water mark by the use of such a blood builder and nerve restorative as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Should you find yourself the victim of a cold that has fastened itself on the bronchial tubes causing difficult breathing, pain in the chest or lungs when coughing or other indications of approaching pneumonia, there is no preparation that will help you so promptly as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

No offhand prescription from a doctor, hastily written and hastily compounded in a drug store, can be compared to this great treatment which has so firmly established itself in the homes of this land.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is mother's favourite remedy for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, coughs and colds, and is wonderfully effective in relieving and curing asthma. Twenty-five cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 9

She writes: "About seven months ago I was badly run down in health and became very weak. I was troubled with fluttering of the heart and shortness of breath. When lying down at night I was almost afraid to go to sleep for fear I would never wake up. When I arose in the morning I would feel a little better, but as soon as I started to work my heart would start fluttering, my head would become dizzy, faint weak spells would come over me and it seemed as if black objects were floating before my eyes. I was growing worse every day until I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. When the box was half gone I could feel that they had done me good and by the time it was finished I was in excellent health and would advise all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles to try them."

INVISIBLE PASSING.

HAROLD BEGBIE HAS A CHAT WITH SIR OLIVER LODGE.

Achievements of Psychical Research—The Mighty Atom—The Electron and How It Is Made Real to the Ordinary Man—The Great Misunderstood—The Invisible Is Passing to Modern Science.

I found myself at dinner the other night seated next to the man who first set Europe thinking of Wireless telegraphy. Oliver Lodge is not merely a likeness, but he is the express image of Lord Salisbury twenty years ago; a huge, massive creature, with mountainous head, quiet, cautious, and watchful eyes under a great dome of brow; the same stoop of the head, as though under its own great weight, and the same curious effect of the hair growing outward from above the sloping neck and high, broad shoulders. If Sir Oliver cared to flour his iron-gray beard and to brush his hat the wrong way, I am convinced he might walk into the House of Lords and tell the peers that the British Constitution is not adapted for business purposes.

Our talk began about "electrons," those invisible charges of electricity which are said to be the ultimate subdivision of the atom—the last thing in matter, I asked for some kindergarten figure that would make the electron real to me.

The Mighty Atom.

The professor stroked his beard. "Imagine," said he, speaking with incisiveness, as becomes the head of Birmingham's University, "a church 200 feet long, 80 feet wide, and 50 feet high, and scattered throughout the interior of this a thousand electric charges, each the size of the ordinary full-stop of a newspaper. That is how electrons feel inside the atom!"

"Room enough for each to expand into quite a handsome semi-colon," I said.

"Yes, there is plenty of room; but they occupy the atom, nevertheless, as soldiers occupy a country; they make it impenetrable by reason of the forces they exert. They are violently energetic."

"And this electron is really the last thing in matter?"

"So far as we know. Splendid work by J. J. Thomson of Cambridge and others has helped us to our present knowledge on the subject."

"You haven't got to the last thing in the spritual kingdom at present?"

"I am not sure that we have got hold of the first."

I said how great and comforting a thing it was that psychical research should be in the hands of such men as himself, Sir William Crookes, Mr. Arthur Balfour, Prof. Barratt, and the Bishop of Ripon.

"For the life of me," said Sir Oliver, "I cannot understand the man in the street's attitude toward the Psychical Society. Why is it that the man of business and the man of hard-headed sense regard the psychical investigator as a ghost-hunting crank? Are we to stick to the visible world, and leave the invisible out of account? Is the optic nerve to be the linch-pin of the wheel of progress? If so, let astronomy stick to the 6,000 stars visible to man's eye, and forget the 100,000,000 revealed to us by the telescope and the photographic film. Even our dear little friend the electron must go, and the sternest materialist will have to go into mourning for his atom—'though lost to sight, to memory dear,' with a vengeance."

The professor has a shrewd humor—another likeness to Lord Salisbury.

The Great Misunderstood.

"No, a great deal of nonsense is talked about things invisible. Physical science has long been groping and stumbling in that world, and psychical science is only following its example. The modern tendency of science is toward the invisible kingdom. The more we exhaust the physical world the fuller our hands become of ions and electrons, the more shall we find ourselves pushed into the other territory. Science is something like poor Jo—not my friend in Birmingham—to whom the policeman of progress is continually approaching with his order to move on.

"Science is not unlike poor Jo in other respects. It has had rather a rough time of it in the world. The Church did not go out of its way to be kind at the start, and it has never been a very enthusiastic godmother. And, mark—every branch of science has been ridiculed at its beginning, so that we must not ex psychical science to appeal so forcibly to the popular imagination as a novel by Mr. Hall Caine or the servant problem. Nevertheless, I cannot see why the man in the street, the man in the omnibus, and that extraordinarily brilliant fellow, the man in the club, should dispose of the Psychical Society in a single word as 'cranks.' If he would take the trouble to read our proceedings or get a talk with Alfred Russel Wallace, he would discover that there really are some things in the world which 'no fellow can understand.'

"And, you see, the Psychical Society has demolished more superstitions and laid more ghosts than any other body in the world! So it is a little unfair of our good-natured friend, the man in the street, to rail and sneer and shrug his shoulders. He has got to recognize, sooner or later, that psychical research—that is to say, inquiry into the occult phenomena of existence—is as much a science as surgery or botany."

"You think that the sympathy of the world is necessary?"

"Not positively necessary; but the sympathy and thought of the world is a propelling energy, and the phenomena only occur to human beings, so they are an essential factor in the problem. If there was more of this sympathy at the back of learning, for instance, the Treasury would be empowered and compelled to do more for higher education. It is one of the big pities of life that Englishmen do not devote a portion of their extraordinary zeal for religious dissension and party politics to the unifying cause of knowledge. We ought to have grown out of bickerings by this time; everything that splits the country or divides its energy is to be deplored. Unify; unify. We want an intellectual Bismarck in this country—a man to bind up all the disintegrating forces into one body pushing straight ahead for truth."

Toward the Invisible.

"And the tendency of science itself is toward the invisible?"

"Yes, you call it the invisible, but you might equally call it the unsmellable. Our sense organs are very limited in their scope, and scientific study enables us to transcend them in all sorts of directions. I should call it the insensible—unless that is ambiguous; the insensible which is as much part and parcel of existence as the sensible.

"Astronomy, you see, is more and more studying the vast universe of invisible stars, and the invisible ether is now harnessed to the service of man. Why should we stop here? It isn't as if psychical research went outside the world in quest of mysteries; the mysteries are here, all about us, as densely populated as the atom is with electrons. You may turn the blaze of the sun into a key for unlocking the mysteries of winds and waves, rain, hail, rivers, and all the manifold activities of the earth; but you will have to blow into that orifice till your cheeks crack before you will get it to turn in the lock of life. Science, so far, remember, cannot account for the life of the simplest cell barely visible under the microscope."

"And the search now is for the master key?"

"Well, we have examined the lock pretty thoroughly, and I think it is about time we cast about for the key."

"That is the tendency of modern science?"

"We are moving on."

"It would be well to hammer this fact upon the public consciousness; it helps to exalt life."

"Sympathy is a great force."—Harold Begbie in London Mail.

HE IS SULTAN NOW.

Report Says Muley Mohammed, Moroccan Sultan's Brother, Has Been Proclaimed Ruler at Fez.

Madrid, April 23.—A special despatch from Melilla, Morocco, says Muley Mohammed, the Sultan's brother, has been proclaimed Emperor at Fez.

Advices from Ceuta, Morocco, say the Kabyle tribesmen besieging the port of Tetuan have sent an ultimatum to the Pasha in command of the Sultan's forces, demanding the dismissal of the Sultan's tax collectors and saying that otherwise they will attack Tetuan. The Pasha refused the demand of the Kabyles, and appealed to all men capable of bearing arms to assist in the defence of the town.

Melilla Abandoned.

Tangier, Morocco, April 23.—Muley Amrani, an uncle of the Sultan, arrived here yesterday from Melilla with the customs officials and all the Government customs property. Melilla has been abandoned by the Government.

THE HILL OF TARA.

For 500 Years the Centre and Heart of the Irish Monarchy.

Mr. Bryce, M.P., spoke recently before members of the Irish Literary Society on "The Hill of Tara." Tara, he said, for three hundred years had remained the centre and heart of the Irish monarchy, or what was understood as a monarchy. It was the scene of the triennial assemblies, like those at Delphi, where the poets sang, the lawyers argued, and the harpists harped, and also, as the poets had described, where everyone drank all the week. (Laughter.) Tara was about twenty-two miles northwest of Dublin, in County Meath. The top of the hill was nearly 500 feet above sea level, and is raised about 200 feet above the surrounding country. Although there were places of interest to antiquarians, such as Stonehenge, Avebury, Penrith, and Orkney, which had a history later than that of Tara, there were no data concerning them. They knew more about Tara, for events of the second century were clearly indicated. Tara remained the centre of Irish Government down to 560 A.D. It was recorded that St. Patrick visited there in 433 A. D., and there succeeded in alienating the Gaelic people from their old belief. After that the place was cursed by the priests, and finally abandoned. The Kings of Ireland still, however, retained the name of Tara in their official designation. The hill was the capital of a kingdom which should make people realize the many-sided life of a primitive people, the home of the ecclesiastic, the legal, the political and festive life of a nation. He could not understand how it was an ignorant, spiteful, private owner should be allowed to spoil and destroy that which ought to belong in reason and equity to the whole people.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Has Favorably Balanced Brain, With Moral Brain Well Represented.

From the new biography of the Prince of Wales by Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes, author of a life of King Edward, it appears that a phrenologist has pronounced the Prince "to have a favorably-balanced head, and an organization showing a fair share of energy and conservative power, with a moral brain well represented." He was a man, said this scientific wiseacre, who had a full degree of sympathy and interest in the welfare of others. The tone of his mind was elevated, and the temperament, as a whole, indicated refinement and quality of texture. He had versatility of talent, though in his general character the Prince was rather reserved and not indiscreet in expressing his feelings. He was methodical, easy in his manners, enjoyed society, and was much interested in the young. He could show considerable pluck and power to endure hardships as a soldier, but if he had his choice he would prefer to distinguish himself in some other way besides hard fighting. He would "do better as an administrator than he would be as a general in war, and would encourage peace and quietness rather than war and tumult," etc. Last of all, he would be able to command respect wherever he went or in whatever he did.

As for his hobbies—which also indicate character as well as head bumps—we learn from the Prince's biographer that, apart from certain kinds of sport he "is probably most fond of collecting stamps. . . This is so well known that specimens which the donors believe to be extremely rare are constantly sent to him as presents." Then, too, the Prince "possesses a considerable collection of comic pictures of babies and children; indeed, anything containing sketches of little people immensely amuses him, and he does not disdain advertisement posters intended to puff some baby's food or other." Moreover, "it may not be generally known that H. R. H. is a pigeon-fancier and has a loft at Sandringham"; that he is deeply interested in agriculture, and that after visiting the Royal Counties Show at Southampton in 1893, he "formally, though unostentatiously, became one of the farmers of England," like his great-great-grandfather, surnamed "Farmer George" III., before him. Apart from the opinion of the phrenological expert, perhaps the most entertaining document quoted by Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes is the Prince's "horoscope," first published in 1868, which declared that H. R. H. started life with a truly Royal nativity. There was nothing, it ran, to indicate an early death, "though the Prince would occasionally suffer from cough, chest affections and headache." If he lived the Prince would become King of England under the title of George V. "England would be proud of the fifth George, and his fame would descend to posterity as one of the wisest and best Monarchs. He would be married to a charming Princess in his 28th year."

Thrown From Buggy and Drowned.

Calgary, N. W. T., April 23.—The body of John Christie, a rancher, was found near here Tuesday. At the inquest it was concluded he had been thrown from his buggy, which was found, along with the horse, near the body, into a pool of water, and drowned. His brother died within about 100 yards of where he was found, under conditions almost identical. The Christies originally came from Ottawa.

Mequinez Pillaged.

Tangier, Morocco, April 23.—Tribesmen have attacked and pillaged Mequinez. Thirty-seven inhabitants of the town and 13 tribesmen were killed in the fighting.

CONGRESS OF RATS.

Delegates From All Parts Took Part in Recent London Convention—Some Tricks of the Fraternity.

The London Express of February 23rd said: The international congress of rats now in session in the Strand district is receiving the unsympathetic and undivided attention of the human inhabitants of the neighborhood. Rat-catchers state that delegates are present from Japan, China, Singapore, Ceylon, Persia, Turkey, Morocco and New York. They can tell the different species by their fur and the curves in their tails. An experienced catcher who works in the Tilbury docks informed an Express representative on Saturday that seafaring rats were leaving the vessels in swarms and traveling to the Strand by easy stages. As an instance of this he said that the conductor of a Blackwall 'bus which stopped last Thursday night for five minutes outside the East India dock gates shortly afterwards found three rats under the seat. The rat-catcher stated that he only caught eleven rats on the Atlantic liner Minneapolis last week, and on the Minnetonka, belonging to the same company, he did not secure any. To prove the fact that the nautical rodents were joining forces with those in the Strand a Poplar ratcatcher caught a large China rat on board a steamer in the West India docks, which had just arrived from the east, and set it free again after having attached a tin label to its neck with a piece of wire. That was on February 10th, and the identical rat was caught on Saturday afternoon in Wellington street as he was about to enter a shop. He is now safe in a cage at a dog-fancier's shop in St. Martin's lane.

Formerly the far eastern and London rats used to tranship at Singapore, where it was a curious sight in the evening to watch a long procession of them climbing along the hawsers. Now, according to the officers of the P. and O., the foreign rodents have changed their habits, and come right through to London, where they land in hungry crowds—just like any other undesirable aliens.

WHY?

Why do women continue to endure suffering caused by womanly diseases? There are many answers to that question. Sometimes because they have exhausted the skill of local physicians and remain uncured. At other times it is because they shrink from submitting to obnoxious examinations which local physicians deem necessary. And to sum it all up, they endure suffering because they do not know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries disagreeable drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I enjoy good health; thanks to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. J. J. Schuetzer, of Pontiac, Livingston Co., Ill. "I was taken sick and the doctors here called it 'Grip.' I lay for four weeks in bed, then when I got up I found I had 'displacement.' Had such aches and pains in my back and limbs could not stand any length of time. I knew that our home doctor would insist the first thing on an examination, and that I would not submit to, unless I was dangerously sick. My son had your book, 'Common Sense Medical Adviser,' and I thought from reading it that Dr. Pierce's medicine would do me more good than all the home doctors—and so it has. I can truly say I was surprised at the benefit I received. I can do all my washing and also tend my flower garden. In fact I am on my feet most all the time. An old friend of mine said to me, 'Why what is the matter with you? You are getting young again.' I told her I had taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's medicines, and that if she would do likewise she would feel ten years younger, too."

GAMEY CHARGES INVESTIGATION.

AT THE FACTORY.

At the afternoon session Mr. Blake continued the examination of Mr. Sullivan.

Mr. Blake—You remember, Mr. Sullivan, where we left off. We had just got to the time where Mr. Gamey made the arrangement to go down to the Crossin factory. Now, did you write to anyone about this plot being formed? A.—No.

Q.—Did you inform anyone of it? A.—I told my father part of it.

Q.—When? A.—On Monday evening.

Q.—Tell anyone else? A.—No.

Q.—No member of the Government? A.—No.

Q.—Anyone in the department where you were? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Didn't mention to any other person of this plot against the Government? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What part did you tell your father? A.—Just about him wanting me to go down to the factory.

Q.—It was there you were to get the money, according to the statement? A.—No, I don't think so. I just wanted to see how far he would go in this matter.

Q.—He said he could get the money? A.—Yes.

Q.—The meeting at the piano factory, I understand, was just to see that you would carry the story out? A.—Rehearse the story.

Q.—Did you go to the piano factory? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you get the money? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you talk about money? A.—There was some mention made of money at the piano factory.

Q.—He stated that he would give you money at this meeting? A.—Well, we were to talk the matter over. The result did not pan out as we expected.

Q.—Not as you expected? A.—I was not surprised.

Q.—Some people are never surprised, but the hand was there ready to receive? A.—No, I would not have taken the money.

Q.—Was anything said at the factory of payment by him to you of a sum of money? A.—No.

Q.—What did you go to the factory for? A.—We went to rehearse the story and see how it would go.

Q.—Who would judge? A.—I don't know. The men behind the piano, perhaps.

Q.—Mr. Gamey, as you stated, thought it was well to tell the Manitoulin people that he had received money? A.—Well, he said his Conservative friends there had been after him.

Q.—His answer in Manitoulin was that he had been bought with money? A.—That is the story he wanted me to corroborate. He said he told this story because they chased him around, and he made it up.

Q.—Did this satisfy them? A.—I cannot say.

Q.—How would it satisfy the Conservative electorate to tell them that he had been bought by money? A.—I can't answer that.

Q.—Well, how can it benefit the member? A.—He said: "We will defeat the Government on this, and I am going to be appointed Minister of Mines."

Q.—Well, tell me how it would satisfy his constituents to tell them he had been bought? A.—I don't know. I cannot judge.

Q.—It appears so unlikely that is anyone else but yourself had stated it you would have doubted? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Then let me ask you about the interview—if anything was said at the interview upon the question of the payment of money to you by Mr. Gamey? A.—He did not discuss the payment of money to me at all.

Q.—Did Mr. Gamey say, at that inteview, that the Manitoulin people didn't think he got any money out of the deal? A.—No.

Q.—In that respect you differ from Price and Kinney? A.—I don't think that he mentioned it.

Q.—Upon that point are you clear? A.—Pretty clear.

Q.—So clear you will absolutely pledge your oath? A.—I would not say

Q.—I should think that would have struck you at once as opposed to what he told you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, I ask you if he said these people didn't think he got any money out of the deal? A.—I cannot say.

Q.—Do you recollect anything of the conversation that took place that evening, so as to be able to give the language used? A.—Well, I have a recollection of the line of conversation; I don't think I remember every word that was said.

Q.—Did you say that Stratton was uneasy? A.—I may have said that, yes.

Q.—Your memory would be in favour of your having said that? A.—Yes, I may have said that.

Q.—I would scarcely say that you would have stated that if you did not believe it to be true? A.—Well, I was there for a purpose, you know.

Q.—For the purpose of getting the money? A.—I had gone there to see how far the man would go, and to persuade him that that was a very bad course to pursue.

Q.—You had let him go very long in this course; why did you want to bring him up short? A.—I wanted to see how far he would go. My father, when I had told him about it, told me to go down and see how far he would go.

INFLUENCE WITH STRATTON.

Q.—You said you had two objects in view, one to see how far he would go, and the other to try and persuade him of his wrong course. You did much more of the former than of the latter? A.—Well, I don't know that I did much to restrain him.

Q.—Did you also say to him that Stratton wanted to see you every day? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—You were stating the truth, then? A.—I don't suppose I was telling him all the truth; my idea was to get Gamey to believe that all I had to do was to go up to the Parliament Buildings, snap my fingers, and down came the Ministers.

Q.—And he believed that? A.—Yes, he certainly did.

Q.—Possibly he had good reason to believe it? A.—Yes, perhaps.

Q.—Four Ministers in one vest pocket and three in the other? A.—Well, we won't discuss how, but I had him believing that, all right.

Q.—The next thing was that Stratton, being anxious, insisted on seeing you every day? A.—I said that; but I said lots there that night but—

Q.—I suppose, uneasy about the position of Mr. Gamey, and what he might say and do? A.—I don't think I said about any particular thing; that was part of my—

Q.—Was there any other matter that you then brought up, except the Gamey matter, to make Stratton seem anxious to see him from day to day? A.—No.

Q.—You told him, of course, that you were favoured in being able to get into Mr. Stratton's office whenever you liked? A.—Yes; that I had just to walk up there, brush the members aside, and go right in.

Q.—Just "Open sesame"? A.—Yes that's it.

Q.—Didn't you talk about the mining deal? A.—That was the one that had been spoken about as the Miller deal.

Q.—Did you say that Stratton would have to put it through? A.—No, I don't think so. I thought we could put that through—on my oath — well, I wouldn't swear one way or the other.

Q.—Did you state that the whole Government knew of this Gamey arrangement? A.—No; I stated that the whole Government knew that Gamey was going to support them—that is the conversation, as nearly as I can recall it.

Q.—You did say that? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—And these matters that I have asked you about up to this point, were they the truth, or were they drawing simply on the imagination of Frank Sullivan? A.—That was part of my plan; I wanted to get Gamey to believe that I was high up at the Parliament Buildings, because some of my opponents in these deals were people that were close up the other way.

Q.—What good would it do you at this interview to be—well, economical of the truth? A.—I thought I would let him go on in this deal, and then try and show him where he was wrong, and then the whole thing would drop.

Q.—When, in the conversation, did you first reach this wholly praiseworthy and righteous portion of the transaction? A.—I told him we would have to get our story in better shape if we were to carry the thing through.

Q.—That is the way you were pulling him up. Do you think that is very logical? A.—He had made a slip or two, and I wanted to show him how impossible it was to carry out a scheme like this when he could not remember from the day before what he wanted to say.

Q.—You said, "We must get the story in good shape"? A.—Yes, that we must have it in better shape.

Q.—Then you did proceed to carry out that scheme about the way in which the story was to be told? A.—Well, we got to one portion of it where I corrected him; that is, the portion about Stratton giving the money to Myers, and Myers taking it to the smoking room.

Q.—Was there during the whole of this conversation any other point at which you tried to put him right in his story? A.—I don't know.

Q.—In regard to that, you say you told him that he was in error? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I said, "That won't do, Bob."

Q.—Were you as familiar as that with a member of Parliament? Familiarity, you know, breeds contempt. A.—Yes, I said, "That's where you are weong; we have got to get that story right."

Q.—One of your objects was to restrain him, you said? A.—We haven't come to the restraining point yet.

Q.—How did you put it? A.—I said it was to be, Myers handed it to Chase, and Chase took it to the smoking room. He said he had forgotten that, but would make a note of it. He took a little book out of his pocket, put it on his knee, and wrote it down.

Q.—Did you see that he was drawing you on at that time? Well, I was covering myself pretty well. I didn't have very much faith in him. I don't know that I had any suspicion that he was drawing me out; I didn't see anything to be afraid of; I was not particular of how the conversation was going.

CASH FROM CONSERVATIVES.

Q.—"If Mr. Stratton kicks, you can pay the money back." Did you say that? A.—I did not say that if Mr. Stratton kicked, he could give the money back.

Q.—What was said that was so like it? A.—Mr. Gamey said he had been given funds to carry this out.

Q.—At what point did that take place? A.—On the way up.

Q.—I am asking about what occurred in the piano factory. A.—It occurred on the steps.

Q.—Leaving that, when you were in the piano factory, was there any statement that could be confused with that? A.—Only this. Gamey said: "If I don't carry through this deal the Conservatives will impeach me for taking money." He led me to believe he had money from his own party.

Q.—Will you swear that took place in the piano factory? A.—No.

Q.—Did anything take place that might be construed into it? A.—The only thing I can think of was what he said about impeaching.

Q.—Did that take place in the factory? A.—Yes.

Q.—Will you tell their Lordships what was said about the impeachment that they might construe into that? A.—Coming to the factory we were talking over this matter.

Q.—What took place in the piano factory? A.—He said that his own people would impeach him in the House.

Q.—You think that? A.—I do think that.

Q.—Did you mean that the money was to go back to Stratton, or to the Government? A.—I did not mention Stratton. He was to give the money back to his Conservative friends.

Q.—What led you to believe this? A.—In our conversation in the Parliament Buildings he led me to believe he had got money from his Conservative friends.

Q.—You think that? A.—I do think that.

Q.—What led you to believe that? A.—He offered me $2,000.

Q.—Anything else? A.—No.

Q.—You were in these transactions for money, just as in those in regard to timber licenses, and fishery licenses? A.—Yes. Just like Mr. Gamey.

ROUGH ON GAMEY.

Q.—Yes. Misery loves company. I don't think you better yourself by comparing yourself to Mr. Gamey. A.—I was in it to get my portion.

Q.—Did you take it? A.—I did not.

Q.—Why? A.—This was a different proposition.

Q.—It was for money? A.—The others were legitimate transactions.

Q.—You call the other deals legitimate? A.—Until he began to tempt his friends.

Q.—Why did you fault this? A.—Mr. Gamey offered me this to swear to a lie.

Q.—To what lie were you asked to swear? A.—He did not ask me to swear to a lie, but I knew if he told the story I should be called on to corroborate it.

Q.—You drew the line at this? Do you still draw it there? A.—I do, certainly.

Q.—Did he tell you where he was going to get the money? A.—I knew it would come from his own friends.

Q.—Weren't you one of his friends? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you say anything about the Cabinet going to sit on Stratton? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who of the Cabinet? A.—I don't know that I said. I said a lot—that was not exactly true.

Q.—Why? A.—I had to lead him to believe I was in it.

Q.—What is that? A.—That I stood well with the Ministers.

Q.—Was that true? A.—Yes, but I was not all powerful.

Q.—You could do a great deal? A.—I was acknowledged in my department but not out of it.

Q.—Did you say that Stratton sent two m n to g t evidence? A.—Gamey said that.

Q.—Was anything said about patronage. A.—Yes.

THE PATRONAGE.

Q.—What was it? A.—Mr. Gamey wondered if he would get the balance of the patronage, and I told him not to fear but he would if he supported the Government.

Q.—What made you think he would get the patronage? A.—It was the general way for the members who supported the Government to get the patronage. If the member did not support the Government, the defeated Reform candidate got it.

Q.—Did he speak of Mr. Spencer applying to be appointed license inspector? A.—He told me about Spencer applying, and I told him not to fear, his man would get it.

Q.—Did he tell you Sims had supported Spencer? A.—Yes, but I told him Sims was not the voting member.

Q.—Did you speak to him about your father saying to Sims that if you wanted anything, Mr. Gamey had the patronage? A.—Yes, I may have.

Q.—Did you say that you were sure Stratton would pay the rest of the money? A.—No.

Q.—You will swear to that? A.—Yes.

Q.—You know what these three men said? A.—Yes.

Q.—You differ with them? A.—Yes.

Q.—What can have been misunderstood in that way? A.—None, except as to the balance of the patronage.

Q.—But this is as to the balance of the money? A.—That is not so.

Q.—Did you say the Government will have to act right, because we have got them where we want them? A.—No.

Q.—Can you swear that, A.—I think I can swear.

Q.—I want your oath? A.—What is your question?

Q.—Did you say the Government will have to act right, we have got them where we want them? A.—I said the Government would have to act right, if you support them.

Mr. Blake—Did you say that you had the Government or Mr. Stratton just where you wanted them? A.—I swear I did not.

Q.—Did you say that the Government needed Gamey's vote now as much as ever they did? A.—Yes.

In reply to further questions, Mr. Sullivan laughed, and said: "Oh, I guess I said a lot of things in that conversation that I didn't believe."

X Q.—Was it a usual or an unusual conversation on your part? A.—Well, I never had a deal with a man like Gamey, and I may have been a little raw, and may have said a few things I should not have said.

Q.—Did you feel at a disadvantage with Mr. Gamey? A.—Not a bit.

Q.—Did you say that the Government was treating Mr. Evanturel right, that they had given him a room in the Parliament Buildings? A.—I think Mr. Gamey brought that up. Both he and I had heard about the rumour.

Q.—But you would know whether that was true or not? A.—No; I had no means of knowing.

Q.—Did you say: "If the Opposition gets on to those things the Government will never be able to hold the three Norths"? A.—I didn't say that. The three Norths were spoken of, but not in that way. Gamey asked if I had any information about the three Norths. He asked about my father, and I told him that my father had not been nearer the three Norths than at Palmerston at New year's. We may have talked over the prospects of the Government holding the three Norths.

Q.—Was anything said about Mr. Gamey becoming Minister of Mines? A.—Not in the conversation in the piano factory. That was mentioned the day before in the Parliament Buildings.

Q.—Did you say: "You'll have to get that story right"? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, about the registration of the letters at Yorkville—did Mr. Gamey ask you why you had done it? A.—Yes. I said that Yorkville was close to where I lived, and that I didn't register them at the Parliament Buildings. I don't think I explained to him that the post office at the Parliament Buildings closed at four o'clock.

Q.—Did you state that you could get a scarehead line put in the World? A.—Yes. (Laughing.)

Q.—Did you know that you could? A.—Well, that was said as a wind-up to the conversation.

Q.—Whether as a wind-u- or as a wind-down, did you know you could do that? A.—No. It was in a line with the rest of the conversation.

Q.—You can't explain the vagaries of the human mind? A.—No.

Q.—Did you say that you were sorry Davis had not been defeated? A.—I may have. That was because Lennox was a friend of mine.

Q.—Did you state that Stratton had asked you, "Can that man Gamey be trusted? A.—I may have said it.

Q.—Will you kindly tell me what took place with Mr. Stratton, which might be construed that Mr. Stratton had asked you, "Can that man Gamey be trusted"? A.—I don't know.

Q.—You might have said it yourself? A.—Yes, any time the conversation lagged, I helped it along.

Q.—Now your X.Y.Z. letter is on the 11th. Look at this one on the 7th. That is exhibit 28. You have written that, have you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, this letter of the 11th, do you write on the typewriting machine? A.—Yes, but I am not an expert.

Q.—Thiel etter begins: "I understand that they are holding a meeting at Gore Bay on the 16th." Now, what does this refer to? A.—I had a letter from Mr. Gamey.

Q.—You had a letter from Mr. Gamey of what date? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Where is it? A.—I destroyed it, I guess.

Q.—Have you a remembrance that you destroyed the letter? A.—I have a remembrance of destroying all my letters from Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Do you pursue this course with all your letters A.—Yes.

Q.—No place at the building where you keep them A.—No place.

Q.—Notwithstanding the oath of Mr. Gamey, you will swear that you received al etter from him the date of which you do not remember? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Was it a duplicate of this letter? A.—I do not think it was.

Q.—Then you wanted to say something about some understanding you had? A.—Yes.

Q.—What understanding? A.—When Mr. Gamey left me that night after giving the Globe interview in the Parliament Building, he said to me, "I will get raked over the coals when I get home. Will you find out for me what stand Mr. Beatty took?" and I said yes. I said, "I will write a few letters to keep up your courage if that is all you want."

FRANK FORD'S TYPEWRITER.

Sullivan confirmed his written assertion to Gamey that the latter's resignation was talked of in a conversation in the Walker House, in which McGregor took part.

Q.—Was this typewritten memo written by you? A.—Mr. Frank Fork made the copy for me. He's in the Attorney-General's Department, I think. I wrote it during two days in lead pencil, and handed it to him. I gave it to him because we were very busy in our department.

Asked as to where he got the facts of what Beatty did, witness said he got it from conversations with his father and others.

Q.—Who were the others A.—I had heard discussions.

Q.—You had heard discussions between whom? A.—Can't say anyone in particular.

Q.—Well, whom in general? A.—I can't say.

Q.—I am asking you this question. You were asked regarding information you didn't have os know. With whom did you discuss it? A.—I got it partly from my father.

Q.—Now, this expression, "Seems to be grasping at straw, and chasing the phantom of power." Are you an orator?

Mr. Blake smiled sweetly, if sarcastically, as he waited for a reply.

"I haven't blossomed out as an orator," said Sullivan, with a responsive grin. "I wrote it several times," he added, referring to the advice to Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Had hou ever heard that expression before? A.—Possibly I may have.

Q.—And that was the advice you thought well to give Gamey? A.—Yes, at his request.

Q.—What is a phantom? Is it a timber limit you don't get? A.—Yes.

Q.—And a fishery you don't get? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remeber writing on February 20th? A.—I don't remember the dates. If you show me a letter, I'll tell you.

Q.—Do you remember writing letter, "Dear R. R., I called on man you spoke about?" A.—Yes.

Q.—That likely applies or refers to an earlier letter? A.—Gamey wrote me——

Q.—Never mind about that. Who was "the man you spoke to"? A.—Stratton.

Q.—The words are "man you spoke about," not "gentleman." Are you sure it was Stratton? A.—Yes.

Q.—Your letter says, "He wants you to send on list of License Inspectors and Board." Did you call on Stratton? A.—No.

Q.—You say that "Simms made a big kick about patronage." Is that right? A.—Yes.

Q.—You add, "But you have it all right." A.—As far as I could get it for him.

KEEPING GAMEY THINKING.

Q.—Were you playing with him? A.—I was keeping Gamey thinking.

Q.—Did you consider it your duty? A.—No, not my duty.

Q.—Of course, there can be no doubt that you gave Gamey to believe that you had seen Stratton? A.—No doubt at all.

Q.—He must have thought that Stratton wanted license list? A.—

Q.—What is this about the Nobles "doing the right thing"? A.—I had got two or three letters from them as to what was being done about it.

Q.—How was it that they came to you in respect to this part of the patronage? A.—I can't explain that; they called at my house one day.

Q.—How did they pick you out of all the employees ft the buildings? A.—I don't know; I can't say why.

Q.—You didn't think Noble was sent by Gamey? A.—I had that idea once, but I really don't know why he came.

Q.—"They are anxious now, and will be more so in a week or so." What is that? A.—Well, they had to order twine for their nets, and as the time got on they would get more anxious. Noble wanted me to write to Gamey.

Q.—You add to one of your letters, "Just retuned from seeing Mr. Stratton." Is that true? Surely, that is not made out of whole cloth? A.—When I got Gamey's letter I thought of going to see Stratton about the seat, etc. I wrote this letter in my own house, and left it unsealed, and I thought I would go and see Stratton When I went back to the buildings. Then I decided I wouldn't, but just slipped that in.

Q.—There is not a word of truth in it? A.—No; there is no truth in it. Well, I saw him in the hallway.

SOUGHT GAMEY'S CONFIDENCE.

Q.—Where did you get the idea to ask him in your letter to send names of license board at once? You prefaced this by saying Mr. Stratton thinks. A.—That would have been more proper if I had said Sullivan thinks.

Q.—Why did you act this way all through? A.—I wanted Mr. Gamey's confidence. I wanted to get these deals put through.

Q.—What other purpose had you in view in acting this way? A.—I don't think there was any.

Q.—Do you know Mr. H. N. Passmore? A.—I don't know; if he's the Telegram reporter I have seen him.

Q.—Had you any conversation on Tuesday morning last? A.—He followed my father and me out of the Walker House.

Q.—Had you conversation with him regarding this Gamey matter? A.—He asked my father if he knew where Mr. Gamey was.

Q.—But yourself? A.—I may have put in a word now and then.

Q.—Did you say, "I got $1500 out of it up to to-day"? A.—I did not.

Q.—Was not his answer, "You did, eh"? And did you not say, "You bet I did"? A.—I certainly did not.

Q.—Not anything that could be construed into such a conversation? A.—Most certainly not.

Q.—How long have you known D. A. Jones? A.—I don't know him except by sight.

Q.—That's what I want to know. A.—Oh, I have known him by sight since last August or September.

Q.—Do you remember a conversation you had with Mr. Gamey on the Saturday after the statement in the House? A.—Yes, I was standing in the Walker House and saw Gamey. I walked down the hall and stood looking out of the window.

AN OFFER OF $5,000.

Gamey then went to the telephone box. I was standing talking to two friends. Gamey went down to the dining room and nodded for me to come. I did not move. Did you see that sign, one of my friends asked. "Yes," I said. Gamey walked back and faced me and made another sign and went out doors, when he nodded again. I asked my father if I would follow. He said yes, so I went out.

Mr. Blake—How old are you? A.—Twenty-eight. He went down to the depot and wanted me to go in. I said "No, come out on the sidewalk and talk." Then he started to talk. I said, "I won't talk here," and we walked back to the hotel and stood in front of the bar room door. Mr. Gamey said, "I am in this thing, and I want you to stick by me. I'll give you $5,000 if you will corroborate the story." I told him I would not have anything to do with him. "I can get the money," he said. "My solicitor knows you did not get any money. He'll arrange to pay you the $5,000. I'll give you $2,000 and $5,000 on top of it." I said "No," and then I saw Mr. Thompson, Whitney's private secretary, inside the door. I hallood to him. I had made a point not to stand close to Gamey, so no one could say that I was talking to him on the quiet.

Q.—At what hour was that? A.—About noon.

Q.—Was that the week after? A.—No; Saturday afternoon.

Q.—The first Saturday after the statement? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have another interview? A.—No, Gamey came two or three times and talked to me about it. "We can arrange this," he said. "I have told Mr. McPherson to see you get looked after. You can have $2,000 and $5,000 on top of it."

Q.—Did you believe him? A.—I do not know what to believe. He also said they would overthrow the Government and he would be Minister of Mines.

Q.—On this same Saturday afternoon? A.—Yes.

Q.—I was asking you if there was anything further? A.—He came down four or five times.

Q.—Did anything pass between you? A.—Not a thing.

Q.—Any conversation? A.—He told me several times he could make the arrangement.

Q.—Were there any persons around who could hear? A.—No. We both took good care not to be in the hearing of anyone.

Q.—You speak for yourself in that? A.—Yes, but I think that we both did.

At this point Chancellor Boyd adjourned the court till to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

GAMEY CHARGES INVESTIGATION.

The Conclusion of Mr. Frank Sullivan's Evidence.

GAMEY'S STORY IS DISCREDITED.

Frank Ford Explains the Mystery of the Type Written Letters —Vain Search Through Bank Books for Evidence of Large Withdrawals of Money.

The examination of Frank Sullivan was concluded to-day in a much shorter interval than was expected. Mr. Blake finished his examination-in-chief in 15 minutes after the court opened, although predictions had been made that he would take half a day. Under cross-examination by Mr. Johnston, Sullivan was even more emphatic than yesterday in his contractions of Gamey's story. His manner in the box was much quieter and more reserved. He repeatedly denied the money parts of the Gamey story, and differed at various other points.

Mr. Frank Ford, Solicitor to the Treasury, gave evidence which explained all the mystery about some of the typewritten documents. He said that he had written the Globe interview, the typewritten enclosure in Sullivan's X. Y. Z. letter, and the letter signed by Mr. Gamey in Mr. Aylesworth's office. He had in each case done the work as a favour, and had always used the machine in his former office, that of the Secretary to the Attorney-General. The machine there he had come to look on as an old friend.

Just before adjournment for luncheon, Mr. Bartlett, paying teller in the Ontario Bank, was called. He was examined by Mr. Ritchie, with the evident intention of disclosing whether any sum of $3,000 had been paid out to Mr. Stratton during the early part of September last.

"Good morning, Mr. Sullivan."

"Good morning, Mr. Blake."

This was the opening remark between Mr. Blake and Mr. Sullivan at the opening of the Gamey-Stratton case to-day.

Q.—What day was it you resigned? Q A.—11th of March.

Q.—Was it by letter or verbal? A.—By letter.

Here Mr. Sullivan unbuttoned his coat.

Mr. Blake—Oh, I see you have a copy of the letter.

The witness—No, I was just expanding a bit.

Q.—Did you resign after a conference? A.—No; I decided myself.

Q.—Not dismissed? A. No; I resigned.

Q.—It was on the 10th the statement was made in the House? A.—No, on the 11th.

Q.—Mr. Gamey refused to deliver up a letter to Mr. Aylesworth on the 10th because something that was wanted was not fixed up? A.—No; he signed the letter and handed it back to Mr. Aylesworth.

Q.—The letter would not be absolutely delivered to Mr. Aylesworth because something had not been done? A.—No, not that way.

Q.—The loan had nothing to do with the letter? A.—No.

Q.—Why did the letter not remain with Mr. Aylesworth? A. — Because there was some dispute about the use to be made of the letter.

Q.—When did you next see the letter? A.—I have never seen it since.

Q.—Were you there when the letter was finally delivered? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know at what time the letter was delivered later? A.—No.

Q.—Were you at the Parliament buildings on the day of the delivery of the letter? A.—No, only part of it.

Q.—At the end of January, in respect to the typewritten letter with the Globe interview, did you see that? A.—No.

Q.—You did not see the Globe interview to know it to be an interview either at the Parliament building or at the Walker House? Mr. Sullivan said he had not, and explained that he had seen Mr. Gamey and Mr. Hammond of the Globe together in Mr. Stratton's office. Then he knew that Mr. Gamey was to give an interview to the Globe.

Q.—How did you know? A.—Mr. Gamey told me.

Q.—How did you accompany him to the building? A.—I knew that he would be up there, and I met him, but I didn't know what Mr. Gamey wanted at the Parliament buildings until he came out of Mr. Stratton's office. There were two visits on that day, and I accompanied him both times.

Q.—The second time Mr. Gamey visited the buildings did you accompany him or meet him there? A.—I met him in the buildings.

Q.—Was that before or after the interview? A.—Before.

Q.—Did you wait until the interview was over? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.Did he say at any time he took a copy of the interview down at the Walker House? A.—In the afternoon he said he had an interview, and said he wanted to make some corrections.

Q.—Then he went out and returned with you? A.—Yes.

Q.—What time would have elapsed between when he informed you about the typewritten interview and the time it was given? A.—2.30 the first time and six or after six when he gave the interview.

Q.—Why remain so late? A.—I had work to do, and promised Mr. Gamey that I would wait for him.

Q.—Had you on that day telephoned to Mr. Gamey that Mr. Stratton would see him at 2.15? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—From where did you telephone? A.—From the Public Works Department.

Q.—Was it Mr. Stratton who asked you to send the telephone? A.—I didn't speak to Mr. Stratton at all, and he didn't tell me to send any message to Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Was it simply your own opinion that Mr. Stratton would meet him at 2.15? A.—Mr. Gamey asked me the night before to find out when Mr. Stratton would be in.

Q.—How did you find out that Mr. Stratton would be in? A.—I telephoned, and Mr. Myers, I believe, answered the telephone.

UNDER CROSS-EXAMINATION

Mr. Johnston at this point took up the cross-examination of the witness. In reply to various questions Sullivan replied that he had been in the employ of the Government for about a year and a half, from October the year previous to last fall. He had been an occasional clerk, not on the regular pay roll, an assistant accountant on the Public Works Department at $2 a day.

Q.—Is that all the money you have received from the Government? A.—Yes.

Q.—No other favours as far as you are concerned? A.—Not any.

Q.—From the members of the Government? A.—No.

Q.—From any member of the House as Mr. Gamey, for instance? A.—No, sir.

Q.—When you saw the statement in the House you thought the proper course was to resign? A.—Yes.

Q.—At $2 per day you were not very anxious to retain it? A.—No, not particularly.

Q.—When did you first learn that Mr. Gamey intended to support the Government? A. — He told me at the Walker House.

Q.—Did he give you any reason? A.—Yes; he said that his constituency needed a man to support the Government to be able to do anything for the riding. He also said a number of Grits had supported him.

Q.—His district is a comparatively new one, and one that requires roads and other works which the older districts would not need? A.—Yes.

Q.—What stand did you take? A.—I questioned him further, and he said he did not want to be a mere voting machine for the Conservatives—he wanted to have some part in the Government.

Q.—Did he say anything about what would be the result to him and to you from this supporting the Government? A.—No, he did not mention anything.

Q.—When was patronage first mentioned? A.—I can't say exactly, somewhere along in August. He said he supposed if he supported the Government he would get the patronage.

Q.—Was Mr. Beatty's name mentioned? (Mr. Beatty was elected for Parry Sound and said that he would give the Government an independent support.) A.—Yes.

Q.—Who first spoke about deals, concessions from the Government, etc.? A.—I don't know; I won't accuse Mr. Gamey of that. It occurred to both that something might be made out of the new lands, mines, etc., in New Ontario.

Q.—Is his statement true that on the sidewalk in front of the Walker House you and he made an arrangement to divide the money? A.—His statement in that connection is a falsehood.

Q.—Where did you talk on these matters? A.—In the hotel around the corridors. My father boards there and I often take my meals there.

Q.— Did you ever talk to him about getting his protest dropped? A.—No.

Q.—Had you any authority to do so, or for any protest? A.—No.

Q.—His statement about talking a stock deal to Mr. Grant, is that true? A.—No, sir.

To Chancellor Boyd—We had talked of the McGregor Island deal.

Mr. Johnston — Did Mr. Gamey tell you anything about the endeavour to disqualify him? A.—He told me that he had heard they had got evidence up in Manitoulin to disqualify him, and that was what brought him down. He had spoken to my father and told me to find out what he knew.

Sullivan said that he did not say to Gamey that evidence could be bought, got, fixed, switched, or words to that effect. Neither had Sullivan said to Gamey that it was pretty close for the Government, that Gamey could go in and that $5000 could be made.

THREATS FOR GAMEY.

Q.—Did Gamey's position change as to his intention to support the Government between the time he told you in August and when the House met? A.—No.

Q.—Was he wavering to your notice? A.—Not till the day previous to the opening of the House.

Q.—Anything then as to the cause? A.—He told me that his friends had got after him, and had made threats. I understood from him that the inducement for which he made the statement was that he was to be Minister of Mines in the Conservative Government.

Q.—Did he complain about not getting the patronage of the Island? A. Yes. He said that he did not seem able to make much progress with appointments.

Q.—Did he complain of deals not materializing? A.—About McGregor Island, but I explained that there was an island dispute between the two Governments.

Q.—You know there had been applications for McGregor Island for twelve years? A.—Yes.

Q.—You know of the dispute between the Ontario and the Federal Governments? A.—Yes.

Q.—You know there were men in Ottawa trying to get the island? A.—Yes.

During the fall of 1902 Frank Sullivan had seen Gamey frequently, and there was then no sign of weakening on Gamey's part, so Sullivan thought Gamey would support the Government.

Q.—Your correspondence did not begin till February? A.—I had lots with him.

Q.—Then he hasn't produced all your letters? A.—No, he hasn't.

Q.—More than the three letters he has produced? A.—Yes, lots more.

The correspondence Gamey did produce was written for a purpose, so far as the Ontario Government, witness said; but the subject matter of Sullivan's other letters referred to deals between Gamey and Sullivan.

Q.—Can you tell us the subject matter of letters other than those produced? A.—I wrote Gamey about the Noble letter and about pulpwood.

A letter from H. H. Colyer and addressed to Captain John Sullivan, relating to pulpwood was read.

Frank Sullivan wrote to Gamey on February 11th, 1903.

Q.—Then, did you send a letter about February 1st to Gamey? A.—Yes, I sent one re Noble business and lake fishery. I registered the letter at the Parliament Buildings.

In the fall, too, Gamey and Sullivan had had a deal on. This was during the fuel famine and they decided to sell some island wood to Toronto. Sullivan interviewed Mayor Howland on the subject.

Q.—At any time did you hear any threats from him with reference to the Government? A.—No threats at all.

Q.—Any threatening language? A.—No.

Q.—Did he take any position as to the Opposition? Did he express himself in any way? A.—He expressed himself that he would support any party in power, whether it was Ross or Whitney.

As to witness' registered letters he knew Cressin's initials later, but he addressed himself as A.B., and signed himself X.Y.Z, so as to protect Gamey. He did not care for himself, for he finally did register as Frank J. Sullivan.

Q.—Something was said about a letter not being signed; were you in the habit of writing many letters on the typewriter, or only occasionally? A.—At that time only occasionally.

Q.—Had you ever made an omission of your signature before? A.—I remember writing a letter to the Manufacturers' Life Co., enclosing a cheek for $227, and I had the letter all sealed and ready to post, when I first thought that I had signed it, so I had to get a new envelope in the post office.

Q.—You thought the letter was signed until it appeared in court? A.—Yes, since the discussion came up about it; that is the only time I thought it was not my letter, but I certainly never repudiated it.

Q.—Mr. Aylesworth said that something about difficulty in lending money on chattels in Manitoulin was part of the conversation in his office? A.—There was something about Gamey wanting money, and about stocks or chattels; I am not positive about it.

Q.—You recall now that Mr. Aylesworth said something about Manitoulin? A.—Yes, he said something about the Island.

Chancellor Boyd here asked the witness, "Whatever was said, was it you spoke or Gamey?" A.—It was Gamey.

Mr. Johnston—Did you take any part in the conversation about the letter at all? A.—No, none at all, only to Gamey later on.

Q.—You didn't know how the letter had got from the Parliament Buildings to Mr. Gamey? A.—No; I don't know how the letter got there.

SWEEPING DENIALS.

Q.—He says there were some written agreements between you; is that true? A.—No; that is not true. Every understanding we had was merely verbal.

To Chancellor Boyd the witness made a sweeping denial that there were ever any written agreements of any kind between Gamey and himself.

Q.—You never got any money from the man at all? A.—No; never got a cent.

The Chancellor — Make that clear. Who is meant by "the man."

Mr. Johnston to witness — From Mr. Stratton either? A.—No.

Q.—Or Myers? A.—No.

Q.—Nor Chase? A.—No.

Q.—Did Chase bring any money to the smoking room? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—Was there any package brought there on that occasion? A.—No; never while I was there.

Q.—Was there any money given to you on the 29th January, in which it is said that Stratton gave the denomination of the bills, and that you opened it and gave Gamey half? A.—No.

Q.—Were you in the smoking room with Gamey on the 9th, 10th, or 11th of September? A.—No, I was not.

Witness gave particulars as to the location of the smoking room, describing it as a place of general resort both by employees of the buildings and the public. Witness had had some money, about $250 or $300,

Her Life Might Have Been Saved

Two-thirds of the inmates of our hospitals are women. They are in most cases either for treatment or for an operation, made necessary by advanced stages of female troubles which have resulted in ovaritis, a tumor, or displacement of the womb.

"AN OPERATION NECESSARY."

How these words after the examination strike terror to a woman's soul, and with what regrets she hears them, when she considers that the operation has become necessary through her own neglect. Female derangements cannot cure themselves, and neglecting the warnings of nature only means putting it off until there is no cure. The woman who lets her trouble make headway pays the penalty of a dangerous operation and a lifetime of impaired usefulness at the best, and the operation often proves fatal when her life might have been saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration; or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, and the blues, they should remember that there is one tried and never-failing remedy; Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound at once removes such troubles.

READ THE FOLLOWING LETTERS.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you how much good you have done me and how thankful I am to you for it. For five years I have not been free from pain for a day. I have had backaches, headaches, and those awful dragging sensations with leucorrhœa, and when menstruation appeared I was in such a condition I could hardly sit up. I doctored all the time, but nothing helped me, and I was told that an operation was necessary.

"Two months ago a friend suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No one knows what it has done for me and how thankful I am for it. It brought me the first well days I have had for five years. It did for me what doctors could not do, and I want every suffering woman to know about it."—LOUISE NAUER, 751 E. 166th St., New York City.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to thank you for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I had terrible hemorrhages, being lacerated from the birth of my child. The doctor told me that if I would have an operation I would be well and strong. I submitted to it, but was worse than before; no one knows what I suffered. Finally a friend advised me to try your Vegetable Compound; I did so, and commenced to feel better; I continued its use, and it has done for me what doctors could not do. I am strong and well. If women with any kind of female troubles would only consult you before submitting to an operation they would be spared many hours of pain and suffering. I cannot thank you enough for what you have done for me."—ANNA KIRCHHOFF, 156 E. 100th St., New York City.

GAMEY CHARGES INVESTIGATION.

which he got from Finn and McGann, at the completion of the harbour contract. His father had often assisted him in money matters, and he had got a couple of checks from him in October, November, or December. He was anxious to lead Gamey to believe that he had considerable influence with the Government.

Mr. Johnston—On the first day you introduced Mr. Gamey to Mr. Stratton, that is, on or about the 10th of September, did you hear anything said about "consideration"? A.—In the discussion I think Mr. Stratton said: "You'll receive the same consideration as any supporter of the Government."

Q.—Mr. Gamey then at that time said he was going to support the Government? A.—Yes.

SULLIVAN REBUKED.

A further question from Mr. Johnston brought forth a somewhat loquacious explanation, which was cut off sharply by the Chancellor, with "Don't talk so much. Mr. Sullivan, Confine yourself to the questions."

Mr. Johnston—Was there anything said about a consideration which would be given Gamey if he would support the Government? A.—No.

Q.—Nothing of that took place in your hearing? A.—No.

Mr. Johnston then took the evidence of Mr. Gamey, and read from it page by page, beginning at the statements relating to the alleged interview between Gamey, Stratton and Sullivan, to discuss patronage and the payment of money, and leading up to the carrying of the parcel to the smoking-room. Sullivan denied all the important points. He admitted taking Gamey to his room on the 9th of September, he thought. The question of something of value being passed was not discussed. Vance had not been discussed. He knew nothing of a letter being prepared which Mr. Gamey was to sign.

When the Gamey evidence regarding the receipt of the parcel in the smoking-room, telling of Sullivan picking up the envelope, and so on, was read, Mr. Johnston said: "What have you to say to that?" "That's a lie!" cried Sullivan.

Q.—Now I will tell you what Mr. Gamey says about the deal of January 29—reading from page 124 in the evidence of Mr. Gamey: "Frank was with me when I was conversing with Mr. Stratton about the Globe interview, and Sullivan said that if I would sign that interview I would get $1,000 in cash." Now, is that true? A.—No, sir.

Q.—This follows: Gamey says: "He and I went up to the Public Works Department that afternoon . . . . . After we came out of Mr. Stratton's office, Frank said we would get a thousand." Is that true? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were you and Gamey together in Mr. Stratton's private office on January 29? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Then he (Gamey) says: "When I was talking to the Globe reporter, Mr. Frank Sullivan came into the outer office of Mr. Stratton and said, 'I am rady now.'" Is that right? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Continued reading of evidence: "Frank Sullivan told me that Mr. Stratton had the $750 in his office and got $250 out of the Attorney-General's office." Was the Attorney-General's office mentioned? A.—No, sir.

Mr. Johnston continued to read Mr. Gamey's evidence, in which he described leaving the Parliament Buildings by the west and parting at the car.

Q.—Is that true? A.—It is all true except the money matter.

Chancellor Boyd—What was said between you, if anything, in discussing whether Smyth of Algoma could be bought or not? A.—Never a word said about that.

Q.—What was said about withdrawing the petition against Smyth? A.—Never said a word about it.

Q.—What was said about sawing off petition of Mr. Davis? A.—Nothing said.

IN PIANO FACTORY.

Mr. Johnston then led the witness to the story of the meeting at the piano factory.

Q.—Did you see anything inside the room that attracted your attention? A.—Yes.

Q.—What? A.—A wet umbrella.

Q.—Did you think it strange? A.—Rather.

Q.—Did you call Mr. Gamey's attention to it? A.—Yes, and he said he guessed the old man (Mr. Crossin) had left it for him.

Q.—Had you been there before? A.—On one or two occasions on business.

Q.—What was done with the candle? A.—I put it out after lighting the gas.

Q.—You knew the story on which you had agreed? A.—The substance.

Q.—At the Parliament Buildings whom did he say brought the money to the smoking-room? A.—He said Myers.

Q.—Did you correct him? A.—No.

Q.—Who shaped the conversation? A.—Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Did you originate anything? A.—Latterly.

Q.—As to any subject? A.—No.

Q.—Had you any suspicions at the time? A.—I can't say I had. When I saw the umbrella at first I had a little, but I went in.

Q.—Did you go toward the piano? A.—Latterly.

Q.—Were you intercepted? A.—Mr. Gamey stepped between me and the piano.

Q.—Did you think it significant? A.—I did, I could—

Q.—Was the conversation over? A.—There were a few more remarks.

Q.—You have heard the story of those young men? Is it the regular sequence? A.—No; I don't think it is.

Q.—Was it true that it was given by you as a confession? A.—No.

Q.—It was the story you were making up? A.—That was the object of our visit.

Q.—There were only two times you met Mr. Gamey at the Parliament Buildings by appointment? A.—Yes, in September and when the Globe interview was given.

Q.—The only occasions you were with him in Stratton's office? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was anything said by him in connection with that? A.—Yes, he said, those were the only two occasions on which we could prove we were together, and he had picked on them for the money transactions.

Q.—Were you disputing that? A.—No.

Q.—You talked more than has been reported? How long? A.—Yes, about an hour, or three-quarters.

THE STAKE GROWS TO $100,000.

Q.—Was anything said about $100,000? A.—Yes, I was the authority for that. I told Mr. Gamey if he stuck to his original plan to support the Government we could make $100,000 out of it.

Mr. Sullivan then said after leaving the Crossin piano factory they went to the hotel at the corner of Adelaide and Bay, had a drink and a cigar, and went down to King and Bay, where they parted.

Q.—On parting, what was your impression? A.—Gamey led me to believe he had decided to support the Government.

Q.—In the instructions Mr. Ford typewrote for you they were on your initiative? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Mr. Stratton know anything as to the correspondence? A.—No.

Q.—Did he know anything as to the deals you had with Gamey? A.—No.

Q.—Was he or any member of the Government consulted? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you show Mr. Stratton any letters? A.—No, I did not.

Q.—Did you know what effect it would have if these things were told to the Ministers?

This was disallowed by Chancellor Boyd.

"He asked that after reading the letters," commented Mr. Blake.

Chancellor Boyd—Do you know that any other Ministers of the Crown knew anything of these matters? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Have you any knowledge of any Minister knowing? A.—I think the Ministers knew Mr. Gamey was going to support the Government.

Q.—I mean about money? A.—No, sir.

When the Chancellor concluded Mr. Blake resumed his examination of the witness.

GAMEY WAS AMBITIOUS.

Q.—On what occasion did he mention about being made Minister of Mines? A.—The day before he made the statement in the House.

Q.—Never led up to it? A.—No.

Q.—That was his main ambition, you say? A.—His scheme seemed to be that.

Q.—For six months you had discussed matters with him, and during that time he had not said a word about it? A.—His scheme—

Q.—Nothing had been said before that day? A.—We had been negotiating along different lines.

Q.—Is that not the case? A.—We had been negot——

Q.—Answer me. Is that not the case. A.—Yes; we had been negotiating on different lines.

Witness was in Palmerston in June and part of July, and was there once in August. His uncle Cairns went to the Old Country, and he looked after his hotel in his absence. The uncle married and Sullivan attended a reception to him in August.

Mr. Blake questioned him sharply as to the remuneration he received, asking him if he did not receive perquisites apart from the $2 a day paid him by the Public Works Department.

A man of his ability would not be content with two dollars a day, suggested Mr. Blake.

Witness said that he was a contractor, too.

"You had opportunities?" asked Mr Blake.

"No," said the witness.

Q.—You had lake deals, fisheries, and so on? A.—Anyone around the Buildings who kept his eyes open could have the same.

"Plus the pickings?" insinuated Mr Blake.

"There were no pickings," returned Sullivan, with some warmth. "I got $2 a day from the department."

Q.—Your pay ran on when you were away in Palmerston? A.—I had two weeks holidays and they deducted two weeks for my being away.

GAMEY'S DISAPPOINTMENT.

Q.—You say Gamey was disappointed about patronage? A.—Disappointed about deals not going through.

Q.—Give me one matter that was not granted or is not being considered? A.—Appointment of his brother as license inspector.

Q.—Had he applied? A.—Gamey said he had.

Chancellor Boyd reminded Mr. Blake that these matters had come up before, and the situation was before the commission.

Mr. Blake—Yes, my lord, but here we have a matter not yet in.

Q.—Any other application which Gamey said he had made and that had not been granted? A.—No.

Mr. Blake pressed witness in regard to McGregor Island, as to what Gamey had done in the matter. Sullivan said that the deal wasn't as easy as appeared, and that both he and Gamey were disappointed.

Mr. Blake reiterated, "What had Gamey done?" Sullivan tried to explain that the stage wasn't reached when Gamey would be useful, but Mr. Blake demanded an emphatic answer to his original question.

Q.—Now Gamey had done nothing? A.—He would when we got it in shape.

Q.—Yes, but you never got it in shape? A.—That's why he was disappointed.

As to whether Sullivan had been interested in McGregor Island before August, he said that the matter had been discussed for two or three years between himself and his father.

Q.—Any other correspondence other than that produced? A.—I remember a telegram.

Q.—We have all the material then? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was the telegram? A.—It was about the wood we tried to sell the city during the fuel famine.

Q.—Did you write to Colyer? A.—Yes; this was in regard to the pending wood deal.

Q.—That letter was a business transaction? A.—Yes.

Q.—I should judge so, for it's not signed X. Y. Z., or registered A. B. Crossin, or anything of the kind.

As to insurance payment made by Sullivan to the Manufacturers' Life, witness may not have enclosed check. In fact, he was quite sure he had not. The company's books would show that, however, he told Mr. Blake.

Mr. Johnston—As to your contracts and the Government, how did you manage?

Sullivan explained that he had a foreman, and devoted his leisure time to supervising. But it did not interfere with his work in the department.

Regarding his six weeks in Palmerston, he had two weeks' holidays, had worked at night to counterbalance the other fortnight, and had been "docked" for the remaining two.

Q.—As to the time when Gamey said he was to be Minister of Mines, he could not be such until there was a charge on the Government? A.—Not until the Government was turned out.

Consequently, he was not likely to speak of it before.

FRANK FORD CALLED.

Frank Ford was the next witness. To Mr. Ritchie he gave the information that he was solicitor in the Attorney-General's Department. During the early part of 1902 he had been secretary to the Attorney-General, and later solicitor in his office. He admitted having typewritten the enclosure in the X Y Z letter of February 11th, and in connection with this gave the following explanation:

"Sullivan came to me one afternoon some time about this date, and asked me if as a favour I would typewrite a short document that he had prepared. I said something to the effect that I was not a typewriter just then, but as the young lady in my office was busy with some letters I had just dictated, and which I was waiting to sign, I consented to do it, as I noticed it was not very long."

Q.—You are a solicitor, and you knew that Frank Sullivan occupied a subordinate position in the Public Works Department. Didn't it seem a little peculiar that he should ask you to do this for him? A.—Well, as a matter of fact, at that time I didn't know what position he occupied. I didn't even know his name.

Q.—What was this copied from? A.—As far as I can tell it was from pencil notes.

Q.—Did Sullivan tell you that some person had asked him to go to you? A.—He did not; he was making the request of himself as far as I know.

Mr. Ritchie—Did the subject matter of the document strike you as singular? A.—Yes, I rather think it did.

Q.—Did you make any enquiry about it? A.—When I handed it back I made some remark, and Sullivan told me that Gamey was anxious since the Globe interview; that there was a convention coming on, and he was writing him some instructions as to how he should act there.

Q.—You thought it was singular? A.—I think if I had known beforehand what it was I would not have done it.

Q.—When you read it you saw it was not a departmental document, but was political? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you connect it with Mr. Gamey? A.—It said Mr. G., and I was not so bling as not to connect it with Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Did you not think it peculiar that a clerk in a department like Sullivan should be entrusted with a matter of this kind? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ask Sullivan about it? A.—I didn't discuss politics with him at all.

Mr. Johnston raised an objection to some of the questions being asked the witness.

"He can protect himself all right," said the Chancellor.

"Yes, but we are here to protect our client," said Mr. Johnston. "Mr. Ford is not on trial."

Mr. Ritchie—Do you know anything of those words that have been struck out? A.—No.

Q.—Did Sullivan go to the Attorney-General's Department with you? A.—No.

Q.—Where did he meet you afterwards? A.—I think in the corridor, upstairs.

Q.—The Globe interview took place on January 29, and you wrote this enclosure after February 11? A.—Yes.

Q.—This inclusion recalled the Globe interview to you? A.—Yes.

Q.—You had seen the Globe interview? A.—Yes.

Q.—Before it was published? A.—Yes.

Q.—In what connection? A.—I was asked to make a copy of it from

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

Professor Powell, of Washington, D. C., Recommends Pe-ru-na.

Prof. W. B. Powell, of Washington, D. C., is one of the best known educators in the country. For fifteen years he has been Superintendent of the Public Schools of Washington, which is considered the best school system in the United States. Professor Powell is the author of a number of school books which are used throughout the United States.

This well known gentleman does not hesitate to recommend Peruna to his countless friends and acquaintances all over the United States. In a recent letter from 1410 N street, N. W., Washington, D. C., to Dr. Hartman, he says:

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Peruna as a tonic, and I take pleasure in recommending your remedy. Peruna is indeed a good medicine and should be in every household."—W. B. POWELL.

SUCH straightforward evidence cannot be overlooked. What the common people say carries weight, but when a man of national prominence says "Peruna should be used in every household," it is a significant fact to the increasing prominence and undoubted efficacy of Peruna.

Peruna is of national fame as a catarrh remedy. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession. It makes diseased mucous membranes healthy, whether it is the mucous membrane lining the nose, throat, lungs, stomach, kidneys or pelvic organs. It cures various diseases of all these organs, because two-thirds of the ills of mankind are due to catarrh. With healthy mucous membranes climatic diseases lose their terror, the system is enabled to throw off contagion, and health follows inevitably.

Mr. A. T. Wood, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes:

"For many years I have been a sufferer from catarrh and have spent time and money with physicians and used many kinds of remedies which were 'guaranteed sure cures', but in every case it was money thrown away.

"I reaped no benefit whatever from them. In my seemingly vain search for relief I purchased a bottle of Peruna, having no confidence in it whatever at the time. This was about one year ago, and I began to improve and was able to attend to my business without being constantly hampered by every kind of pain known to a human being. My hearing, which was almost entirely gone in one ear, got very much better. The medicine not only seems to cure, but to prevent disease.

"This winter when every one was suffering from la grippe, I stood like a stone wall, absolutely proof against it. I am not a believer in 'patent medicines,' having found the majority of them fakes, but I do not hesitate to recommend Peruna as the best medicine for catarrh the world has ever seen. I keep a bottle of it at home constantly and shall continue to do so, because I believe it to be the best medicine on earth. I never leave home that I don't put a bottle of it in my grip." A. T. WOOD.

Mr. Evan D. Bowen, Dodge City, Kan., Conductor on the A. T. & S. F. R. R., writes: "I have had catarrh of the stomach for seven years, and I began to think that I never was going to be cured. At the time I began taking Peruna, I was unable to make more than one or two trips on the road at a time, not being able to keep anything on my stomach. I then weighed 160 pounds. I have been taking Peruna since that time and have never lost a trip, and now weigh 200 pounds."—Evan D. Bowen.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Patti's Peculiarities.

"Mme. Patti, the famous singer, who will tour again in Canada and the Republic this year," said Marcus Mayer, her former manager, to a reporter, "is not a woman of caprices. When she does not sing, it is because her voice is not in condition.

"On the day of a concert she does not speak to anybody, and in conversing with her on these days she will either nod her head or shake it in replying to questions.

"If she should have a crying spell, she will be unable to sing. Only once during my management of her last tour do I remember this to have happened. She has a woman companion who has been with her for the past thirty years, and on one of our trips Mme. Patti was so upset by her companion she shed tears and could not sing that evening.

"Mme. Patti sings only twice a week and is more careful of her voice than she would be of a child if she had one. She has for a pet a small dog that she takes with her on her travels."

PETERBOROUGH'S BEAUTIFUL PARKS

Are all in First-Class Condition.

Something About the Parks Which are Well Worth Visiting.

Peterborough is perhaps the most happily situated town in Ontario. There is a noble river and a pretty little lake situated right in town. Both pleasure seekers and sportsmen can go by steamer for twenty miles down the winding Otonabee to Rice Lake. Every afternoon during the summer months excursion boats give the people of the town an opportunity for a rest and the enjoyment of fresh air. Six miles to the north lies a pretty park at Bridgenorth, while the beautiful waters of Chemong Lake are available for steamers. For ten miles up the river two or three steamers a day carry cottagers and those who revel in picturesque scenery to Stony Lake, as delightful a spot as any on the continent. Those who care to walk in parks are again fortunate as there are many beautiful parks in the town.

VICTORIA PARK.

First of all there is Victoria park which of course is situated at the Court House square and is about 3 acres in area. It is splendidly planted and adorned and has many exquisite flower beds. There are besides, a graceful fountain, many very pretty walks and overlooking all stands the noble old Court House. This park was planted by the generous action of the old and highly respected townsman, Charles Dunlop, Esq. He also paid for the splendid steps leading up to the Court House, while Mr. James Stevenson, generous of heart, presented the fountain to the town. This park is a source of pleasure to all citizens and also a source of gratification and surprise to visitors.

DIXON PARK.

At the extreme north end of the town there is a pretty little park, the gift of A. E. Dixon, Esq., to the town, and named after him. It is about three acres in extent, and has some noble old trees and inviting grass where children and old people in the hot days of summer can rest beneath the shade of the trees.

NICHOLLS OVAL

Over the river there is a splendid park. Nicholls Oval is situated on very lofty ground; commands a magnificent view, is airy, clean, cheerful and nicely planted with young trees, which, with the old ones already there, make it a very desirable place. On the park there are a splendid oval and cricket crease, which latter is perhaps one of the best in Canada. The place itself is an inspiration and its elevation affords sweet and bracing air. At the foot of this park the noble Otonabee winds out in a lakelet and with the new dam this latter will be extended in depth and area. It is the noble gift of the executors of the Nicholls estate.

JACKSON PARK.

Another park of about 27 acres is situated in the north-west portion of the town and was the gift of that benevolent woman, Charlotte Nicholls. It is called Jackson park after Mrs. Nicholl's maiden name. This park is romantic and beautiful. It takes in the valley and undulating highlands on either side, while the splendid little town creek ripples over the little cascades as it winds its way through the valley; a branch of which being devoted to make a small lake, which with a very picturesque pagoda thrown across makes a picture of loveliness. With great skill the ground has been covered with winding walks so placed as to take in all the aspects of beauty, and making the park on a whole one of great interest. It is splendidly wooded. This ground is largely patronized for picnic purposes and is the every day resort of ladies and children, who go and rest and have little picnic suppers under the trees, while the children, barefooted dabble in the murmuring waters.

People in the south end of the town look with envy at the more fortunate northerners who have several parks at their end. It is suggested that a few acres of park and play ground be made in the south end for the fast increasing population of the south ward. It is lamented that Burnham's Point had not been purchased for a park. It is beautifully situated for the purpose but some day it may come into the market in such a way as to be available for the purpose.

Two other parks might be mentioned. Inverlea park, the splendid lawn of the late Judge Dennistoun, is covered with fine old trees and this spring is looking to advantage and makes a splendid resting place. Then there is Central park, a block of about four acres, situated in the centre of the town and on the main street. It was originally granted by the government as a Protestant burial ground, and the west end of the block for a Roman Catholic burial ground. The growth of the town made it impracticable for its proposed purpose and the bodies were exhumed and reburied in the Little Lake Cemetery. For some years it was used as an agricultural show grounds but of late years the local Horticultural Society has had the ground cleaned up, enriched with soil and had trees planted, which are this year in excellent shape and afford abundant shade. With a few seats this park would make an excellent resting place. In one corner of the park is situated a most unsightly drill shed, which it is hoped will be either removed or supplanted with a new building more suitable for this military district.

A BEAUTIFUL SPOT.

Although not a park in the strict sense of the word, the Little Lake Cemetery is a most beautiful spot, and a place very suitable for those who wish to gratify a taste for the picturesque and interesting. Suitably situated on a promontory, three sides of which are washed by the waters of the Little Lake, on high ground and with a natural growth of trees, the cemetery is indeed a beauty spot, and one well worth a visit.

The parks are all in excellent condition and look most beautiful this spring. It is expected they will be open to the public on May 1st.

During the summer evenings two of the parks are the scenes of excellent band concerts given by an efficient band.

A Popular American Consul in Canada Says He Knows of Remarkable Cures Wrought by Paine's Celery Compound The Great Spring Medicine.

The claim that Paine's Celery Compound is the only honest medicine in the world for the cure of rheumatism, neuralgia, nervous and blood disease, is fully borne out by the strong and convincing letters of testimony received constantly by the popular medicine. Nothing else has ever possessed anything like the power of Paine's Celery Compound to restore a healthy nervous tone to the entire body and to thoroughly cleanse the blood, making it impossible for rheumatism, neuralgia and other troubles to find a lodgement in the system. Ministers, professional men generally, newspaper men, public officials and all brain workers, men whose daily outlay of vitality, because of hard, trying, anxious work, is excessive, find renewed nerve, strength and vitality in Paine's Celery Compound. General Wm. W. Henry, American Consul in the city of Quebec, says:—

"It gives me great pleasure to indorse Paine's Celery Compound, both on account of the results obtained from personal use of the remedy and knowledge of the remarkable cures it has performed. I believe it has no equal in curing diseases of the nervous system and building up those who are weak and out of health. It has cured several friends of mine of rheumatism in its worst forms, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it to all afflicted with that disease."

LINDSAY, PONTYPOOL AND BOBCAYGEON RAILROAD.

The Secretary of the Company Says That it Will be Built.

Mr. Thomas Stewart, Secretary of the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool Railroad, writes to the Lindsay Post as follows:

After many vexatious delays caused by the cropping up of unforseen obstacles, the people of Lindsay and Bobcaygeon, and of the townships to be traversed, will learn with much satisfaction that the immediate construction of the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool Railway is a certainty, and that there is every reason to hope that the line will be completed and in operation before the first of January, 1904.

The following communication was handed us this morning for publication:

"The directors of the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon & Pontypool Railway Company have authorized me to announce that final arrangements have been made for the immediate construction of the railway. A staff of engineers will at once go on to finally locate the line between Lindsay and Burkston, and it is intended to proceed with the construction simultaneously at several points. The work will be pressed forward vigorously, and it is confidently expected that the line will be completed and traffic commenced before the end of the present year."

THE GREEK CHURCH IN CANADA.

Missionary in Montreal at Last Finds a Resting Place.

The gorgeous ceremonial of the Orthodox Greek Church is at length being presented in Montreal in a place more in keeping with its magnificence and the traditions of its history than has been the case in the past. A back room in the store of some Syrian or Greek merchant has sufficed for the ten years of the church's history in Montreal to accommodate the few worshipers who have gathered for the celebration of its mass, more mystic and occult than that of the Catholic Church of Rome, and to listen to the ministrations of Father George, the aged Syrian priest, formerly secretary to one of the patriarchs of the East, who cannot speak a word of either French or English, but is, according to his adherents, a powerful orator in the language of Antioch. But that is all changed.

A Picturesque Congregation.

On the first Sunday in April, almost under the shadow of Notre Dame, where five thousand of the flock of Leo the Thirteenth were gathered in honor of Palm Sunday, in a big upstair hall on the same street, scarcely furnished as yet with more than a few benches, but with the sanctuary duly veiled almost from the sight of the congregation by a heavy rood screen, and on the walls a few of the pictures that here replace the prohibited images, the faithful came for the dedication of their new church. The congregation was not large. There are only some 200 of the orthodox in Montreal, nearly all Syrians, and many of them do business on Sundays as well as on other days of the week. Among those that did attend were a good many children who received the rite of communion with their elders, according to Eastern fashion. With their dark faces, their brilliant, intensely black eyes, and the gorgeous coloring of the costumes they affected, they were easily the most picturesque congregation in the metropolis.

Father George.

Father George has worked long and hard for this attainment. In the eyes of all the orthodox of Montreal, and of hundreds of traveling Syrians in the peddling business, who visit Montreal once or twice a year, he represents the whole church. They know of no superior to him, and it is, indeed, doubtful if he knows of any himself. The Bishop of San Francisco, who petitioned Parliament for incorporation as head of the Greeks of Canada last summer, and failed to secure his object, has a nominal headship over the church on this continent, but actually Father George is a missionary "in partibus infidelium," and leads his flock as he likes. He is a superbly typical priest, who may be seen around the church at almost any time, hearing confession or superintending the carpenters. In either event, wearing his long cassock, and his round high hat, with a projecting flange round the top, and in the latter case, probably smoking furiously at a cigarette of Turkish tobacco, "made in Montreal." His nearest colleagues are in the far Northwest, where among the other curious sects, there is quite a large representation of Syrians and Greeks.

Mr. Hare's Favorite Stories.

The late Augustus W. Hare, the English writer, used to tell a story of Dean Stanley, who was a cousin of his. Stanley was proverbially absentminded. On one occasion he was driving in Sicily with a friend. It was bitterly cold. Stanley had his traveling bag with him and decided to put on an extra wrap. Roars of laughter from the street urchins awoke Stanley at last to the fact that he had put on a nightshirt over his coat. Mr. Hare was fond, too, of repeating a story of the Khedive Ismail of Egypt. Nassau Senior was to be received by his highness, who had been warned that Senior kept a diary. "Oh, yes, I quite understand," said Ismail. "M. Senior is the trumpet and I am to blow down it." Every story teller has his favorite schoolboy's answer. Mr. Hare's was this: "A lie is an abomination unto the Lord, but a very present help in time of trouble."

Sick Headache

If troubled with this distressing ailment, watch for the first indication of an attack; as soon as you feel it coming on take three of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the attack may be warded off.

Mr. Geo. E. Wright, of New London, New York, says: "For several years my wife was troubled with what physicians called sick headache of a very severe character. She doctored with several eminent physicians and at a great expense, only to grow worse until she was unable to do any kind of work. About a year ago she began taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and today weighs more than she ever did before and is real well." He has since recommended these Tablets to several of his neighbors, who are enthusiastic in their praise of the remedy. Sold by druggists at 35c. per box.

$1,000 for a Germ

That Powley's Liquified Ozone Cannot Kill

We offer $1,000 to the Scientist or physician who discovers a disease germ that Powley's Liquified Ozone cannot kill. Such a germ is yet unknown. Ozone kills every germ yet discovered, and by that means cures every germ disease.

Just Oxygen

Powley's Liquified Ozone is nothing but oxygen—no drugs—no alcohol in it. It is the discovery of a German Chemist who spent 20 years in learning how to liquify oxygen. Ozone charges the blood with such an excess of oxygen that no germ can live in any membrane or tissue.

The results are inevitable. Any germ disease must end when the cause is killed. Then the oxygen—nature's greatest tonic—brings back the sick one to the maximum of health. No other product ever discovered will do so much for humanity.

Kills Inside Germs

Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you and it cannot be taken internally. Ozone is the only way known to kill germs in the body. It is carried by the blood to every cell of every tissue, and no germ can live where it goes.

Yet Ozone is simply liquified oxygen—just the vital part of air. It is not only harmless—just as harmless as breathing—but a tonic to you—the very source of vitality. Its effects are exhilarating—purifying. But germs are vegetable, and an excess of oxygen, while life to an animal, is deadly to vegetable matter. This fact seems a provision of nature to protect man against germs.

Germ Diseases

These are some of the known germ diseases. The cause of these troubles is germs, and germs only, and these germs must be killed before the trouble is ended.

Medicine sometimes cures these troubles by helping Nature to overcome the germs, but the results are indirect and uncertain. Ozone always kills the germs, and the results are direct and sure. The best physicians and the largest hospitals now employ Ozone—not medicine—for germ troubles.

"MAIL" SLANDER EMPHATICALLY CONTRADICTED

Maliciously Unfair Insinuations Utterly Unfounded on Fact.

ORDINARY BUSINESS CHEQUE.

$3,000 Ontario Bank Cheque Drawn and Used in Ordinary Course of Business—Prejudicing the Investigation.

The Mail and Empire in an effort to prejudge matters in the Gamey case, and to prejudice the public mind, comes out this morning with a most unscrupulously unfair article with flaming scare heads, which has no foundation in fact—and is only used as an opportunity for a blow below the belt, with the palpable design of creating a partizan impression and scoring a party advantage. It prints an article with these headlines:—

"STARTLING DISCOVERIES MADE BY LAWYERS IN GAMEY CASE."

"ONTARIO BANK CASHED $3,000 CHEQUE TWO DAYS BEFORE DATE ON WHICH GAMEY WAS BRIBED."

"CHEQUE WAS DRAWN BY TRUST COMPANY."

"FACT THAT MR. STRATTON IS PRESIDENT OF THIS CORPORATION AWAKENS EXPECTATIONS OF SURPRISING DEVELOPMENTS."

These headings express the spirit of the statements of the article.

Right in the beginning the Examiner has positive authority for stating in the most emphatic manner that there is not the least foundation for the false statements or maliciously unfair inferences of the Mail article.

The three thousand dollar cheque drawn by the Trusts and Guarantee Company, was a cheque drawn in the way of the ordinary business transactions of the Company and was devoted to the ordinary business purposes of the Company, and to no other.

Therefore the maliciously unfair prominence the Mail and Empire has given to a legitimate business transaction is entirely without point, and shows what length the Conservative journals of the baser sort will go in their attempt to injure a political opponent.

The Mail might have the decency to wait the progress of investigation and the decision of the Commission, which in this case will, as the facts are known, be, that there is not the slightest ground to connect Hon. Mr. Stratton with the alleged bribery of Gamey, through the cheque in question or in any other way.

The Mail and Empire has made many "Startling Discoveries," in connection with this case and they have been proved unfounded as this will be proved to be when subjected to the search light of investigation.

Kennedy, 206 Aylmer street, on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A TEST FOR DEAFNESS.

The alarming results of a series of tests for defective hearing, which several medical officals lately carried out in London schools, have aroused the public to the necessity for greater care of the ears. To aid in this good work, the Editor of the "Journal for the Deaf" has devoted a special note in the last issue to a description of the way in which the degree of deafness can be detected by the voice, and offers a free copy of the publication to anyone who may be interested. To obtain the "Journal," it is only necessary to address—The Secretary, Drouet Institute, 10, Marble Arch, London, England. It is also worth mentioning that the "Journal" is accompanied by a "Supplement" containing the details of the cases (with names and addresses) of deafness and ear, nose and throat diseases cured during the past month by a special form of treatment, based on a local application behind the ear. For the benefit of those who desire free advice on any case, there is also a Report Form, by means of which anyone can receive full instructions for applying the treatment at home.

MY LOVER'S FACE.

My lover's face is as a book to me
Wherein of things he would not tell I read,
I study there a faithful history,
Of many a brave and many a kindly deed.
There find I record of a sweet peace, born
Of battles 'gainst great odds, mid dangers dire,
'Gainst poverty, and care, and men's cold scorn,
And that more cruel foe, his own desire.
And there a love tale lies within my heart
Doth take a constant and a deep delight
It shows how in his life I have a part
How my poor love has brought him hopes all bright.
My lover's face is as a book to me,
Where tales of war and peace and love, I see.

SUCCESSFUL SEASON FOR READING CIRCLE.

In Connection With St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society.

Miss Coleman's Very Interesting Paper on "Moore"—Review of the Work.

The Ladies' Reading Circle of St. Peter's T.A.S. closed a very successful series of literary meetings by an "Evening with Moore." last evening. The musical portion of the programme, both vocal and instrumental, consisted of selections from Moore's Melodies, and was quite in keeping with the leading feature of the evening, which was the reading of an excellent paper on "Moore," by Miss Coleman.

Miss Coleman introduced the subject in a very interesting and attractive manner, by a beautiful description of his "island home across the sea." She dealt minutely and carefully with the early life of the poet, and reviewed his works in a broad and intelligent manner. Miss Coleman particularized the writings of Moore, not failing, however, to afford her audience an adverse as well as a favourable criticism of his literary productions. The paper was interspersed throughout with beautiful quotations, which added an educational charm to the excellent manner in which it was read.

On the whole the reading of last night's essay was an excellent finish to a very interesting literary season, and Miss Coleman received the warm congratulations of those who had the pleasure of hearing her paper.

Miss O'Heron presided and introduced the following programme:

Instrumental duet ... ...Miss Mamie and Master H. Theobald
Vocal solo... ... ...Mr. Jas. Wyer
Voca lsolo... ... ...Miss Annie Simons
Instrumental duet ...Misses Hurley and Conroy
President's report... ... ...Miss Casey
Vocal solo... ... ...Miss Torpey

Rev. Dr. O'Brien then congratulated the Society on the excellent work that had been done during the season, and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

THE SEASON'S REPORT.

The following report of the Ladies Literary Association of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, for the season ending April 24th, 1903, will be of interest:

Organization and work of Committee:—The first committee meeting to organize the Literary Society for the past season, was held during the second week of October, 1902. It was decided to place the Society on a constitutional and systematic basis, by having its own officers, and managing its own affairs, entirely distinct from the men's literary committee. Accordingly, at that meeting, the members of the committee elected their officers for the season; President, Miss Casey; Secretary, Miss Crowley; and Treasurer, Miss Desmond. Ladies' library tickets were then distributed among the members of the committee to be disposed of as soon as possible. A committee meeting was held every alternate Tuesday evening at which returns from sale of tickets were made. These meetings were always well attended, and returns promptly made to the Secretary and the Treasurer, the last meeting being held Tuesday, December 2nd. The final returns were then made and the Treasurer of the Ladies' Committee was in a position to hand over to the Financial Secretary of the Total Abstinence Society, the sum of one hundred and twenty-two dollars, being proceeds from sale of two hundred and forty-four tickets. Since then, some few tickets have been purchased from Mr. Turcotte, so that the membership at the present date numbers two hundred and forty-nine.

On Feb. 4th the Ladies' Literary Committee tendered a reception to the hockey team, which proved a very successful affair, financially, as well as socially. The sum of sixty-five dollars and fifty cents was realized, and was paid over to the Secretary of the hockey executive. Thus from Oct. 4th to Feb. 6, the Total Abstinence Society had received from the Ladies' Committee, the sum of one hundred and eighty-seven dollars and fifty cents.

Literary Work:—The plan of conducting the meetings was similar to that of last year, a paper being read every two weeks in connection with a short musical programme. Although the membership list of this season shows only an increase of some sixteen members over that of last year; still there was a remarkable increase in the members who attended the meetings. The interest and enthusiasm was evidenced by the large attendance at every meeting, unless, of course, a hockey match accidentally interfered, and this occasionally happened.

The first meeting of the season was held on Oct. 24th, when a paper on "Temperance" was read; Nov. 7th, paper on "Longfellow", Miss O'Connell; Nov. 21st, paper on "John Boyle O'Rielly, Miss Hickey; Nov. 28th, paper on "Father Finn", Miss McGrath; Dec. 5th, paper on "Father Brebeouf", Miss Cahill; Jan. 9th, address on "Shakespeare", Mr. Earle; Jan. 23rd, paper on "Goldsmith", Miss Desmnard; Feb. 20th, paper on "Wordsworth", Miss Kelly; Mar. 4th, paper on "Grey", Miss Sullivan; Mar. 18th, paper on "Dante", Miss McGrath; Mar. 31st, paper on "Margaret Bourgeois", Miss O'Heron; April 14th, paper on "Moore", Miss Coleman.

We have had, therefore, twelve literary evenings in all, making an average of two papers each month for the six months just gone by. In closing the season, the ladies of the committee desire to thank all those, who in anyway contributed towards making the meetings a success, either by preparing papers or assisting in the musical or any part of the various programmes presented from time to time during the year. It is gratifying to be able to state also, that the assistance was, on every occasion, willingly and cheerfully given, and that the committee had at all times the hearty support of the Literary Society.

In conclusion, we wish especially to express our sincere gratitude to Rev. Dr. O'Brien for the very deep interest he has manifested in our Society, for the kindly assistance and encouragement he has extended to us on all occasions, and particularly for conferring upon us the distinct honour of being present at every meeting of the season without exception.

How to Ward off an Attack of Rheumatism.

"For years, when spring time came on and I went into gardening, I was sure to have an attack of rheumatism and every attack was more severe than the preceding one," says Josie Macdonald, of Man, Logan County, West Virginia. "I tried everything with no relief, until I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and the first application gave me ease, and before the first bottle was used I felt like a new person. Now I feel that I am cured, but I always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in the house and when I feel any symptoms of a return I soon drive it away with one or two applications of this liniment. For sale by all druggists.

WITH LADY GOLFERS ON LOCAL LINKS.

An Interesting Handicap Played Yesterday—An Enjoyable Tea.

The first ladies' golf match of the season was played yesterday afternoon. Between twenty and thirty ladies entered the competition, which was for golf balls kindly presented to the club by the president, Mr. R. M. Dennistoun. Except for a slight cross wind the day was otherwise perfect for golfing and some fairly good score cards were recorded. The best round was made by Mrs. Campbell in 58, very closely followed by the three Miss Dennistoun in 61, 62, and 63, respectively. The game, however, was played under handicap rules, and Mrs. Hill proved the winner with a score of 69, less 15, or 54.

Those who were in the contest were Miss D. Hall, Mrs. Aylmer, Miss N. Hall, Miss Clementi, Miss Kingan, Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Sanderson, Miss Edwards, Miss Archer, and Miss P. Lundy.

As the matches are to be played every Friday during the golfing season, there is no doubt that the competition for the prizes will become very keen.

After the match a sumptuous tea was served in the club house, and a very pleasant half hour was spent in discussing "what might have amang the heather hills."

In connection with yesterday's match and with golf in general, perhaps the ladies will not mind taking a few kindly words of advice. It was noticed that nearly all the ladies stand too far in front of the ball when driving. The general rule is that the left foot should be in a line with the ball. The club should be held tightly with the left hand and loosely with the right. When swinging do not (as a great many were doing yesterday) let the club hit the shoulder. Don't be frightened that you will hurt the ball, as it has been absolutely proved by scientists that it has no feelings whatever. Above all, remember that the one thing needful is to "keep your eye on the ball.

An Obstinate Case of Eczema.

Mr. W. D. Johnson, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes that his father was entirely cured of a long standing and obstinate case of Eczema by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. His leg and foot were a mass of sores that refused to heal and he suffered terribly from the itching and stinging. Though he used a great many remedies and was treated by first-class doctors no permanent relief was obtained until he used Dr. Chase's Ointment.

PETERBOROUGH AS VIEWED BY OTHERS.

Growing Hub of the Central Ontario District.

Toronto Newspaper Man Pays a Visit to Our Town—His Impressions.

The Toronto News last night contained a very interesting write up of Peterborough. Amongst other features of the two columns review of the town's prosperity is the following:—

Down in Peterborough the citizens still call the place a town. But they do so with a sense of complacent superiority that can afford to smile at what they consider the vanity of places like Belleville, St. Catherines, Guelph, St. Thomas and other infant Ontario towns, long since dignified with the title of "city," but which, in the matter of qualifications for the dignity must, in the opinion of the Paterborough people, give way to their own place. It is the general opinion there that in respect of population, volume of business and general prosperity, this town now stands far in advance of the cities mentioned. Including Ashburnham, which to all intents and purposes is an integral part of Peterborough, the population now stands close upon 15,000, and it is growing steadily and rapidly. There is scarcely a vacant house or a vacant store in the whole town, and building operations are scarcely keeping pace with the influx of population. Indeed, it is more than probable that this summer will see new-comers forced to tent out for a while, until permanent quarters can be secured.

A Healthy Growth.

It must be understood, however, at the outset, that there is no particular "boom" on at present. The growth in population and industrial prosperity of recent years has been a steady and healthy one. During the last decade, it is true, progress has been more rapid but ever since the town was first settled early in the last century, by the Hon. Peter Robinson (after whom it was named) and his colony of Scotch settlers, each year has witnessed an appreciable advance. It was incorporated in 1850.

But why this prosperity here, when, with but three or four exceptions, all the other towns of Central Ontario and along the lake front from Toronto to Kingston tell of an actual decrease in population during the last decade? Why has Peterborough more than held its own in the rush of population from the rural districts and from the towns towards the big cities? Why have manufacturing concerns clustered here one after the other, when the natural tendency seems to be towards Toronto, Hamilton, or Ottawa? It is a fact that with the exception of its Western Ontario rival Brantford, the Town of Peterborough has outdistanced during the last few years all other towns or small cities of Ontario in its rate of growth, and in increasing importance as a manufacturing centre.

After reciting the advantages Peterborough affords to the manufacturers in the town in cheap water power, etc. and after referring to the various manufacturing institutions of the town the News concludes thus:—

The town is compact, and thoroughly progressive in the matter of civic improvements. Unlike most manufacturing towns, the value of the aesthetic has not been lost sight of in the smoke of tall factory buildings and the rush for material prosperity. Indeed, Peterborough, despite its many factories has not the factory look. It still preserves a certain rural charm. Its factories are scattered around in unobtrusive ocations, and citizens are relieved to a large extent of the usual omnipresent reminders of industrial storm and stress. Negotiations are now on foot to start the old street railway in operation again, and dig up the tracks that show here and there through the town streets. It is quite probable that pending negotiations in this connection with one or other of the power companies will materialize in the near future. Were it not for the compactness of the town the Street Railway Company would long ere this have been carrying on a paying business. Long pending negotiations looking to the amalgamation of Peterborough and Ashburnham are also at last in a fair way to speedy consummation.

In conclusion, a two day's visit to the town last week impressed The News representative with the belief that Peterborough was par excellence among Ontario towns, a promising place to settle in, a good place to get rich in, a comfortable place to live in, and when you die there is a most picturesque and well-kept cemetery to be buried in.

GAMEY CHARGES INVESTIGATION.

another draft by the Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Q.—How did he come to do that? A.—I was in his office one day on business, and he asked me to do it, as his secretary was busy. I said, "Certainly."

Q.—Where did you do it? A.—In the Attorney-General's secretary's office, where the only machine I ever operated in the service was located. It was like an old friend.

Q.—Now, you said that this was run off from a draft handed you by Mr. Stratton? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it typewritten? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did Mr. Stratton say when he asked you to copy it? A.—He said his secretary was busy, and that they were shorthanded, and asked me if I would do it. I have often done work before for Mr. Stratton.

Q.—You spoke of this being a copy? Was there any handwriting on this copy? A.—I don't remember, for it didn't leave a lasting impression on my mind.

Q.—You handed it back to Mr. Stratton? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he make any remark when you handed it back? A.—He did not discuss the matter with me at all.

GAMEY'S PLEDGE.

What is known as the "Aylesworth" letter, addressed to Hon. Mr. Ross, was then produced, dated October 22nd.

Q.—Did you typewrite this? A.—I did, sir.

Q.—Do you recall any writing as being on the document when it left your hands? A.—There was not.

Q.—Tell me the circumstances of preparing this document? A.—My recollection is that Mr. Stratton asked me to make a copy of the letter which he had in his hand. I met him as he was apparently coming from the Premier's office. He said, as he asked me, that his secretary was out at luncheon.

Q.—Was the paper you copied from something like the one produced? A.—Yes.

It was shown that the date on one was 10th September, and the date on the other 27th October, and Mr. Ritchie asked, "Why did you make the change, or did you make the change? A.—I don't recollect.

If he had changed the date, the witness said, it would have been under instruction.

Mr. Ritchie then asked the counsel for Mr. Stratton to produce the original from which Mr. Ford copied the Globe interview, but Mr. Riddell replied that they did not have it.

Mr. Ritchie pressed the matter a little, until Chancellor Boyd remarked, "Well, if they haven't it, I suppose we'll have to get along without it."

Mr. Riddell then questioned Mr. Ford as to the three documents which he had copied, and had him identify them.

Q.—Have you told us all you know about these documents? A.—Yes.

As to the X. Y. Z. letter, Mr. Riddell asked if the same paper was not used in all the departments? A.—Yes.

In reply to Mr. Ritchie again: Q.—Was anything dictated to you in connection with these documents? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have any conversation about them with any of the Ministers apart from what you said? A.—No.

Q.—What did you do with the notes? A.—I gave them back to Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Stratton.

BIG SUMS PAID OUT OF BANK.

Mr. Ford then left the box, and Mr. G. L. Bartlett, paying teller of the Ontario Bank, for a number of years, was called.

He had brought the cash book, but not the supplementary, and Mr. Ritchie wanted to know why.

Mr. Bartlett did not think it would make any difference, but Mr. Ritchie asked if the supplementary cash book would not have the names.

Yes, replied Mr. Bartlett, but the cash book has the initials.

Mr. Ritchie—Have you looked over those books since you got your subpoena? A.—Yes.

Q.—With the idea of seeing whether there was a payment of $3,000 or $5,000 on the 9th or 10th of September? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was there any on the 10th? A.—Yes, one, a check cashed.

Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Riddell and Mr. McPherson were about the book, all looking for large sums on the 10th.

There was one of $5,000, which Mr. Bartlett said was paid out to C.R., but he did not remember who the initials stood for. Another item of $6,000 he explained was paid on a note due on the 5th, but he did not remember the name.

Mr. Ritchie's examination showed that there were several three thousand dollar transactions on the dates mentioned from September 8th to 12th, but that they referred to notes pertaining to local firms. The names of these persons, it was suggested, need not be made public, as they had nothing to do with the investigation.

Adjournment followed for luncheon.

BANKER ON STAND.

Geo. L. Bartlett, paying teller of the Ontario Bank, who was on the stand when the commission adjourned at noon, was recalled.

Mr. Ritchie asked for two deposit ledgers for September, 1902, and were sent for.

While waiting for the ledgers Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Ritchie examined entries and accounts found in a volume that the witness had with him.

This technical evidence was tedious and in no way startling.

Mr. Ritchie asked, "Suppose you cashed a check on an outside bank, Dominion Bank at Oshawa, for instance, where would that appear?"

Witness handed Mr. Ritchie the book, one between the second teller and himself. Mr. Gamey's counsel went into the box with Mr. Bartlett to expedite matters, and Mr. Riddell took observations from the dais behind.

There was another conference between Messrs. Bartlett, Ritchie, Riddell and McPherson over the little book.

"What do you call this book?" asked Mr. Ritchie.

"No special name," said Mr. Bartlett; "it's just a memorandum book used by the first and second tellers."

Mr. Ritchie—Then any cash payment would appear in one or other of these books?

"There is a third cash book," said Mr. Bartlett, extracting a still smaller book from his pocket; "but this is only used for petty accounts."

Mr. Ritchie—Then as to your general statement any cash payment of any amount would appear in these books? A.—Yes; or in this column, (indicating another column in the large book) this column shows payments through branches.

Q.—When did you open a branch of your bank at the corner of Yonge and Carlton? A.—In October I think.

Q.—Can you say whether it was doing business in September or not? A.—Not positively.

Mr. Ritchie—Now I will have to trouble you to go over this column with me.

The consultation again became private. Mr. Ritchie eagerly pounced on $3,000 items, of which there seemed to be several.

A VAIN SEARCH.

Two supplementary books from A to F were examined, without apparent result, and a similar scrutiny of corresponding books from L to Z began. This carried on in the same undertone, seemed to meet with equal results. Counsel made frequent notes, apparently for the purpose of making further reference to the books of the bank.

After an hour or so had been occupied in a semi-confidential dialogue so far as any person but the counsel and court was concerned, Mr. Ritchie asked "Are these all the books? Would discounts appear in the books in your charge?"

"No," was Mr. Bartlett's reply.

Q.—Where would they appear? A.—In the discount ledger; also in the ledger account of the person making the discounts.

A substantial ledger was hoisted on to the ledge of the witness stand and the spectators were again set a-guessing as to what was doing, anyway.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

Mrs. John F. Sillars had Dyspepsia for Seven Years—Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets Cured Her.

Spring fever is a name often given to a stagnant stomach. When you have walked too much your legs ache and you know it is time to rest them. When your arms ache you know it is time to rest them. Use your stomach in the same way. When it is tired rest it.

The stomach supplies the body with heat. Its work is doubled during the cold weather. With the coming of spring it is tired and worn. It needs to be rested and toned up. It needs Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. They rest the stomach by doing its work. They digest the food themselves. They thus bring the stomach to its normal state of activity and health, and that means renewed energy in all parts of the body.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are a natural remedy and sure reliever of all stomach ailments. Those who have used them are enthusiastic in their praises. Take Mrs. John F. Sillars, of Western Bay, Newfoundland, for example. She writes:—

"I have been cured of Dyspepsia by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. For seven years I suffered. I could not eat without suffering intense agony but had given up to die before using them. I tried doctors but they gave me no permanent relief. Then I started to use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. From the first they gave me relief, and after the use of five boxes I was well and strong."

Boils were so painful could not sleep at night.

APPEARED ON NECK, LEGS AND ARMS.

Burdock Blood Bitters

CURED THEM.

It is well known to all that bad blood is the direct cause of all skin diseases and it is necessary for the blood to be cleansed before the eruptions will disappear. For this purpose there is nothing to equal Burdock Blood Bitters as the thousands of testimonials we have on hand will testify.

Mr. Willard Thompson, McNeill's Mills, P.E.I., writes us as follows: "I wish to state to you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Some time ago my blood got out of order and many boils appeared on my neck, legs and arms. They were so painful that I could not sleep at night. After having tried many different remedies without any success, I finally decided, on the advice of a friend, to use Burdock Blood Bitters. Before I had quite used two bottles the boils had completely disappeared, and I wish to emphasize the fact that I think Burdock Blood Bitters the best blood purifier on the market to-day."

SPOONERISMS.

Absent-Minded Preacher Appointed Warden of New College, Oxford.

The appointment of the Rev. William A. Spooner as warden of New College, Oxford, has caused a flood of "Spoonerisms" in the English press. Mr. Spooner is an absent-minded scholar, who frequently transposes the initial consonants or syllables of words in speaking. In his earlier life he was in charge of a church near Oxford, and it was at this church that those curious transpositions of letters or words now so generally known as "Spoonerisms" first came into fame. Many are doubtless assigned to him that are fictitious or the blunders of others—such as "there came up grasshillars and cat-hoppers innumerable"—but it is a fact that in one of his first sermons he spoke of "shoving leopard" instead of "loving shepherd," and that very early in his clerical career he preached from the text, "And now I see through a dark glassly." One of the best of these curious transpositions, which is but little known, led Mr. Spooner, in his absent-minded way, into much waste of time. Once when in town he is said to have gone by appointment to meet a friend at Greenwich. Arriving there he proceeded to inquire for "The Dull Man," which he conceived to be the name of the hostelry where they were to meet. But after traversing the town from end to end, and inquiring everywhere, he had to return a disappointed man. Meanwhile his friend was in vain awaiting him at the Green Man, Dulwich.

MANCHURIA.

Great Britain, United States and Japan to Make Forcible Joint Protest Against Russia's Demands.

Pekin, April 24.—Russia has demanded that China sign an agreement practically ceding to her the sovereignty of Manchuria and excluding other nations from the country.

Joint Protest to Be Made.

London, April 25.—There is in contemplation a forcible joint protest on the part of Great Britain, the United States and Japan against the Russian demands in the matter of the sovereignty of Manchuria.

Sir Ernest Satow, British Minister to China, in a despatch to the Foreign Office, has confirmed the published synopsis of the note addressed to China by M. Plancon, Russia Charge d'Affaires at Pekin. Further official advices regarding the intentions of the Chinese Government, and explanations from St. Petersburg, are awaited anxiously. In the meantime the British Government is not taking active measures, although Foreign Secretary Lansdowne intends to circulate pour parlers looking to joint action from Washington, London, and Tokio, provided further information sustains the present abstract of the Russian demands. The Foreign Office states that if the Chinese Government correctly represents Russia's claims these claims constitute an absolute breach of all the undertakings given in connection with Manchuria and utterly abrogates existing treaties.

The U.S. Position.

Washington, April 25.—U. S. Minister Conger has cabled to Secretary of State Hay a synopsis of the demands made upon China by Russia respecting control of Manchuria. This account agrees precisely with the press report of Russia's last coup. Secretary Hay will take no action in the matter until he has communicated the facts to the President and has learned the latter's wishes.

The present impression here is that the Russian action is a distinct breach of faith with the United States.

Four Coal Miners Killed.

Glace Bay, N. S., April 25.—Reserve Mine was the scene of a sad fatality yesterday morning and four men worked their last shifts. An explosion took place between 7 and 8 o'clock in number 5 level, French slope of Reserve Mine, and of the five men who worked in the immediate neighborhood of the explosion, but one was brought up out of the pit alive. The bodies were badly mangled.

Not So Pressing.

"Mehitabel," said Archibald, "now that we are engaged we should have no secrets from each other, should we, dear?"

"No," replied Mehitabel, after she had assured herself that her mother was not listening in the next room.

"Well, then," he said, "do please tell me just how old you are?"

"With pleasure," said Mehitabel. "But first, Archibald, please tell me just how much you get a week?"

Archibald pondered. His mind ran ahead into the future.

"Forgive me, Mehitabel," he responded; "it was none of my business to ask."—Tit-Bits.

Pneumonia More Fatal Than Smallpox.

Statistics Show a Rapid Increase of Deaths from Pneumonia — Prevention and Cure Found in

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Ten times as many people die of pneumonia as of smallpox and yet the fear of smallpox is so great that many people almost forget that there is such a disease as pneumonia.

Health authorities are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to stamp out smallpox and ignore the conditions that cause pneumonia. Damp, unventilated houses, dirty alleys and streets, stagnant pools of water, insufficient food and clothing—all these things cause pneumonia.

Any one who is in a weak and run down condition and contracts a cold is liable to have pneumonia, and, therefore, the object of every person should be to keep their health at high water mark by the use of such a blood builder and nerve restorative as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Should you find yourself the victim of a cold that has fastened itself on the bronchial tubes causing difficult breathing, pain in the chest or lungs when coughing or other indications of approaching pneumonia, there is no preparation that will help you so promptly as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

No offhand prescription from a doctor, hastily written and hastily compounded in a drug store, can be compared to this great treatment which has so firmly established itself in the homes of this land.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is mother's favourite remedy for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, coughs and colds, and is wonderfully effective in relieving and curing asthma. Twenty-five cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 9

Enough for One Day.

A very subdued looking boy with a long scratch on his nose and an air of general dejection came to his teacher in one of the large London board schools and handed her a note before taking his seat and becoming deeply absorbed in his book, says Tit-Bits.

The note read as follows:

Miss B.—Please excuse James for not being there yesterday. He played truoant, but I should think you don't need to lick him for it, as the boy he played truoant with an' him fell out, an' the boy licked him, an' a man they sauced caught him an' licked him, an' the driver of a cart they hung to liked him also. Then his pa licked him, an' I gave him another one for saucing me for telling pa; so you need not lick him until next time. I should say he thinks he'd better keep in school hereafter.

A Golden Heart

BY BERTHA M. CLAY

Author of "The Gypsy's Daughter," "Another Woman's Husband," "A Heart's Bitterness," "A Mad Love," "A Heart's Idol," "Gladys Greye," Etc.

CHAPTER I.

In the pretty quaint drawing-room of White Cliffe Squire Cliefden sat alone—an old man whose hair was gray and whose face was furrowed with age, whose figure was bent and whose hands trembled with weakness—an old man who had not been pleased to grow old, whose thoughts, cares, and interests had been bound up in this world and who knew no other. He sat in an easy chair, his head thrown back, his eyes closed, his hands folded, his face hopeless in its expression.

The Cliefdens had once been the leading family in the county, and Cliefden Hall the most hospitable mansion in it; but long before the present Squire was born Cliefdon Park was sold, its name changed, and all that remained of the once vast estates, was a low, rambling, picturesque place called White Cliffe. It is an awkward matter to be born with the tastes of a grand duke, a love of luxury, and a desire for position, when one possesses very limited means. This was what had happened to Squire William Cliefden. His father's one prayer, one sincere desire, had been that he should win the old lands back again. He had died with such words on his lips; and they had set his son's heart on fire. But it was much easier for him to spend than to save. He went abroad, hoping always that some wonderful chance would enable him to retrieve his fallen fortunes, though it never came. At that time he was a handsome, gallant young man, with no more idea of the value of money than a child.

He passed some years quick silver-mining in Spain, and then returned to England, none the richer for his wanderings in search of wealth. Soon afterward he married a fair, placid girl who had a large fortune, and with whom he lived happily enough. Catharine Somers loved her handsome, erratic young husband, and was quite content. She never wondered whether he had had other loves or other interests; she was placidly, quietly happy.

One day a terrible accident happened to the Squire. He was struck by a falling branch of a tree, and carried home senseless. Even now he suffered from the effects of that injury which had nearly proved fatal at the time he received it. During his delirium his one cry was "Dolores, Dolores!" in a voice so full of acute pain and misery that it brought tears to the eyes of those who heard him. "Dolores, Dolores!" was reiterated by the sick man all through the dark hours of the night and the early hours of morn, while the simple, unsuspecting English wife knelt by his side and wondered who Dolores was.

As he grew better, the Squire ceased to repeat the name; and his wife believed the cry to have risen from some wandering of his fevered brain. When his little daughter was born, he said that she must be called "Dolores," and his fair wife smiled as she said, "That was the name you repeated so often when you were ill." So the beautiful, golden-haired child was called "Dolores," a name ill-suited to her bright, blonde loveliness as anything could well be.

Whatever the romance or tragedy of the Squire's life had been, it was never discovered. If a wild, deep, unhappy love, it died with him and was never told; nor did he ever betray himself in any way respecting it, except when his voice took a more musical tone in the utterance of the name "Dolores."

The gentle wife died and was buried. Then the Squire devoted himself to the task of making a fortune for Dolores. But fate was not kind to him. He liked to speculate, but no speculation ever turned out well for him; he lost more than he made, and now, when he was old, when energy, spirit, and hope were all gone, the news had come to him that he was utterly ruined.

He had gathered together every available shilling—he had even mortgaged White Cliffe, so sure was he of success—and he had invested the money in mining shares, which he had been assured would bring him in at least thirty per cent., and sell at any time for thrice their value. He was certain to make a large fortune—so the agents of the new company told him. And the Squire—never never very keen where money was concerned, never very sound of judgment in making investments—was only too delighted. He staked every farthing he had in the world, and for one year he enjoyed a wonderful increase of income. But that morning he had received a letter which told him of his utter ruin. This company was a complete swindle; the manager had absconded with all that remained of the capital, and there was nothing but ruin for all the deluded shareholders.

The Squire had received that letter in the morning, and he had hardly stirred since. For many hours he had remained just as he was, trying to realize the utter, abject misery into which he had fallen. His hands folded, his eyes closed, his life wrecked and ruined, no more piteous sight could be conceived than the old man in his sorrow.

The door opened slowly, and into the darkened room came a beautiful, graceful girl, whose face was full of anxious solicitude. She went up to the drooping figure and laid her loving arms around the Squire's neck.

"Papa," she said, can you not cheer up? It might have been worse—death is worse."

"Worse, Dolores?" he questioned sadly. "Ah, no! Death is much more merciful than poverty and ruin. I could face death with a smile; but I am the last of the Cliefdens, and disgrace is worse than death."

"There is no disgrace for you, papa. It is not your fault that other men are rogues and swindlers. Tell me, dear, what will be the worst for us?"

"The worst for me will be the workhouse or an almshouse in my old age; for you there will be hard work, Dolores!"

"Is it so bad as that?" she asked, wonderingly. "Must we leave White Cliffe?"

"There is not even a chair in the house which belongs to us," he replied. "The house, pictures, furniture, plate, are no longer ours. We are absolute paupers, Dolores—and that is a hard thing to say."

"Very hard, papa, but I am quite sure I can work. I can make money enough to keep you and myself. I will do anything—paint, teach, sing; I would go on the stage — I would do anything to help you."

A softened look came over his worn face.

"I know it, Dolores; but you have never been used to work. The Cliefdens have until now kept some of their old state. If I could only have lived at White Cliffe until it was time to die! If I could only have slept where all the Cliefdens sleep! But I shall die in an almshouse, and be buried like a pauper. How could you work for me, child?" he continued, "I have lived in luxury all my life. I must have dainty food and choice wine; I must have comforts—good fires, good clothes, my books, my papers. How could you earn money for all those things?"

Before she had time to answer there came a great peal at the door-bell.

"I can not see any one, Dolores," he said; and even than the very utterance of the beloved name seemed to lighten his sorrow, "Dolores!" he repeated, dwelling tenderly on the word.

But the visitor would take no denial; he had followed the servant to the drawing-room.

"I must come in, Cliefden," he said. "I must see you."

"It is Lord Rhysworth," said Dolores, unclasping her arms, with a little flush on her face.

The visitor entered—a tall, aristocratic-looking man, arather above middle age, but not old enough to be called elderly. He was not handsome, but his face was that of a noble, generous man.

"You must forgive me, Squire," he said. "I could not help seeing you. Is the news I hear true? Has the company failed?"

"Yes; and I am a ruined man—ruined, penniless—shall soon be homeless. I, the last of the Cliefdens, in my old age, must die — a pauper!"

"The Squire's voice sunk into a murmur, and his head fell upon his breast. Lord Rhysworth turned to the girl, whose face had grown colorless with emotion.

"Is it quite true, Miss Cliefden?" he asked.

"Quite true, my lord," she answered.

"I am very sorry," said Lord Rhysworth. The words were simple, but they had a ring of sincerity and truth. "I am more sorry than if the same misfortune had happened to myself," he continued. "Is there no way out of it?"

"No," answered the Squire, sadly. "I must leave White Cliffe and find refuge in a workhouse or an almshouse, and Dolores—oh, Dolores, my darling!—will have to work. I am the last of the Cliefdens, and such is my destiny. Fate has been more than cruel to me!"

Again the soft arms stole round his neck, and a sweet voice whispered to him—

"Papa, what some men call fate others call Providence; and Providence can never be cruel."

But the Squire would not listen.

"I am an old man," he murmured; "my eyes are dim, and my hair is gray. I am an old man, and it is hard to eat pauper's bread, and die like a pauper."

Then Lord Rhysworth went up to him and, laying his hand upon his shoulder, said gently:

"Will you listen to me, Squire? I can find you a way out of your trouble—a way by which you may live at White Cliffe, by which you may enjoy a good income, with every comfort and luxury, until your death, if you will listen to me." There was a curious hesitation in his manner, a pallor on his face, and a tremor in his voice. "Let me marry your daughter, Dolores," he went on, "and you shall be a rich man for life. Hush—do not speak—do not refuse! Hear what I have to say first—a rich man for life, Squire! I will buy back White Cliffe for you. I will settle an annuity on you. You shall be richer man than you have ever been. Hush—wait! I love Dolores. I have loved her since the first moment I saw her—a child, you remember—and she came dancing into the room with little blue shoes on. I have loved her all my life. I would sacrifice much to make her my wife. I love her as no young man could ever love her. She shall be the happiest woman in the land. One moment more. I lay my fortune, my title, my heart, my very life at her feet. She shall live in luxury and magnificence. She shall never know one wish ungratified, one longing unindulged. She shall have all that this world can give her, all that love can compass for her, if she will marry me." He paused for a few moments, not for want of words, but because his emotion was so great. "Hush," he said, again—"you must not give me any answer yet! I could not bear it. Let me grow calm. Wait until I recover myself."

CHAPTER II.

They formed a striking group—the old Squire, with his gray head raised in wonder, his face full of pain, surprise, and pleasure, all striving for mastery; the young girl by his side, whose faultless face had grown perfectly colorless, whose hands clung more closely to her father's neck; and the eager, noble-looking man.

Twice the Squire had essayed to speak, but each time his voice had died away; the only sound that had come from his lips had been the whispered name of "Dolores!" Twice he had looked up with an eager, excited gesture, as though he would fain interrupt, but the fire and passion in the other face had stricken him dumb.

Lord Rhysworth bent over him.

"You must not think," he said, "that I take an unfair advantage. I speak abruptly now; but the object of my visit has been the dream of my life. I was thirty years of age before I looked with admiring eyes at any woman's face; and then I saw Dolores. She was only a child, but, oh, how I loved her, and how I have loved her ever since! She was only a child; but I vowed then, that when she grew into womanhood, she and no other should be my wife. I have watched her from year to year, and have loved her with a deeper and deeper love as time went on. Dolores," he cried, turning suddenly to the beautiful, wondering girl," have you never guessed how much I loved you?"

"No," she answered, faintly.

"I wonder at that, for girls are quick enough in such matters. There have been times when I have gone away half mad from you, and have left you, because I could no longer control my love. Dolores, have you never fancied it?"

"I have never even thought of it," she answered.

"My beautiful love, you are fresh and fair as the morning, your eyes beam with the clear light of youth and innocence, your lips have the bright smile of happy girlhood! It was hardly likely you would think of it. Still I have loved you so! I am not young, Dolores; but many a man of half my years has a heart twice as old. My eyes have sought no face save yours, my heart no love but yours—you have filled my life. I have wanted to tell you this for months past, but I have lacked the courage. It is your father's trouble that forces it from me now. I come of a race that knows no fear; but I tremble for the word which has to fall from your lips, and which will mean either life or death for me!"

Once more he paused, unable to speak. The Squire looked up at the beautiful, colorless face.

"What do you say, Dolores?" he asked.

"I do not know what to say, papa: I am bewildered," she answered.

"I have been too abrupt," cried Lord Rhysworth. "Dolores, I wish I could pray to you my prayers should be so eloquent that you could never refuse them. I will make you so happy, and will live only for you. No younger man could give you the love, the care, the tenderness, the devotion that I shall lavish on you. Dolores you will be truly happy with me, I am sure. If you will but risk the trial."

"You are very good," she answered.

But he saw that her lips were pale, and that the words came with difficulty.

"I meant to be kind," he said, regretfully; "but I fear I have been cruel. I have been too abrupt. Dolores, you must think the matter over. I will take no answer yet—neither 'Yes nor 'No.' Think over it. Squire, will you do the same? And then, after a few days, you will write to me, Dolores. I do not wish to press my suit, my dear; but always remember that your words will bring me either life or death."

"Whatever happens, Lord Rhysworth," observed the Squire. "I shall never forget your goodness to me."

"Never forget my love for your daughter," was the reply. "Use your influence for me, Squire, and you shall be the happiest man in the world. Dolores, if your heart says one word in my favor, listen to it. I must go now; and when you have an answer for me, perhaps you will write?"

"Yes," she returned, faintly. "I will."

He took her white, cold hand in his, raised it to his lips, and kissed it with passionate tenderness. Then he whispered a few words to the Squire and retired.

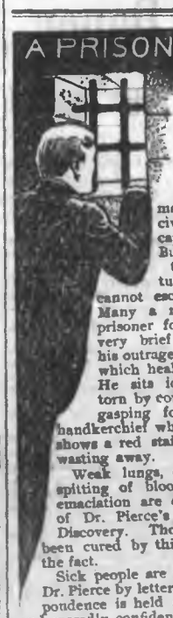
A PRISONER FOR LIFE



Offences against the laws of health are punished rigorously and inevitably by nature. A man may break civil laws and escape punishment. But the man who transgresses nature's law of health cannot escape the penalty. Many a man is to-day a prisoner for life, and for a very brief life, because of his outrage of the laws upon which health is conditioned. He sits idly in his chair torn by coughing spells and gasping for breath. The handkerchief which wipes his lips shows a red stain. He is slowly wasting away.

Weak lungs, obstinate coughs, spitting of blood, weakness and emaciation are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Thousands who have been cured by this medicine attest the fact.

Sick people are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." The sole motive for substitution is to enable the dealer to make the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines.

"Three years ago I had the grip," writes Mrs. Tillie Linney, of Gravel Switch, Marion Co., Kentucky. "It settled on my lungs, and the doctor said I had consumption. I took six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and am thankful to say I am entirely well. You may print this letter if you see fit to do so."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets keep the bowels in healthy activity.

SAVE THE BABY.

"I can truly say that had it not been for Baby's Own Tablets, I do not believe my baby would have been alive to-day." So writes Mrs. Albert Luddington, of St. Mary's River, N. S., and she adds:—"He is now growing nicely; is good natured and is getting fat." It is gratifying to know that in all parts of Canada, Baby's Own Tablets are proving a real blessing to children and a boon to mothers. These Tablets are a speedy relief and prompt cure for constipation, sour stomach, wind colic, diarrhoea, worms, and simple fevers. They break up cold, prevent croup and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth. Baby's Own Tablets are good for children of all ages from birth upwards, and are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. Sold by medicine dealers or sent by mail, post paid, at 25 cents a box, by writing direct to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

A Slight Break in Stocks Occurred This Morning.

The Quotations of the Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

The stock market to-day opened a shade below last night's close. There was little doing during the morning, traders apparently awaiting the bank statement.

Metropolitan opened at 131 1-2, and closed at 129 3-4. It dropped as low as 129, evidently owing to the trouble made by the suit of Armour.

The bank statement was fair, but for some unaccountable reason the market sold off, and sold generally at the lowest prices of the day.

The following despatches have been received by E. M. Pousett & Co.:—

MARKET LETTER.

Saturday, April 25th.—The bank statement to-day was even better than had been expected, the best features being an actual decrease of $4,582,000 in loans, against an anticipated increase, and a gain in cash of $5,056,000. Those things produced an increase in banks surplus reserves $4,977,000 raising the total they now hold over legal requirements on all deposits to $10,985,475 against $9,461,000 a year ago and $16,759,775 in 1901. On this strong showing it was only natural to have looked for some improvement in the tendency of the market, but instead, general selling developed with the trading element active in unloading long stock, and putting out fresh lines of shorts. This proved that the statement had been discounted earlier in the week, and it also showed that the technical speculative position of the general market was unfavourable. Otherwise slump of 1 per cent. throughout list which followed this selling movement in closing hour would certainly not have occurred. This increases general disappointment, which has been manifested over action of market from its relapse into dull sagging conditions, since resumption of business on new exchange. Apathy of public and absence of any foreign buying has been a marked feature, which has been very discouraging. Money conditions here have become much easier, and labour situation steadily improves. Railroad earnings and general state of trade good, and outlook for a large crop is very promising; but against this has been the week's sharp advance in foreign exchange to the gold shipping point; and development of what is regarded as a very threatening situation in Chinese affairs and realization of the fact that there is a vast quantity of new security to digest. Under these circumstances outlook not very promising for a revival of bull speculation, but rather seems to suggest nothing better than a continued narrow trader's market.

M. & M.

Fell Exhausted and Unconscious.

Mrs. R. W. Edwards, 33 McMurray street, Brantford, Ont., suffered for five years with nervous exhaustion, headache and dyspepsia. "The pain in my head would almost drive me crazy. I could not sleep nights, but would walk the floor in agony until I fell exhausted and unconscious. For the past nine months I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and from a mere skeleton this medicine has built me up in flesh and weight until I am strong and well." It would be scarcely possible to produce stronger evidence of the wonderful power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

AS RED MEN DIE.

By E. Pauline Johnson.

"Captive! Is there a hell to him like this?
A taunt more galling than the Huron's hiss?

"Captive! But never conquered; Mohawk brave
Stoops not to be to any man a slave;
Least, to the puny tribe his soul abhors,
The tribe whose wigwams sprinkle Simcoe's shores,
With scowling brow he stands and courage high,
Watching with haughty and defiant eye
His captors, as they counsel o'er his fate,
Or strive his boldness to imitate.
Then fling they unto him the choice: 'Will thou
Walk o'er the bed of fire that waits thee now—
Walk with uncovered feet upon the coals
Until thou reach the ghostly Land of Souls,
And, with thy Mohawk death-song, please our ear?
Or wilt thou with the women rest thee here?'
His eyes flash like an eagle's, and his hands
Clench at the insult. Like a god he stands,
"Prepare the fire!" he scornfully demands.

"The path of coals outstretches, white with heat,
A forest fir's length—ready for his feet,
Unflinching as a rock he steps along
The burning mass, and sings his wild war song;
Sings as he sang when he used to roam
Throughout the forest of his southern home,
Where, down the Genesee, the water roars,
Where gentle Mohawa purls between its shores,
Songs that of exploit and prowess tell;
Songs of the Iroquois invincible.
Up the long trail of fire he boasting goes,
Dancing a war dance to defy his foes.
His flesh is scorched, his muscles burn and shrink,
But still he dances to death's awful brink.
The eagle plume that crests his haughty head,
Will never droop until his heart is dead.
Slower and slower yet his footstep swings,
Wilder and wilder still his death-song rings,
Fiercer and fiercer thro' the forest bounds
His voice that leaps to Happier Hunting Grounds.
One savage yell—then, loyal to his race,
He bends to death—but never to disgrace."

THE LATEST NEWS OF LOCAL SPORT.

Some Interesting Gossip on Current Sport.

Jack McCabe Will Play With the T. A. S.—The O. L. A. Has Arranged the Districts—Notes

The decision of the baseball enthusiasts of the town to organize a town league is one that should meet with general approval. Peterborough is large enough to support a league of that kind and all it requires is someone to take hold of the matter and manage the affair. A town league could quite easily be formed with six or eight teams.

• • • •

The Peterborough Colts 2nd Cricket team to-day play the Millbrook junior aggregation on the Nicholls Oval. The youngsters should be encouraged in their efforts to revive the game in Peterborough.

• • • •

The Campbellford team has written to the Secretary of the proposed Trent Valley Lacrosse League stating that in view of the action of the two Peterborough teams entering the C. L. A. junior series, they were inclined to do likewise.

• • • •

The Trent Valley Lacrosse League will not very likely do much this year, but had the matter been taken hold of earlier in the season, a flourishing organization might have been in existence to-day. The Belleville team regret very much that they did not apply for admission earlier and excuse themselves in the fact that Mr. Harry Burrell, the well-known enthusiast of that town was for some weeks confined to his room with illness.

• • • •

The T.A.S. team is to be congratulated on the manner in which they are putting the Separate School grounds, on Murray street, into shape. A great stroke of work is being done on them this spring, and by July the field will be in excellent condition.

• • • •

At the T.A.S. banquet on Wednesday evening Mr. John McCabe, Peterborough's well-known lacrosse player, responded to the toast of 'Kindred Sports.' Jack does not pose as an orator but he plainly told the gathering that he would be wearing the red and black, the colours of the T.A.S. this season. He predicted that the cold water men would have a strong team this summer. It is a matter of satisfaction to know that players such as Mr. McCabe's calibre will be found on one of Peterborough teams this season and not on an out-of-town aggregation as has been the case during the last year or two.

• • • •

The matter of Peterborough having a new athletic ground is an old one and the Examiner has grown tired trying to awaken an active interest in the affair. However, we think that if there is not a chance of our seeing a new athletic ground there should be, a grand effort should be made towards securing a grand stand on the Oval, capable of seating at least 400 people. By having a grand stand of that capacity it might be possible to raise a gate of $100.

• • • •

Much interest is being aroused over the fact that the Lindsay team and the T.A.S. team will come together at Lakefield on May 25th. The Lindsay citizens have been making a strong effort to place a swift team on the field and considerable new blood has located in the town during the past 12 months. The result of the match will be awaited somewhat anxiously by Peterborough people.

• • • •

There was some talk last week as to the probability of the Bowling club giving a dance. From present appearances the undertaking has been called off, although it is said the bowlers are in need of finances.

• • • •

The Port Hope Guide in commenting upon Bobbie Mercer's removal to Peterborough hints that it is too early for Peterborough to be reckoning on the make-up of their hockey team for next winter. Although it is a fact that wages are advanced 100 p.c. in Port Hope during the winter months, the Peterborough people are in hope of having Mercer with them when the season opens.

GOLF.

A number of the ladies, it is said are expressing the wish that the services of a professional be obtained to teach them. With so many golfing gentlemen in the club this should be quite unnecessary, and it is felt certain that such enthusiastic players as Mr. R. M. Hamilton, Mr. J. H. Burnham, Mr. Guy Rogers, and others, would only be too pleased to give some lessons, and it is said that there is a little Scotsman who expresses himself as very willing to give others the benefit of any tips he may have picked up "O'ur yonder, 'many the heather hills." Bunker.

LACROSSE.

Port Hope has secured the services of Jack White and Degan, two of Cornwall's strong players.

• • • •

"Toney" Roach, who figured prominently in Port Hope's lacrosse and hockey teams, will, according to reports via Montreal, go back to his native wigwam in Cornwall and will play lacrosse for the braves of that town.

• • • •

Masterson, who was also domiciled in Port Hope, has bid adieu to Athletics and has gone home to Montreal.

• • • •

The O.L.A. has arranged districts and the local teams are grouped in District No. 11:—Oshawa, Port Hope, Peterborough Athletics, Peterborough T.A.S., Belleville; district secretary, J. H. Renwick, Port Hope; meet at Port Hope.

FOOTBALL.

A meeting of the Midland Football Association was held this afternoon at two o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. parlours. There are eight teams in the league. A fuller report will appear in Monday's issue of the Examiner.

BASKETBALL.

To-night there will be a ladies' basket ball match at the Y.M.C.A. between the Capitals and Queen Cities. There will also be a match between the Harriers and the Maple Leafs. During the intermission the seniors will give an exhibition on the German Horse. Mr. Laurence of the Bank of Commerce will favour the audience with a vocal solo.

Two Davin Stories.

"The honorable member for Assiniboia (Mr. Davin) seems to have rooms in his upper story to let," said an opponent in debate in the House.

"Yes," interrupted Davin, "rooms to let, but they're not like yours. They're furnished."

Another Davin story. The debate was on the emergency rations—dog biscuits the Opposition called 'em. Davin was insisting that the duty of the Minister of Militia was to have had the rations analyzed.

"Why," he asked in his rich Irish brogue, "didn't he analoize them?"

At this stage in the argument entered a gallant gentleman, since relegated to private life. He had been dining well.

"And what," asked this temerarious person, "would he analyze them for?"

Davin looked at him with infinite contempt.

"Well," he said, "if I had to make the post-mawrtem on you, I'd analoize you for alcohol."

The Cheapest Telegrams.

The Australian commonwealth's telegraph service is the cheapest in the world. It is operated entirely by the Government as part of the postal system.

For city messenges which includes a suburban area of a radius of ten miles beyond the city limits, the rate is 12 cents for messages of ten words and the address. For messages of the same length to any point within the same state—and the states are generally very much larger than any American state—the charge is 18 cents, while for similar messages to any station within the commonwealth—and from Rockhampton, in Queensland, to Perth, of Western Australia, the distance of wire is more than 4,500 miles—the uniform charge is 24 cents.

It is calculated on the basis of past experiences that these rates will return a revenue sufficient to pay operating expenses of every kind, including the cost of maintenance, and in addition interest on the original expense of construction, amounting to fully $18,000,000.

Australians send more than twice as many messages over the lines at the lower rates as Americans do at the present charges.—Review of Reviews.

How Lloyds Discovers Frauds.

Even to-day cases of fraud discovered in attempts to secure marine insurance unjustly are dealt with very severely by the courts, says Chalmers Roberts in World's Work. A well-remembered case at Lloyds concerns the yacht Firefly. Not long after this boat had been insured for a considerable sum, two men landed in an exhausted condition from a rowing-boat on the south coast of England. They told a long story of shipwreck, of perils braved, of how the Firefly had gone down and under what great difficulty they had escaped. It was subsequently discovered that the whole story was an invention, and that the very boat in which the escape had been made had been stolen by the shipwrecked mariners. They were just upon the point of receiving the sum of insurance money they expected. They obtained instead a lengthy term of imprisonment as the just meed of their audacious crime.

BAPTISTS WELCOME PASTOR AND BRIDE.

Pleasant Function in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Friday Night.

(Belleville Intelligencer.)

The congregation of the Baptist Church last evening tendered a reception to their pastor, Rev. O. C. Elliott, who on Thursday returned to the city with his bride. The invitation which was extended to the members of the church to be present at the reception, was, judging by the numbers present, unanimously accepted. From 6.30 to 7.30 supper was served in the Sunday school rooms, which had been appropriately decorated for the occasion. The ladies, it is needless to say, had provided all that was necessary for the inner man.

After all had been served with the good things provided, the body of the church was repaired to, where an interesting programme was carried out. Rev. R. Wallace was chairman and filled that position admirably.

During the course of the evening addresses of a congratulatory nature were given the pastor by Mrs. (Dr.) Tracy, on behalf of the Ladies' Mission Circle; by Mr. Mowry, on behalf of the Young People's Society, and also by the deacons of the church.

To these Rev. Mr. Elliott made a pleasing and appropriate reply. The function was brought to a close at a seasonable hour, and all were delighted with it.

A CALL TO EDITORS.

Royal Commission Orders Their Appearance in Court.

ARE ACCUSED OF CONTEMPT.

Result of Sensational Articles on Saturday Morning.

MR. COFFEE PRICKS BUBBLE.

Bank Officials Examined But No Clue Found to Alleged Bribe—Investigation of Frank Sullivan's Alleged Admission That He Received $1,500 From Mr. Gamey—Mr. Stratton Will Testify.

Toronto, April 27. — Saturday morning the Royal Commissioners continued the Gamey bribery enquiry, the evidence alternating between newspaper and bank witnesses. Progress was slow at times, when books were being examined. Contrary to expectation, the court continued the enquiry in the afternoon.

Bank Manager Called.

Charles McGill, general manager of the Ontario Bank, testified that he did not remember initialing for any person in September last a cheque for $3,000 or in that neighborhood. The local manager was W. H. Smith. It was so unusual for him to initial cheques for large amounts that he would be sure to remember had he done so. He had not initialed any cheque for $1,000 or over in September. He did not give directions as to payment out and made a thorough search of the books.

To Mr. Riddell he said that after he had been subpaenaed he had not been able to find any trace of such a payment. They had an agency in Sudbury, and the local bank there had a large circulation in the district.

To Mr. Ritchie he said he could not find that any large sums in one hundred dollar bills and fifty dollar bills had been paid out in September, because the teller hadn't the vouchers. It was not possible to get the information, and he couldn't tell whether it was so or not as he didn't know anything about it.

Mail and Empire Article.

Mr. Johnston said that he wished to call Mr. Coffee in view of an article published in the newspapers of this morning.

Mr. Riddell stated that the article had appeared in The Mail and Empire of this morning.

Mr. Johnston wished, he said, to make objection to the article.

The Chancellor stated that this same objection had arisen in connection with the Parnell Commission.

Mr. Blake stated that he did not know what his learned friend referred to specially but he thought it certainly was to be deprecated.

The Chancellor stated that he thought Mr. Johnston had better have the matter verified by affidavit.

Thomas P. Coffee Called.

Thomas C. Coffee, manager of the Trust and Guarantee Company at this point was called with reference to an article appearing in some of the morning papers.

Mr. Riddell—The $3,000 matter having been mentioned in the evidence yesterday and so much having bee made out of it——

The Chancellor—But there was nothing made out of it.

Mr. Ritchie—It was taken in the evidence.

Mr. Riddell—I am desirous without mentioning any names, of having an explanation of what this transaction is.

Mr. Ritchie—All I can say about this is that I believe it has nothing to do with this matter.

Q.—I understand, Mr. Coffee, you had no personal account in the Trust and Guarantee Co. with Mr. Stratton? A.—No, it is closed out some time ago. It is closed out in July, 1901.

Mr. Johnston—What kind of an account was it?

Mr. Riddell—A private account of Mr. Stratton—deposit account.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—His drawings as president would not appear in this book? A.—It appears in the books, but not in this book.

Q.—That is a payment that would appear in your expense account, not in any account of Mr. Stratton at all? A.—No.

Mr. Riddell—Q.—I just want to ask you one or two questions, Mr. Coffee. Mr. Stratton is your president? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who is your vice-president? A.—Mr. C. Kloepfer, of Guelph.

Q.—Then without mentioning any names the $3,000 transaction which has been mentioned more than once in this transaction, a certain company had issued bonds, of which you were trustee? A.—Yes.

Q.—And they had drawn upon you for a certain amount as against the amount in your hands belonging to them, that is the $3,000 transaction? A.—That is all.

Q.—And the other transactions that are mentioned here are purely legitimate transactions? A.—Yes, sir.

The Chancellor—Nothing to do with this case? A.—Nothing in the books has anything whatever to do with this case.

Q.—Has the $3,000 transaction? A.—Nothing whatever.

Mr. Riddell—Q.—And the $1,660—was that sum paid to the vice-president, and is that also a perfectly legitimate transaction? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mr. Stratton had nothing to do with any of these matters? A.—Nothing whatever.

Books and Blotters.

John McGill, manager of the Queen street branch of the Ontario Bank, produced a teller's blotter, a supplemental cash book, and a second teller's blotter, the first for payment out of his own bank and the other for cheques issued on other banks. He testified that after making a careful search he could find nothing in the books which had any connection with this matter.

To Mr. Ritchie he said he knew nothing about any payment of fifties or hundreds out of his bank in September.

T. B. Yates, discount clerk at the Ontario Bank, then took the stand and assisted counsel in looking through the various entries of the books under his control in September last.

Mr. Ritchie, surrounded by Mr. McPherson and Mr. Riddell, then made a lengthy examination of the deposit ledger.

George R. Bartlett recalled.

After a further examination of the books he was examined by Mr. Ritchie, and testified that he knew nothing of any payment of $3,000 or similar large amount in the beginning of September. The $1,700 in certain bills referred to Friday as having been returned on September 15 came from the Merchants' Bank, Toronto.

Mr. McEvoy's Affadavit.

Mr. Johnston—For the purpose of bringing this matter before the court, I read the following affidavit:

"In the matter of a Royal Commission, dated the 28th day of March, 1903, directed to the Hon. Sir John Alexander Boyd, Knight, and the Hon. William Glenholme Falconbridge, authorizing them to enquire into certain charges of bribery or attempts to bribe:

"I, John Millar McEvoy, of the City of London, make oath and say:

"1. I am acting as solicitor for the parties charged herein, and also acting as junior counsel in the same interest.

"2. On this 25th day of April, 1903, and whilst the proceedings before the said Royal Commissioners were and are in progress, The Daily Mail and Empire of date 25th of April, 1903, a newspaper published at the city of Toronto, unfairly, untruthfully and improperly published certain comments and certain alleged evidence touching and concerning the matters herein.

"3. The evidence given by the said newspaper as evidence before the said Royal Commission was not, so far as I am able to discover, in fact so given and there is no reference on the notes of evidence taken by the official stenographers to any company of which James Robert Stratton is president.

"4. I believe that the publication of said comments and alleged evidence was made for the purpose of injuring the said Stratton and interfering with and prejudicing his position in the estimation of the public in this investigation.

"5. The said newspaper is now produced and shown to me and marked Exhibit A, and the comments and alleged evidence are set forth in the first columns on the first page, being the title page of said newspaper, and continued on the second column thereof and headed 'Startling Discoveries made by Lawyers in Gamey Case.'

"J. M. McEvoy."

Sworn before me at the city of Toronto in the County of York this 25th day of April, 1903.

George C. Campbell,
a Commissioner, H.C.J.

The Matters Complained Of.

The matters which are complained of in that newspaper are, without reading it all, set forth on the first and second columns of the title page, which is referred to in the affidavit: "Startling Discoveries Made by Lawyers in Gamey Case."

Then the parts which we say convey the improper inuendo are these: "A discovery made by counsel for the prosecution at yesterday afternoon's session of the Gamey enquiry gives promise of bringing to light one of the most astounding surprises yet provided by the case, which has furnished so many sensational and incomprehensible developments during the past six weeks.

"The discovery was made by counsel a few minutes before adjournment, and there was no time to follow it up, but it will be probed to the bottom to-day, and, should it bear fruit, the result will be the most direct corroboration yet offered of Mr. Gamey's charge that he received bribe money from the very hands of a Minister of the Crown."

Then they refer to a couple of hours being spent, and then in a further paragraph, and in somewhat heavier type, part of it, "A further personal scrutiny, however, of the bank books, was made by counsel, and in a few minutes to four o'clock, in looking over the teller's

THE SUMMER TRAFFIC WILL SOON COMMENCE.

The Hotels on Kawartha Lakes Making Ready for Trade.

T. Eastwood & Son, at Buckhorn, are busy preparing for their guests. They are fencing in their four cottages, and they will probably build another larger cottage for a special American party. The house presents quite a nobby appearance lately. A new front door, grained and brass finishings and electric bell.—The "Windsor" on the other side of the canal is beginning to look up as a summer resort. Being fenced in and trees planted down to the road make a wonderful difference. Mr. Pearson, the proprietor, expects to do a large trade this season. This is the third year for the Windsor and it generally takes two or three years to advertise a place, however, Mr. Pearson has had many more applications this year than during both previous years.

The Burleigh Falls Park hotel, is making very extensive improvements. The dining room is so enlarged a hunded guest can be seated, and the ceiling and walls are laid with steel and look elegant. A large cottage is to be erected on the rocks opposite the lower wharf, and when completed will increase the capacity of the Park Hotel to over 100 guests.

The new proprietors of Mount Julian hotel are kept busy these days. Last week the tug Ajax landed with a scow load of lumber from Bobcaygeon for the improvements. The house will be hardly known in a few weeks, after the wonderful improvements that the the proprietors anticipate doing, and what is being done now is nothing to what is on the cards for next year.

The steamer Alert is replacing her old engine with a fine new tripic-expansion engine. It is expected that nothing on the lakes will be able to touch her, as far as speed is concerned.

Mr. Thos. McConnell, of Lindsay, who purchased Jackson's Island in Sturgeon lake, last year, is reported to be going to erect an hotel this season. A large pavillion is also to be built, and an engine which will run a dynamo for electric light purposes, is spoken of. Music for dancing is to be supplied by electricity. May it be soon.

APPRECIATED CONVENIENCE TO THE YACHTSMEN

In Having the Canal Tolls Abolished—Of Local Importance.

The announcement of the Minister of Finance that for the next two years the canals of Canada will be free, is of considerable local importance. Nationally, and compared with the expense of the canals, the amount that has been collected in tolls, has been of little consequence, yet locally to those using the locks, the tolls have amounted to quite an item in the expenditure of those concerned. The action of the Minister was taken on the representations made by the Navigation Companies Association which interview the Government recently. At the meeting the Trent Valley Navigation Co'y was represented by its solicitor, Mr. Thos. Stewart, of Lindsay, who forcibly placed the position regarding the Kawartha Lakes traffic, and the relief that has been granted by the government will not be without its influence in assisting to develop trade on the locks placing all points on equal footing as regards lockages, but will also be an appreciated convenience to the Yachtsmen, who take such pleasure through the summer in crusing over our seventy miles of lakes.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

THE MARIE LOUISE BEACHED AT STURGEON.

A Large Hole was Torn in the Bottom of the Craft.

Lindsay Post.

The steam tug Marie Louise, owned by the Rathbun Company, met with an accident Friday night at seven o'clock in Sturgeon Lake, and as a result the craft is resting on the bottom in several feet of water off Grantham's boat house, near the upper wharf.

The tug had taken a load of supplies for the firm to Bobcaygeon in the morning and when near the Point upper wharf, on the return trip the wheel is supposed to have got entangled with a buoy under the water, Before the engine could be stopped a large hole was torn in the bottom of the craft near the stern, and the crew, Captain Raymes and Engineer Hancock, seeing that serious consequences were inevitable, steamed for the shore. Fortunately they happened to be only a short distance out and were able to land the boat in shallow water, where it will be easily raised.

THEY ATTENDED DIVINE SERVICE.

Order of Oddfellows at St. Paul's Church.

Commemorated 84th Anniversary Last Night—Excellent Address Given by Rev. J. A. Wilson.

Yesterday the Peterborough and Otonabee Lodges of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, attended divine service at 7 o'clock in St. Paul's church to celebrate their 84th birthday. In the year 1819 the Order of Oddfellows was established on this continent and since that date the organization has continued to increase and prosper. There are on this continent to-day no less than one and a quarter millions of Oddfellows and in Ontario alone there are 27,000 members of this organization. The members were first marshalled in their lodge rooms by Past Grand Master J. W. Miller and then marched in pairs to the place of worship, there occupying the first three rows of seats. As was only fitting to the occasion the total number of members present was exceptionally large.

The church itself was fairly crowded with people, all of whom took a deep interest in the commemorative address given by Rev. J. A. Wilson, the assistant pastor. This oration throughout was a most excellent one, and one of great merit. It showed what the aim of the Order really was. How brotherly love was the chief chord struck by the organization.

Immediately before the reading of the second lesson Mr. Lawrence of the Bank of Commerce, sang "The Holy City" in a very capable manner.

Rev. Mr. Wilson took his text from 1 John, iv, 21:—"And this commandment have we from Him, That He who loveth God love His brother also." In the course of his remarks, after dealing generally and ably with the general exposition of his theme, Rev. Mr. Wilson said: "This commandment that man shall love man is one of the grandest set out in the Bible. The great central principle of brotherhood is love, in fact without love a brotherhood cannot exist. I am glad to speak to you Oddfellows to-night, for I know that your three foremost principles are friendship, love and truth, and the middle one is love, the great theme of the Bible. You also strive for the elevation of humanity; it is a grand and glorious work, but which, if you bring into it hearts full of compassionate love will be grander and more glorious. I congratulate you on your 84th birthday. A human man at the age of 84 years is weak, his eyes are dim and he is no longer like the youth he formerly was. But it is not so with your Order. You are much stronger than you ever have been in previous years. Your eyes, as an Order, are not dim. You obey the commandment and love your brother. But Oddfellows, you who love God, not only do I ask you to love your brother but also Jesus Christ, your elder Brother, so that you in the great day of reckoning will not be afraid to stand before Him."

At the close of what was a very excellent address the choir sang, "This is the Day."

At the conclusion of divine service the Oddfellows marched to their Lodge rooms, where a meeting was held, at which a vote of thanks to Rev. Mr. Wilson for his most encouraging address, and also to the managers for the use of the church, was passed.

CANADIAN ULTIMATOR COMPANY LIMITED.

The Annual Meeting was Held—Satisfactory Reports.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Ultimator Company, Limited, was held on the 20th inst. The report of the directors of what had been accomplished in the six months since the equipping of the factory was commenced, and the present position and prospects of the company, met with the hearty endorsement and approval of the shareholders. The retiring Board of Directors was re-elected, and a vote of thanks was passed to them for the satisfactory showing of the past year. The company is busily engaged in filling orders that have come in, including some from Manitoba, as the outcome of a demonstration in Mr. McAllister's mill, of what the Ultimator Sifting Machine is capable of doing.

Fell Exhausted and Unconscious.

Mrs. R. W. Edwards, 33 McMurray street, Brantford, Ont., suffered for five years with nervous exhaustion, headache and dyspepsia. "The pain in my head would almost drive me crazy. I could not sleep nights, but would walk the floor in agony until I fell exhausted and unconscious. For the past nine months I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and from a mere skeleton this medicine has built me up in flesh and weight until I am strong and well." It would be scarcely possible to produce stronger evidence of the wonderful power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

BERNIER PEGGING AWAY.

Canadian North Pole Enthusiast Gradually Getting More Ground for Hope for His Great Scheme.

Capt. Bernier, who undertakes to discover the Pole for $120,000, has pervaded the Parliament Buildings ever since the session opened at Ottawa. Last session the captain left Ottawa with a sort of understanding that if he collected $60,000 the Government of Canada would see that he got $60,000 more from the public purse. The members of the Government were not displeased with the pluck and persistency of the cheering little captain, and they figured it out that $60,000 was, after all, a small sum to give a man who might never come back to ask for more. It is not every promoter that will let a Government off for $60,000. Capt. Bernier was greatly heartened by the implied promise, and set out to do missionary work all over Canada. The astronomical societies and the scientific institutions took a splendid abstract interest in his theories of Arctic navigation, nodded their heads wisely, and agreed that Bernier's plans were quite feasible. But beyond a moral support they refused to go. The hard cash did not roll in, and all the captain's hard work and tremendous enthusiasm accomplished in a year's time was to raise about $20,000, and that mostly in small subscriptions.

Rich Men Cool.

Although he pointed out to many wealthy, influential persons that Canada had the best right to the North Pole, as being nearest to it, and that a Canadian should have the honor of discovering what has stood for the Golden Fleece to many generations of intrepid navigators—although, in short, the captain used all his arts of earnestness and argument, he found the millionaires hermetically sealed to his adventurous proposition.

More Hopeful Than Ever.

This session he comes back to the House of Commons with $20,000 worth more hope than he had last year. He will not solicit subscriptions any longer. He will solicit influence. He buttonholes members of Parliament. He seeks interviews with members of the Cabinet. He has converted the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who is a Frenchman, like himself, and who has ambitions, as everybody knows, to enlarge the scope of his department. The Minister of Marine listens very kindly to Capt. Bernier's deputation, and hints that the captain's dearest wish may be gratified. The captain is so jolly, so patient withal, that nobody finds him a bore. He has abandoned the silk hat as unsuited to Arctic work, and he now appears in a soft hat, brown and jaunty. He goes about on the coldest days without overcoat or gloves. He expands his chest. He glows with warmth. He who runs may read that here is a man who will find Arctic regions as tolerable as tropic suns. It is a matter of regret that March was not colder, so that all could see how he stands it. A waggish American who saw him rushing about in light marching order said to him:

"Bernier, if they saw you in my country going round without an overcoat in this weather, they'd think that you meant it, and send you to the Pole."

"Ah," said the captain, "if they would only believe here I'd do without a waistcoat!"

Making an Impression.

And gradually Parliament is coming to believe. This hardy little sailor, who doesn't make more of a zero day than you or I do of the first of July, begins to impress the House of Commons as being sincere and reasonable. No icy heart repels him. No frosty face sets him back. The members say, "If he freezes to us this way, how much harder he will freeze to the North Pole." The earnestness of this ruddy little sea captain to discover something that hasn't six per cent. on the face of it suggests to the most practical that fame is better than money, and that some men burn to carry out the brave dreams that most of us forget with our boyhood's toys. It is understood that Sir Wilfrid Laurier favors the plans of his jovial compatriot. Capt. Bernier's dash for the Pole will come up in the House of Commons, and the probabilities are that Canada will invite her soul for the nonce by handing the captain a hundred thousand dollars and a God-speed. Then the captain will have the ship built in British Columbia, taking care to have it double trussed with green heart. And after that he will provision it with tins of pea soup and man it with good French-Canadians, chosen from the famous crew of the "Julie Plante."

A CALL TO EDITORS.

blotter, it was found that on September 9th, one day before Mr. Gamey signed the letter to the Premier, in Mr. Aylesworth's office, and two days before the date on which he says $3,000 in Ontario Bank bills were divided between himself and Frank Sullivan, a cash payment of 93,000 was made on cheque.

"Reference to the supplementary cash book showed that there was one drawn by the Trusts and Guarantee Company, of 14 King street west, Toronto, a financial institution of which Hon. James Robert Stratton is president.

"The next step in tracing this payment, after making the discovery a matter of court record, will be the production of the cheque. It will probably prove to have been signed by the company's manager, Mr. T. P. Coffee, but, most important of all, it will also bear upon its face the name of the individual or corporation to whom the money was paid. It will be found that the payment was one in no way traceable to any of the chief figures in this perplexing case, but until this is proven the circumstances will undoubtedly furnish food for much speculation."

Then the comment goes on to trace up these bills, the $1,500, and ends by a reference to Mr. Barwick, K.C.

In the Hands of the Commission.

Mr. Johnston—We are, of course, entirely in the hands of your Lordships. Your Lordships may, or may not, think it proper to direct that anything further should be done. We thought it proper this matter should be brought to the notice of your Lordships and we ask to be advised accordingly. Whatever your Lordships shall direct will be carried out, so far as we are concerned.

The Chancellor—Does it appear before us to-day that this three thousand dollars has no connection with this matter?

Mr. Johnston—Yes, my Lord. And there was no reference whatever in the evidence to the Trust and Guarantee Company.

The Chancellor—The proceeding would be by calling on The Mail and Empire to show cause. It is a matter that should be on affidavit I think.

Mr. Johnston—Then, I shall put in a supplementary affidavit.

The Mail Must Explain.

Mr. Johnston—I also refer incidentally to the reference to the prosecution of some person acting on his behalf, that is in regard to the seventeen $100 bills to which I have referred your Lordship. That is a matter that does not concern Mr. Stratton, but it is a paragraph of which I think your Lordships should be seized.

After consultation with Chief Justice Falconbridge, the Chancellor said:

Then we direct that the "Mail and Empire" be called upon on Monday to show cause why they should not be committed for contempt for commenting on evidence which is in the course of being investigated, and which is incomplete, and interfering with the proper administration of justice.

The World, Too.

Mr. Riddell pointed out that The World had offended in the same way, and a similar affidavit would be put in.

H. M. Passmore's Evidence.

H. M. Passmore, a reporter engaged on The Toronto Telegram, was called and sworn. He testified that he had a conversation with Frank Sullivan on Tuesday the 21st of April last.

The Chancellor—Could you give us the conversation instead of going into lengthy details?

Witness told how he met Frank Sullivan at the Walker House with his father on that morning, and they were speaking of Gamey's visit to Buffalo. He said the conversation turned upon Gamey being crooked, and I had said to Frank Sullivan that my friends had warned me not to take too much stock in what Mr. Gamey said, not to trust him too far, and Frank Sullivan said he believed that Mr. Gamey was the crookedest man alive. Then something was said about the money, if I remember correctly—

Mr. Johnston—What is this? A.—Something was said by Mr. Frank Sullivan about the money, to the effect that the $900 came from the same place as the $3,000. Then that was followed up by his voluntary statement that he had received—his words were, "I got $1,500 of it up to to-day."

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—$1,500 he meant? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he say of it or out of it? A.—I think he said out of it.

Q.—What did you say to that? A.—Well, he looked at me while he was saying that and I looked at him, half inclined on the spur of the moment to doubt it, and I said, "You did, eh?" and he said, "You bet I did," It was not his first statement that carried conviction, but it was what he said afterwards.

The Chancellor—You are to tell us not about your convictions, but about your conversation. Was that before he gave his evidence or after it? A.—That was before, on the morning of the 21st.

Omissions From the Article.

Mr. Johnston put witness through a long and severe cross-examination. He was asked why he did not report Frank Sullivan's remark that Gamey was the crookedest man alive, and answered, "Well, I would not put everything in the paper that Frank Sullivan would tell me." He put in what he thought was right from the point of view of its news value. He knew "the fact that the case turned largely on the payment of $3,000 to Gamey, and secondly upon the fact that Sullivan got half of it." He spoke to Sullivan for the first time in his life the morning after the charges were made in the House, although on that occasion he denied that his name was Frank Sullivan. He was not in any sense confidential with Frank Sullivan.

Q.—As far as personal relations were concerned he was a stranger to you and you to him? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you tell this story of Frank Sullivan, who swore in the box that he never got a dollar; you say deliberately that he makes a confession that he got $1,500 of this money? A.—Without any——

Q.—Do you swear to that? A.—I swear to that without mental reservation, hesitation or equivocation of any kind.

Q.—You tell the public and the court that Frank Sullivan, the man who did not apparently open his mouth to anybody, told you in the Walker House, a stranger, that he is the man who got $1,500? A.—He said so.

Q.—And he knew then that you were a reporter? A.—I suppose he did.

The Telegram's Libel Suit.

At Mr. Buchanan's (City Editor of The Telegram who had passed the matter) request he saw Mr. McEvoy the Wednesday evening following in connection with the libel suit entered against Mr. John Ross Robertson of The Telegram. He said he did not want to publish an explanation.

Q.—No proposition of any statement made that what he said was, "The next thing it will be shown that the money came from the Tories? A.—No.

Q.—And that Frank Sullivan said then, "I got $1,500 Tory money?" A.—Not at all.

Q.—Those words were not stated on that occasion? A.—They certainly were not.

Q.—Did Mr. McEvoy say to you, "You publish the best thing you can and I will see about withdrawing the libel suit?" A.—Those words were mentioned, but in this connection, I said, "I have not been very long on The Telegram and I wanted Mr. Robertson and Mr. Buchanan to be thoroughly satisfied that the statement was right." I went to see McEvoy, and he said, "Well, Hank"—he has known me many years—"If I had known it was you, the thing might have been steered in some other way." He said that to me. Then when I saw Mr. McEvoy in the presence of Mr. Buchanan, I stated that I was willing to state that Sullivan said that he did not say it. That was as far as I was willing to go, and McEvoy said, "All right, fight it out."

Q.—After making a statement in The Telegram that he did say it, you would state that he did not say it? A.—He did say it.

Q.—Were you willing to publish those words, Sullivan denies making that statement, without having seen Sullivan at all—were you willing to do that? A.—On the strength of what Mr. McEvoy said.

Q.—Why were you going to publish anything about Frank Sullivan on the Wednesday? A.—That would not have been retracting anything.

Was Money Ever Paid?

Q.—You knew that the question was raised whether first of all there was any money paid at all or not; you knew that? A.—No, I had never heard that.

Q.—The first you have heard of it is to-day? A.—The only time I ever heard anything about the payment of money, Mr. McEvoy told me himself that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt spoke about paying money. Then at the Walker House Mr. McEvoy said that the money was obtained at the Conservative caucus held here a couple of days before.

Q.—Did not you know that the one great enquiry at this commission and before the public was, Did these men get three thousand dollars, and where did it come from; did you know that that was one of the great objects of this enquiry? A.—The great object of this enquiry was to find out, as I understood it, whether the three thousand dollars which Mr. Gamey is alleged to have received, really came from Mr. Stratton.

Q.—And whether he got the whole of it? A.—I don't know anything about that.

Q.—And you knew that if Frank Sullivan admitted getting fifteen hundred dollars of that money, that would of course support Gamey's story, and main story in this investigation; you knew that? A.—I suppose I might have considered that if I had thought of it.

Q.—Did you or did you not know it? A.—As a matter of news, I knew there was something in it.

Relative Value of News.

Mr. Johnston here asked witness many questions about the relative value of the news in the day's Telegram, in view of his statement that he had condensed the Sullivan interview because of the lateness of the hour when the report was written, and also questioned him closely to find out how the alleged statement made by Sullivan came about.

Q.—I ask you if that was in answer to a question of yours, was it, about money? Was it or was it not? His admission when he said about the $900? Was that in answer to a question of yours—$900 out of the same fund? A.—I can't remember.

Q.—Was it or was it not? Give me the best recollection you have? A.—I think it was his statement.

Q.—That is without any question on your part? A.—Yes.

Q.—You have sworn to that already and you will stick to it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And the $1,500 was all to his statement voluntary? A.—Yes.

Q.—No answer to any question? A.—The statement was made absolutely voluntarily without any even suggestion from me.

Q.—It was a simple, absolute, voluntary statement made openly to you, a newspaper reporter, in the Walker House between nine and ten o'clock on Tuesday morning, by Frank Sullivan. Is that right? A.—Yes, sir.

Doubted It.

Q.—Then it was so surprising to you that you doubted it? A.—It was an important admission, and the way he said it I thought it might be—he was feeling pretty good and had been smiling, and half smiled when he said this, and then it was smile—I didn't know whether he was smiling from good humor, or smiled because he said this as a joke.

Q.—You were inclined to doubt the truth of the statement? A.—When he smiled I did.

Q.—Then, the only reason you thought it was serious was because you said, "You did, eh?" And he said, "You bet your life I did?" A.—Yes. The smile went off his face.

Q.—And that changed your opinion? A.—Yes.

Q.—You can't say what he intended or whether he intended it seriously or the other way—you can't say as to that? A.—No sir; but my impression——

Mr. Johnston—That is all.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—Did you believe when he made his final statement that he was serious? A.—Yes, I believed the statement when he said, in response to the second question, that he did.

Witness further said he had walked up from the Walker House to the House with Mr. McEvoy that morning and walked back to the Walker House immediately afterwards. Mr. McEvoy and he were warm friends and both good Liberals. Capt. Sullivan had walked away before the incident with Frank Sullivan occurred, and he did not think that Capt. Sullivan was within hearing distance when Frank made his statement. The corner, too, was a noisy one from the street cars. Mr. McEvoy in the interview about the libel suit had told him that Frank Sullivan had denied that he made the statement. At no time during that interview had he receded from the position that Frank Sullivan had made the statement to him. He had been with The Telegram since the Saturday of the second week in March, had come then from Ottawa, and had left the service of the Ontario Government about the 1st of February, when he went to Ottawa. Mr. Riddell here put in another affidavit from Mr. McEvoy with regard to the article in The World to the same effect as that of The Mail about the $3,000 entry in the Ontario Bank books, which he read.

What the World Said.

Mr. Riddell—The article is this: "Tracing the Boodle Fund Paid Gamey by the Briber." "Three Thousand in Hundred Dollar Bills Very Near the Minister's Hands." "Charles Ritchie, K. C., with the aid of the paying teller of the Ontario Bank, and the books of that institution, tried for two hours yesterday afternoon to trace the $3,000 which R. R. Gamey alleges he and Frank Sullivan obtained from Hon. J. R. Stratton. It was a fishing expedition."

The Chancellor—This is the same tenor as the other?

Mr. Riddell—Yes, my Lord.

To Chancellor Boyd, Mr. Johnston again pointed out that there was no mention of the Trusts and Guarantee Company in the official evidence

"MAIL" AND "WORLD" CITED FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

On Head of Slanderous Statement Respecting Hon. Mr. Stratton.

DELINQUENTS IN COURT.

Editors Appear Before the Commission to "Explain"—Helping out Gamey With Slanderous Insinuations.

In the Examiner of Saturday, an explicit and direct denial was given to the insinuation of the Mail and Empire that a $3,000 cheque, issued by the Trusts and Guarantee Company, of Toronto, of which Mr. Stratton is president, virtually constituted the bribery fund which Mr. Gamey alleged was paid him. It was stated that the amount of $3,000 referred to, was a straight business transaction connected with the legitimate operations of the Trust Company, and that, contrary to what was insinuated, the $3,000 cheque did not furnish the slightest ground for connecting Mr. Stratton with the alleged bribery of Gamey, through the cheque in question, or otherwise.

As will be seen by the report of the investigation elsewhere, the cheque was issued in the ordinary course of business, and the Mail's insinuation or charge, is utterly groundless and gratuitous.

The Conservative case, as developed by the investigation, even before the defence is heard, seems to be so weak that the journalistic champions of Mr. Gamey are compelled to resort to invented slanders to give an appearance of vitality to their case.

The Mail and Empire and Toronto World, are cited before the Courts to explain why they have so maliciously travelled outside the record in order to traduce a political opponent.

A case must be weak which has to resort to what is equivalent to straight lying to bolster it up.

AN ACCIDENT AT CEREAL CO'S DAM.

William Bell Very Seriously Injured.

Was Shovelling When Arm of Derrick Fell on his Head—"Accident may be Fatal" say the Doctors.

A very serious accident occurred this afternoon at the Cereal Company's new dam, William Bell, a married man of 38 years of age, residing at 857 Water street, had just resumed work, after returning from his dinner. He was doing some shovelling under the derrick, which is at work hoisting stones, when the hook was wrenched out of the arm, and that piece of the machine, being totally unsupported fell and struck Mr. Bell on the head just above the forehead, causing a fracture of the skull.

Drs. Gray and Young were soon on the scene, and both very much fear that the accident will be fatal. The ambulance was immediately summoned and the unconscious injured man taken to the Nichols Hospital.

Mr. Bell has no family. Much sympathy is expressed for the injured man's wife at this most distressing accident.

Mr. W. Francis Firth enjoys the distinction of being the only Canadian who has sung in Italian Opera at the famous theatre, "San Carlo," of Naples. The journals of that city speak of him as an artist in the first ranks. He will sing in Peterborough, Friday, May 1st. 2d

A YOUNG BRIDE'S UNTIMELY DEATH.

Demise of Mrs. James Hards (nee Pearl Hamilton.

The dividing line between rejoicing and death is very narrow. A sad proof of this is in the lamented death of Mrs. James Hards, whose sadly sudden demise, following a few days on her wedding will come as a great shock to her many friends.

The deceased young lady took ill on Wednesday of last week, having contracted a cold, which developed into pneumonia. It reached an acute stage yesterday, and at six o'clock in the evening she passed away.

The late Mrs. Hards' maiden name was Pearl Hamilton, she being the only child of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hamilton of No. 495 Aylmer street. She was 20 years of age, and was very popular amongst a wide circle of friends. Only three weeks ago today she was united in marriage to Mr. Jas. Hards, of Mr. Thomas Barrie's establishment, and death, sad enough at any time, becomes especially more so under the distressing circumstances under which a bright young life passes away and the prospects of future happiness are blighted.

The funeral will take place from the residence of the deceased's parents, No. 495 Aylmer street, at 2.30 o'clock to-morrow, and proceed to the Little Lake Cemetery for interment.

The many friends of Mr. Fred Whitcroft will regret to learn that he is suffering from an attack of appendicitis. He was removed to the Nicholls Hospital yesterday.

The Rev. G. A. McLelland, recently called to the Presbyterian church, Norwood, will be inducted by the Presbytery on Thursday next at 2.30. A reception will be given in the evening.

The Rev. J. C. Speer, of Toronto, brother of Mrs. R. A. Hamilton, Aylmer street, and Mr. Hards, of Toronto, father of Mr. Jas. Hards, of town, with other friends arrived on the midnight last night to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Jas. Hards.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE SIR OLIVER MOWAT.

Pastor of George Street Church Honours the Dead.

Describes the Late Lieut.-Governor of Ontario as a Man—His Character.

At the evening service in the George street Methodist church, the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, in the course of his sermon, took occasion to refer to the late of the late Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Sir Oliver Mowat. Taking as his text the words, "He that doeth the will of God shall abide forever," Mr. Wilson drew attention to the fact that the brevity of life and the transitoriness of the things of the world, had been a favourite theme with poets and philosophers in all ages. Greek philosopher and Hindoo worshipper have alike recognized this fact, but only in the Bible do we find the hope of immortality positively and clearly defined. Job declares that "In my flesh shall I see God;" while John states "The word of the Lord endureth forever," and "He that doeth the will of God shall abide forever." Change and decay characterize the things of this world. The great kingdoms that flourished in centuries gone by have long since crumbled into dust and passed into oblivion. Science and thought are continually changing. Old theories have had to give way to progress and discovery. The text books of science, of even ten years ago, are to-day considered worthless. In the thought of the poet, "All the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players. They have their exits and their entrances." Heaven and earth may pass away, but "He that doeth the will of God shall abide forever." Character is the only thing that endures.

Last Wednesday there was carried out from Government House, Toronto, to his last resting place, a man whose character was such that all Ontario uncovered its head in recognition of the passing away of a great and good man—of a man who in the midst of the high honour received by him all through his life, maintained the Christian principles of integrity and uprightness. Sir Oliver Mowat received high honour at the hands of his countrymen, but Government House added no honour to such a character — he adorned Government House. During his long term of political life, and in the fierce white light that beats on the life of a public man, in no single instance did Sir Oliver Mowat betray the Christian principles adopted by him in early life. His life was an emphatic demonstration that it is possible to mingle with the affairs and the men of the world, and conduct the business of the world, and at the same time remain true to the principles of the Christian religion.

Some people had the idea that to become a Christian meant the giving up of many of the things of the world, that it was impossible to mingle in the affairs of the world and carry out the principles of Christian citizenship. The life of Sir Oliver Mowat proved it possible to be a Christian in politics, and if so in politics, then, surely, it was possible in all the circumstances of life. Every great daily in the country, irrespective of party, united to do honour to the man who in the midst of political life, kept his character pure and unsullied, and who would not sacrifice his Christian principles, no no matter what the pressure might be.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

THIS TOWN has many needs. One of these is a good opera house or music hall. We have none now. Bradburn's Opera House is out of commission. The stage is dismantled and hedged in by a hoarding like an excavation for a building in a street. We have now no public assembly room suitable for large gatherings or entertainments of more than local character. The Y. M.C.A. Hall is not large enough for anything more pretentious than a parlour concert, parlour theatricals, or charades. We need a good opera house, sufficiently modern and commodious to warrant the visit of companies of some merit. The people want amusement, especially, the young, and if we don't provide it in the shape of reasonably moral and diverting entertainments, they will be sought in the saloon, and what is worse, for girls, especially, in the streets. Every town of importance has a good opera house. Why, the little town of Rat Portage, in New Ontario, has a better opera house than Peterborough ever had, and Peterborough was a town with all the other appliances of civilization, when Rat Portage was only a lumber camp. Even Port Hope and Lindsay have good opera houses. For a town that is so far ahead of other towns, in some things, we are woefully behind other towns in some things, and one of these is an opera house. A citizen suggests that the town itself should build a good opera house—on the ground floor — with council chamber, town offices, and other offices connected. He maintains that the investment would not only pay dividends, but would bring entertainments under municipal control in a way to ensure their proper and moral character.

• • •

ANOTHER NEED is an isolation hospital or some equivalent provision in connection with our hospitals, and the very plain language of the secretary of the Provincial Board of Health reveals another need, that of the Board of Health and the town authorities being a little more alert and prompt. If we would adequately cope with disease, we must deal energetically with the causes. While an isolation hospital or its equivalent, is an urgent demand, it would not be needed if we had our general sanitary conditions in a state that they should be in. The obvious truism asserted by the "Fourth of July" stump orator — "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," is applicable in spirit to the achievement of satisfactory sanitary conditions. Nobody doubts the Board of Health's good intentions, but "good intentions" are used as pavement material in a warmer climate, we all wot of. Delay is the fatal fault of both the Board of Health and the town authorities. Exempli gratia, the condition of the lane in the rear of George street between Hunter and Brock. This thing has been a nuisance and a menace to health for years and between the divided jurisdiction of the Board of Health and Town authorities nothing is done. That long talked of conference between these two bodies has not yet been arranged. Why? Health and all it means for the good name of the town and its consequent prosperity, are more important than street railways, beet sugar factories and electric light, important and indispensable as these things are.

• • •

A TIMELY REFERENCE was that of a citizen to the condition at the north terminus of Stewart street at the railway. If this escarpment—a natural beauty spot—including the bluff west to and including the northern terminus of Rubidge street, were cleared and provided with seats, and the cedars growing there trimmed and tended, it would be a delightful and cosy resting place within sound of the pearly babble of the water below and the diversion of the rush of a passing train. Now it is made a dumping ground for discarded fruit tins, superannuated boots, dead cats, slops and rubbish. We have several of these accidental little park spots and we should cherish, beautify and enjoy them. The little row of three cornered plazas along Park street will, when the trees are grown be delightful resting places for the heated summer pedestrian or wheelman. That at the corner of Park and Charlotte would still be a cow-pasture but for the enterprise of the residents in the neighbourhood. The town has neglected it, but Mr. J. L. Hughes has taken it in hand and now it is a beautiful cosy little spot.

• • •

WE CAN MAKE Peterborough one of the most beautiful towns in the Dominion with a little care and general co-operation. The homely old saying that if every house-wife sweeps in front of her own place, the whole street will be clean, applies to the care of the town. If every resident would keep his place in front as tidy and trim as some others are kept, the whole town would be beautiful. But one sees beautifully kept premises inside, with the street outside dirty, untidy and what is the meanest thing immaginable, the rakings of private lawns thrown into the street in front—a most untidy and, in the interests of consistent neatness, vicious, practice.

• • •

SATURDAY'S EXAMINER contained a little article about our parks, of which we have every reason to be proud. Let us attend to the complementary matters and make our private places and the streets in front correspond. Let us strive to create a sentiment and appreciation of beauty in all our citizens. They can be educated up to this point. The people have been so educated in other places. A lady who has friends in Rockford, Illinois, says it is a beautiful city, where the sentiment of beauty has been so developed in the populace, that the flowers planted in the street boulevards, are as undisturbed as the flowers in a border on an enclosed lawn.

A CALL TO EDITORS.

taken by the court reporter. The information was gained by private inspection of the books.

Chancellor Boyd said a similar order of the court would issue.

An argument then arose as to the production in court of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, the parents of Mrs. Frank Sullivan. Mr. Blake exonerated the defence, and the commissioners ordered that the witnesses be procured as soon as possible.

Mr. Bartlett Again.

Mr. Bartlett, the paying teller of the Ontario Bank, then took the stand to be examined by Mr. Ritchie, and Mr. Johnston walked over to Mr. Blake's table and said to the senior counsel for the prosecution: If there is any application that comes through you for witnesses I will produce them if at all possible, but I am not going to pay attention to communications of perhaps irresponsible persons. Whatever you want me to do I will do.

Mr. Blake (holding out his hand), All right, I want $10,000.

Mr. Johnston retreated.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—Mr. Bartlett, have you got that information I asked for? A.—Yes, of the 8th, 9th, 10th and 11th of September.

Q.—On Monday, the 8th of September you paid out seventeen $100 bill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then on the 9th you paid out twenty-one $50 bills and one $100 $100 bill? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then on the 10th, you did not pay out any of either? A.—On the 10th I paid out one $100 bill and apparently no fifties.

Q.—On the 11th you paid out twenty-one $50 bills and twenty $100 bills? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now have you any means of showing to whom you paid the twenty $100 bills on the 11th? A.—No.

Q.—Can you say that it went out in one payment or not? A.—I could not say that. If it went out in one payment there would be a cheque for a corresponding amount.

Q.—So you have no means of ascertaining whether it went out in a lump sum, whether the $2,000 in $100 bills went out in that way? A.—No.

Q.—Now are there any means by which you could ascertain that? A.—No.

Q.—By searching of the books? A.—No, my record is the only record.

Q.—That would not show it? A.—It would show it if there was a cheque for that amount.

Q.—But that $2,000 might be included in a cheque for $2,500 or a larger amount? A.—Yes.

Q.—You paid out twenty $100 bills and twenty-one fifties on that day? A.—Yes, I had so many less at the end of the day.

Cross-examined by Mr. Riddell.

Q.—Have you received any instructions to make an exhaustive search through the books in order to see if you can trace any entries bearing upon this matter? A.—Not any other dates than this.

Q.—I want to see the supplementary books—I want to see the persons who drew out large sums of money. Begin at September 2nd.

Mr. Riddell and the witness then began a survey of the books, and at adjournment at 12.55, had noted two entries in the name of J. M. Clark.

At the resumption of the Commission at two o'clock Mr. Bartlett was recalled and made explanations to Mr. Riddell and Mr. Ritchie as to the various items about which they had been enquiring.

No Block to Enquiry.

After Mr. Bartlett had left the box the Chancellor said: "Subject to the few items in reference to the banks that you wish to clear up, the only other witnesses are the two Wilsons?

Mr. Blake—Yes; and then, my Lords, I may say this, that some communications have been sent to those who are engaged in this matter, some private and confidential and others that have been simply mentioned by people who thought that their communications should receive consideration and attention and should lead to possibly their examination and the examination of others. My learned friend and myself have investigated these as well as we can, and we do not find that we would be justified in pursuing any of the avenues that are suggested in these communications, but I do not want, hereafter, that it shall be said that any people or any matters that were material to the investigation have been excluded, and I want just to mention here and now that if any person desires to give any further evidence that they think would be material, that your Lordships, I presume, will of course be ready to receive it. I do not desire hereafter that it shall be said we were the means of blocking or preventing or excluding any matter that was relevant to the investigation.

Mr. Ritchie—There is one matter I have only learned now, my learned friend, Mr. McPherson, has subpoenaed a witness, in response to some information he has got. He is not here to-day, but will be here on Monday. I want to confer with my learned friends, and perhaps, we may not call him at all, but if called he will only take a very short time.

The Defence's Position.

Mr. Johnston—Also, with my learned friend. Mr. Blake, perhaps your Lordships will be good enough to note that in connection with ourselves, we have received, like our learned friends, many communications. We have endeavored to trace them up, and have, we think, traced them to their legitimate source, and find nothing relevant to the issues presented before the Commission.

We are exactly in the same position that my learned friend is in, that if any one has any evidence whatever, either for or against the accused, in this matter, we shall, indeed, be very glad, indeed, to have this opportunity to have it put in. If these people desire to communicate with us further in the matter, we shall give them all the consideration to which their statements may be entitled.

Witnesses, and Witnesses.

The Chancellor—No doubt, in communications of this kind a great many people pretend to have knowledge and communicate that alleged knowledge as being relative to the issues for the mere purpose of being brought into court and having the notoriety that accompanies it, without possessing any information at all. They are not witnesses at all, and merely occupy the time of the court to no purpose. A great many, I suppose, are of that class; but if any communication is sent which is likely to lead to any relevant result, this commission will be open at all times to receive that evidence. As was said in the Parnell Commission, the enquiry here has proceeded along the ordinary lines of litigation; it has been left to the counsel on each side to bring forward such evidence as may seem to them to support their contention and throw light upon the matter in dispute.

To Get at the Real Truth.

We have recognized the duties cast upon us to get at the real truth of the matter, and in regard to any branch of the enquiry and in regard to any subject upon which evidence has not been called, if we find there are any witnesses brought to our knowledge at any time that have not been called by either side, it is our duty to have those witnesses before the court for the determination of the matter as far as knowledge and skill will enable. Therefore, there should be no difficulty on the part of the Commission in receiving this evidence at any time there may be found to be such.

Prosecution Closed.

Subject to that, Mr. Blake, you close your side of the case?

Mr. Blake—Yes, my Lord.

The Chancellor—The evidence on your behalf will be open to receive this additional witness when he comes and one other witness that Mr. McPherson spoke of. That being so, are you in a position, Mr. Johnston, to go on?

Mr. Johnston—We may perhaps understand this before the court rises. My learned friend has asked for Mr. and Mrs. Wilson as two witnesses whose evidence he desires to present to the court.

The Chancellor—Mr. Wilson has been examined.

Mr. Johnston—If we are able to produce Mrs. Wilson on Monday morning you will be able to go on with the examination, Mr. Balke?

Mr. Blake—Yes.

Mr. Johnston—Otherwise, we shall be ready to go on at 10 o'clock on Monday.

The Chancellor—At any rate, Mrs. Wilson cannot take very long.

Mr. Blake—No. Except as to the application your Lordships have given——

The Chancellor—They may be enlarged.

Mr. Blake—Mr. Johnston you will have those witnesses here?

Mr. Johnston—If Mr. Wilson and his wife can be here on Monday morning they will be here.

Mr. Ritchie—In any event the evidence will be short.

At 2.35 p.m. the Commission was adjourned till to-day at 10 o'clock a.m. The Commission will rise at 11.30 o'clock, and not sit again until 2.30 o'clock, out of respect to the late Judge Lount, whose funeral will take place to-day.

Mr. Stratton to Testify.

The defence will begin to-day, after the evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, parents of Mrs. Frank Sullivan, and of possibly one other witness has been heard. These will take a very short time. The first witness for the defence will be the bank officials. Mr. Stratton will testify on his own behalf later on in the investigation.

SUFFERED FOR SIX YEARS.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. Huffman, of Napanee.

And now she Recommends Them to Other Young Ladies or Married Women.

Napanee, Ont., April 26. —(Special.) That Dodd's Kidney Pills are one of the greatest boons ever conferred on suffering womankind, is the experience of Mrs. John C. Huffman, of this place. For the benefit of her sister women she has given the following statement for publication:—

"I had been troubled for about six years, and the pain was so great I could not stand it. I could not entertain any company.

"One night when I was feeling miserable I read of some wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I decided to try them. The first box brought an improvement, and by the time I had taken six boxes I was completely cured.

"I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any person suffering from Kidney Disease and I make this statement hoping that it will help other young ladies or married women."

Mrs. Huffman is only one of many women who have proved that many female complaints are the result of disordered Kidneys and are as such easily curable by using Dodd's Kidney Pills

It stops that tickling in the throat, is pleasant to take and soothing and healing to the lungs. Mr. E. Bishop Brand, the well-known Galt gardener, writes:—I had a very severe attack of sore throat and tightness in the chest. Some times when I wanted to cough and could not I would almost choke to death. My wife got me a bottle of DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP, and to my surprise I found speedy relief. I would not be without it if it cost $1.00 a bottle, and I can recommend it to everyone bothered with a cough or cold.
Price 25 Cents.

Murder and Sudden Death.

Dawson, Y. T., April 27.—Alexander Coutts of Eastern Canada was shot through the lungs and probably fatally wounded at the new town of Fairbanks, in the recently discovered Tanana diggings by William Dunckle, former mining recorder at Fairbanks, on April 7. The shooting is the first to occur in the Tanana Basin, and excitement among the miners runs high.

Herbert Crane from Ontario and known in Dawson was killed at Nome Feb. 17, by a slide of earth and met instant death. He was 40 years of age.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Instinct of Animals.

An English periodical says: The instinct whereby wild creatures detect those of the human species who are likely to be hostile to them and those who may be regarded as harmless is of so subtle a quality that it almost appears to partake of the nature of metaphysics. In the nesting season plovers will actually buffet the angler who is fishing too close to their broods, but by the date of the shooting season they would not allow him to get within two fields of them. The wood pigeon seems to know exactly the range of the modern fowling piece and will flash boldly past at an interval of 100 yards and upward, but is careful quickly to put a tree between himself and a sportsman if disturbed at any range within gunshot. The fox knows that he is sacred from guns and will audaciously seize a fallen pheasant and decamp with it within twenty paces of a retriever. He is quite aware that the latter is no foxhound.

The Habit of Acquisition.

"It beats me," said the philosopher, "that people will keep piling up money long after they have several times as much as they'll ever be able to use."

Then he went out for a walk. Passing a bookstore, he saw half a dozen very cheap books, which, however, he knew he hadn't time to read and doubted very much if he ever would have time to read. But they were cheap, and he bought them and sent them home to be added to his library, which already contained several times as many books as he would ever have time to read.

Nevertheless he continued to wonder at the senseless accumulation of money.

Far Better.

The Broken Health of School Life.

Close Confinement, Over Exertion at Study and worry over examinations too great a strain for the Nerves.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

So many school girls and school boys, too, are pale, languid and run down in health, subject to weak spells and nervous headaches, and victims of sleeplessness, that we no longer realize the folly of developing the mind at the expense of the body.

It is on the mothers and fathers that falls the responsibility of looking after the health of their children and to them we suggest the wisdom of having the health of their children kept at the high water mark by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is so gentle and natural in action as to be admirably suited to the requirements of children. The benefits to be derived from its use are certain and lasting, as it goes to form new red corpuscles in the blood and creates new nerve force.

Mrs. R. Wareham, 267 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., states:

"One of my children has suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, dizziness and sleeplessness, and in fact, was all run down, pale and languid. These troubles we attributed to over-study and confinement at school. She began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I can say that we have found this treatment exceedingly helpful. It has relieved her of headache, steadied her nerves, and built up her system wonderfully. We can see a great change in her, as the color is returning to her face, and she is gaining in flesh and weight."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box; six boxes for $2.50 at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. 10

IMPERIAL LIFE.

A Year of Unexceptional Prosperity and Achievements.

Toronto • • The Executive Officials of the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, report that the year just ended has been one of exceptional prosperity and achievements. It is a well known fact that the Imperial Life's past record has been unequalled in life assurance experience in Canada, but the most sanguine of its numerous policy-holders and active representatives throughout the Dominion will be surprised to learn of the following magnificent results:—Applications for assurances aggregated over $4,500,000; the policies actually issued exceeded the large amount of $4,000,000; cash income totalled over $500,000; the accumulated assets reached $1,650,000, while the entire policies of assurance in force exceed $13,500,000. It was also stated that the interest income from investments was again more than sufficient to pay all of the death claims of the year.

A Golden Heart

BY BERTHA M. CLAY

Author of "The Gypsy's Daughter," "Another Woman's Husband," "A Heart's Bitterness," "A Mad Love," "A Heart's Idol," "Gladys Greye," Etc.

Father and daughter sat for some few minutes after his departure as though they were turned to stone. Then, drawing her to him gently, the old man said:

"What do you think of his lordship's proposal, Dolores? Is it a favor from Heaven?"

"I cannot tell," she replied.

"He is very good, very noble; and, oh, child, from my heart I dread poverty and the workhouse! He is generous and wealthy. He said I should be a rich man. What will you do, Dolores! Can you give me some idea, something to rest my heart upon, something to think of and hope for?"

"I will consider the proposal, papa," she answered. "I cannot decide at once. I must have time."

"You would be mistress of Deeping Hurst—a place the like of which is not in England—Lady Rhysworth of Deeping Hurst, and I shall be a rich man. You love me, do you not, Dolores?" he asked, with almost childish eagerness.

She kissed his forehead tenderly.

"I love you so well," she replied, "that I would give my life for you, papa."

"And you will weigh his lordship's offer. I shall try to be satisfied with these words, Dolores. I feel the better now. Get me a bottle of the Burgundy with the yellow seal—there is enough to last until I am a rich man and you are Lady Rhysworth. Then I will go to sleep. My brain is tired; it aches with terrible misgivings. Sometimes, when I was a young man, I passed the alms-houses at Deeping. I should not like to live there, Dolores. You must not let the last of the Cliffdens go there."

"I will think about what we had better do," she said; and, though his eyes followed her wistfully, she would say no more.

She brought the bottle of Burgundy and gave him a glass of it. Tears came to the old man's eyes.

"I should not live long without my wine, Dolores," he said; "it gives me fresh life."

She brought him a pillow and lowered the blinds, making him comfortable as only such loving hands could, and then left him.

It was piteous to see how old and worn his face seemed to grow when he was left alone. He slept, and in his sleep he went back to the dreams of his youth, for he murmured continually the one name that seemed to be engraved upon his heart, "Dolores"; while his daughter went to her room, knowing that she held the issue of their lives in her hands. She had promised to think of Lord Rhysworth's proposal, to see what she could do; but her reasoning powers seemed to have left her all at once, and she could not collect her thoughts.

She remembered a fair, summer day, when she, with her mother, was sitting on the lawn, and the Squire came to them, full of eager interest in some news he had just heard. Wynthcombe Hall had been purchased by a French lady, a widow, Madame de Ferras, who had been exiled from France for political reasons. She had purchased the Wynchcombe property, and had named the Hall "Beaulieu." It was reported that she had one daughter, and was possessed of ample means.

"That will be very nice for Dolores," Mrs. Cliefden had said. "I have often wished that she had a playmate!" and the gentle lady was highly delighted with the prospect.

Dolores could remember how, as her parents discussed the new comers, she wondered in her childish mind what this playmate would be like, never dreaming that on that day a new element would be brought into her life which would mar and blight it.

She recalled one day when they went together—the Squire, her mother, and herself—to visit Madame de Ferras. Dolores remembered the stately and handsome matron with her courtly, polished manner, and the startling, vivid beauty of her daughter Lola. Before her dusky beauty the complexions of English girls looked pale and delicate; for Lola de Ferras was gifted with unusual loveliness. She was three years older than Dolores; and there was every reason to believe that they would be great friends. Madame de Ferras was delighted with her visitors; she made friends at once with fair and gentle Mrs. Cliefden, was most gracious to the Squire, who was full of admiration for her, and charmed with Dolores.

"Why have they given you so sad a name when you have so bright a face?" she asked. "'Dolores' means sorrow. Surely life will not be sorrowful for you?"

When she asked the question she looked at the mother; but the Squire—the only one who could have answered it turned away his head.

"Come and make friends with my daughter Lola," said madame, and Dolores remembered how they went through the open French window to where the dark-haired, slender girl stood. "My dear children, you must love each other and be friends," said madame in her pretty, broken English.

Then the two who were to be mortal enemies, who were to hate each other, touched hands and lips without the least knowledge of the future which was in store for them.

The first thought of the French girl was—

"How faded she must look near me!"

The first thought of the English girl was that Lola de Ferras was beautiful after the fashion of the pictures which hung in the gallery at Deeping Hurst.

Madame left them to entertain each other, little dreaming that she had brought together the two, who of all the world, ought never to have known each other.

Then followed other peaceful years, during which there was a constant exchange of visits between the occupants of Beaulieu and White Cliffe. Child as she was, Dolores, with her delicate, refined instinct, did not quite like Lola. The young French lady was very vain; and there was nothing that she delighted in so much as comparing herself with Dolores.

"You English girls are all so fair," she would say, with a contemptuous shrug of the shoulders. "You yourself, Dolores, are like a snowdrop—so white. I like plenty of color, such as I have myself."

Then she would draw the golden hair through her brown fingers and laugh at the color and fineness.

"They call this golden in England," she would say. "I call it the color of straw."

It was the same with everything; she would surpass Dolores where she could—in music, in dancing, in singing, in riding—and those pursuits in which she could not excel she abandoned at once. Dolores had the correct eye of an artist; she could sketch magnificently, and painted well. Lola laughed at her cleverness in these respects.

"If you could be a painter like Ary Scheffer or Rosa Bonheur now! But these attempts—I would never make them!" she would cry, when Dolores' skill was admired.

In music they were rivals. Dolores had a sweet, clear soprano voice, well-trained, true, and flexible. Lola a melodious, low contralto. There was no comparison, she was always telling Dolores, between the two Dolores had her own opinion, but did not care enough about the matter to express it. Dolores had a dreamy, poetical, artistic nature, ideal and romantic. Lola was practical, worldly, and matter-of-fact.

"I wonder," Lola would say, "when we grow up, which of us will be most beautiful or most admired? Shall we have many lovers, and which of us will be married first? I should think I shall; my style is so much rarer than yours. All the girls in England seem to have fair hair and blue eyes; few are dark like I am."

So it went on through the long stretch of years. The next great break was when Lola de Ferras went to Germany to school, and fair, gentle Mrs. Cliefden died, quietly and sweetly, as she had lived. She was greatly missed and mourned for by her daughter. No one knew what the Squire felt; he must have regretted her, for she had been a good wife to him. Her death made Dolores mistress of White Cliffe. She was still very young, but the Squire said she knew as much as most people, and she could complete her education by reading with him.

A few years later Lola returned from Germany; and then the real rivalry of life began between the two girls. They were both beautiful. Dolores looked like a study of Greuze, Lola like a picture by Velasquez or Titian. Dolores was the type of fair, English loveliness, Lola of dark, luxuriant beauty.

Dolores remembered their first meeting after so many years. As Dolores was fully occupied, Lola went over to White Cliffe to see her. She started with surprise when she saw that three years had changed her from a girl into a most lovely, graceful, and charming woman. She barely waited to exchange greetings before she expressed her opinion.

"Dolores," she cried, "you have grown up into something like a beauty! I never thought you could."

"For which part of your speech shall I thank you?" laughed Dolores.

But Lola was contemplating her with a critical eye.

"You are—well, I must say it—beautiful. Your hair shines like gold, and your face is like a flower. What lovely eyes! Surely, Dolores, you and I together ought to do something!"

"In what way?" asked Dolores.

"We ought to make the county famous, and bring the most eligible men in England hither. We ought to be always seen together; we should be excellent foils for each other."

"You are still your old self, Lola," laughed the English girl. "I have not thought of such things."

"And I have thought of little else. We are not like other young ladies in the same position; there is no hope that we shall pass through the glories of a London season. My mother will not hear of a season in town, and the Squire is of the same way of thinking. I shall imagine, with regard to yourself."

"Quite," laughed Dolores—"the very mention of it makes him angry for a week."

"Then we have not the same chance as others. I have come home, tired of school, utterly weary of country life, resolved to marry soon, and marry well. My dear mother spends all her time in lamenting the woes of la belle France, and gives no thought to the fact that she has a daughter to marry. So I shall take measures for helping myself."

"My dear Lola!" cried Dolores, with a horrified air.

"My dear Dolores!" mimicked Lola, "I have a fashion of saying what I think. I tell you honestly, the life of an old maid has no charm for me; in fact I cannot bear the thought of it. I must marry well. I have found out the number of eligible men in the neighborhood; it is small—most lamentably small. First and foremost, indeed one of the best matches in England, I should say, is Lord Rhysworth of Deeping Hurst. He is rather older than I care for; but one cannot have everything," she added, with a sigh. "He is very rich, however, and Deeping Hurst is a magnificent place."

"You speak as though—as though—" And then Dolores paused, embarrassed.

"As though I could be mistress of Deeping Hurst if I chose? Well, Dolorose, I am a firm believer in what Thackeray says about women and opportunity. Do you know Lord Rhysworth?"

"Yes, very well—better than any one else in the neighborhood. He is papa's greatest and best friend."

Lola's brilliant face was half shadowed, half laughing.

"Is he so old as that?" asked Lola.

"No, he is not so old as papa, of course. He is very agreeable, and I like him."

"Do you?" interrogated Lola, with a peculiar accent.

Miss Cliefden gave her dainty head a toss, and utterly ignored the look and tone.

"I shall do my best to captivate Lord Rhysworth," continued Lola. "I should like to live at Deeping Hurst."

"You seem to leave love out of the question," observed Dolores.

The other answered carelessly—

"I came home to marry well, Dolores; what may follow I cannot help. I must go on with my list. Of course you are acquainted with nearly all that happens; but have you heard the latest news?"

"I have not heard anything very interesting," replied Dolores.

"Nothing about Scarsdale Hall?" asked Lola.

"No not a word," was the answer. "You know Scarsdale—you would not be wicked enough to say that you do not know it?"

"Yes, I know it. It is about five miles from Deeping Hurst; it is nearer to Beaulieu than to Deeping."

"Yes. Well have you really heard no news of Scarsdale or the handsome young baronet, my second hope after Lord Rhysworth? Sir Karl Allanmore has just purchased the whole of the property; and the Hall is being put into thorough repair for him. He is coming to live at Scarsdale. He has neither mother, wife, nor sister—quite unprotected, you see!"

Dolores raised her hand with a gesture of unfeigned disapproval.

The general health of a woman is inseparably related to the local womanly health. When the delicately womanly organism is diseased, the body loses plumpness, the cheeks lose their roses, and a nervous and fretful condition becomes habitual.

Thousands of sick women who have been cured of diseases peculiar to the sex by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have testified to the restoration of the general health when the local disease was cured.

"Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I used four bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Elmer D. Shearer, of Mountshope, Lancaster Co., Pa., "and can say that I am cured of that dreaded disease, uterine trouble. Am in better health than ever before. Everyone who knows me is surprised to see me look so well. In June, when I wrote to you, I was so poor in health that at times I could not walk. You answered my letter and told me what to do. I followed your advice, and to-day am cured. I tell everybody that with God's help Dr. Pierce's medicines cured me. If these few words are of any use to you, you are welcome to use them. They might help some other poor suffering woman."

Messrs. Henry Clews & Company, of New York, in their special letter of Saturday says:—

Wall Street has recovered from the fit of despondency that reached its climax on announcement of the Northern Securities decision. Since then values have experienced a very fair recovery, and opinions seem to be more evenly balanced than for some time past. There are many promising elements in the future, imparting a spirit of hopefulness which might readily give rise to undesirable speculative activity were it not for the very conservative policy adopted by those who control stock market and money market movements. This spirit of conservativeness, disappointing as it may be to overzealous operators, is one of the most satisfactory features in the situation. Under present monetary conditions, and with the known large supply of securities awaiting buyers, and rapid and extended rise might easily invite disastrous consequences; and, until a larger share of the capital temporarily locked up in fixed forms has been released, there will be no room for an excessive bull market. At the same time there is no reason for doubting that a gradual rise in prices accompanied by moderate reactions is possible, and if kept within reasonable bounds will bring the stock market into a stronger and more satisfactory condition.

Crop prospects will be watched with keener interest than for several years, simply because of the lessened ability of the stock market to stand reverses. It is altogether too early to form any crop opinions except as to winter wheat, and here the assurance of a bumper crop is practically certain. This is important and decidedly encouraging. The season for other crops is somewhat backward, but weather conditions have been good and most sections have been favoured with an ample degree of moisture which should afford an excellent start. All reports from the agricultural districts are satisfactory; the farmers have had a series of prosperous years and business dependent thereon is good and promises well for another season. A great deal of land speculation is following this prosperity, which thus far has not reached dangerous proportions but nevertheless requires watching. The industrial situation is somewhat confused by continued labour agitation and increasing costs of production in face of the impossibility of securing better prices for finished products. This is especially true in the cotton goods trade, where profits have been so threatened by increased costs of cotton and labour that manufacturers almost prefer a shut-down to continuance on present lines, for buyers are noticeably stubborn in refusing to pay advances. In the great steel and iron trades there has also been some yielding in prices, although as yet no abatement of demand is in sight; in fact it is known that a large mass of orders are held back awaiting some recessions in values. Merchants generally are sanguine in their expectations and are looking forward to a large distribution of merchandise next fall, though there is a note of conservatism in their reports which was not visible last year, or the year before.

The monetary outlook is somewhat better and, with the return of funds from the interior, bank reserves should rise unless too rapid demands are made upon them on account for speculative or other purposes. The weekly returns may show unexpected fluctuations at any time owing to progress or closing or important deals, but new operations of importance are not likely to be undertaken for some time to come. There is some doubt also as to whether the influx of currency from the interior will be as large as usual. Recent bank returns show that western banks are holding less cash than last year, and this is true of local banks also in spite of the fact of the latter making greater inducements than usual to attract deposits in the form of interest payments. New York banks have to face well-known demands; and, as little outside assistance can be had, close sailing will be necessary; in short, the present outlook is for a close money mark t three months hence when crop demands begin. Fortunately our exports are large and promise to s o continue. Our credit abroad has also been strengthened by recent events, and by moderation we should emerge from the summer and fall season in satisfactory shape. Such conditions favour a good trading market. Between now and the end of July we may see comparatively easy money and a higher level of prices, but no extreme bull market, for such is neither desirable nor necessary to our financial health and success.

BASKETBALL A LA DEMOISELLE

Result, What the Ladies Like—a Tie.

An event which caused more than usual interest was the ladies' basketball match which was played off in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium on Saturday evening last. There was a large number of interested and encouraging spectators, who very kindly offered advice to the players, from their places in the "gods." Girls don't look half bad in basketball costume. Nothing is more fetching, as the number of the audience fully illustrated. But a basketball costume should be one that can be worn with comfort at a basketball match, and not one merely to be kept under a glass case. The first thing that happened was that the ball and floor had to be dusted, and finally after a great deal of sighing the game began. It was a noble sight, but it utterly unnerved the referee, Mr. Sandford Hall. During exciting portions of the game a "Capital" would succeed in pulling out a handful of hair belonging to a "Queen City" and with a sweet little titter would say: "I beg your pardon, I'm sure."

The game ended in a draw, the score being 5 to 5, each team having scored two baskets and a foul.

The teams were composed of the following:—

Queen Citys—Captain, Miss Gwen Hall; defence, Misses A. Lech and L. Scott; forwards, Misses G. King and M. Hall.

Capitals—Captain, Miss E. Aylmer; defence, Misses I. Perks and F. Burritt; forwards, Misses V. Hunter and A. Hamilton.

During the interval at half time the senior gymnasium class composed of Messrs. N. Seaton, Ed. Trollope, W. Maguire, A. Hudson and H. Ayers, gave an excellent exhibition of tumbling. At the conclusion of the game Mr. Lawrence, of the Bank of Commerce, sang "True to Death," and in answer to an encore "Bonnie Jean," songs of directly opposite character. He was ably accompanied by Mr. F. W. Hall. The next item on the programme was a basketball match between the Harriers and a picked team. The teams were composed of of the following:—

Harriers—Defence, Messrs. Richardson, (Captain) Campbell; centre, Laing; forwards, King and Dobbin.

Picked team — Defence, Messrs. Boucher and Seaton; centre, Merrill (Captain); forwards, Hodgson and Maguire.

The score at half time was 9—5 in favour of the Harriers. At this juncture, the senior class assisted by Mr. E. A. Froude, gave an exhibition on the German horse. At the conclusion of the game the score was 15—10, in favour of the Harriers.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Mr. Goodhew gave a splendid rendering of the sacred solo, "Calvary," during the offertory last evening.

It was announced that the Bishop of Toronto, would administer the rite of confirmation at the morning service next Sunday, and also preach at the evening service. The confirmation class will meet at eight o'clock o nboth Tuesday and Thursday of this week.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST.

At the George street Methodist church yesterday morning the choir sang the anthem, "The Bird let Loose in Easter Skies, and during the offertory Mr. Mulligan sang the solo, "I Shall Know Him." Rev. Mr. Jolliffe, pastor of the Charlotte Street church, preached, his text being, "Grow in Grace."

At the evening service the anthem was "Arise! Shine, for Thy Light is Come," while the offertory selection was the anthem, "The Radiant Morn." There were large congregations at both services.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

At St. Paul's Church yesterday morning Rev. Dr. Torrance preached a memorial service for the late Sir Oliver Mowat. The choir sang "Crossing the Bar." In the evening the Oddfellows attended divine service to commemorate their 84th anniversary. Rev. J. A. Wilson, the assistant pastor, preached a congratulatory sermon. The choir sang "King of Kings," Mr. Dawson and Miss N. Hall taking the solo parts. Mr. Lawrence sang "The Holy City." Large congregations attended both services.

Rev. Dr. Torrance preached a very impressive discourse in which he made reference to the loss the country had sustained of late in the death of three prominent gentlemen, Rev. Principal Grant, Rev. Principal McVickar, and Sir Oliver Mowat. He paid fitting tributes to each of these deceased gentlemen, dwelling upon their ability, their integrity, the service they gave to their country and the examples they set for the people who will follow for many years to come.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

The Rector preached last night on "Personal Responsibility," from the text "Every man shall bear his own burden." He said that the meaning of the expression is evidently this: That every man has his own individual character, which involves his own personal responsibility, in which God always regards him. And whether the man wills it or no, it is this which determines his real position here and for ever. No external things whatever can countervail it.

It is a very easy thing for a man to be earnest, even to excitement, about churches, when all the time his own soul is fast asleep. He may reason well about differences of creed and customs, and; yet in his own heart there is no practical faith in anything at all. He deals with religion in its broad externals, but if you follow him into his own room, what marks are there of personal religion?

The contest which is going on is tremendous. It is a conflict between forms and realities, between God's great spiritual work on the one side, and the masterpiece of Satan on the other, between the "One Sacrifice" and the "One Mediator," and the fond invention of human priesthood and human intercession, between an infidelity wearing the garb of liberalism, and "the faith once delivered to the Saints," between an inspired and an uninspired Bible.

A man stands before God, not according of the age in which he lives, or the church to which he belongs, but according to what God sees him in his closet, in his family, in his daily walk, in his own heart. Popery or infidelity may prevail, and yet his hidden life may be as safe and happy as ever, or Popery may, by God's grace be driven out, and infidelity hide its head, and yet all the while his soul not one whit nearer to peace, and holiness and Heaven.

It is "Every man's own burden" whether he is, or is not, a really converted character. And for this spiritual condition every man is held responsible. A church system is a beautiful thing, and it is a proof that it is so beautiful that Satan so greatly abuses it. For, if the system of a church is converted into a framework, by which a believer is to devote his responsibility, and merge his personality—then that which was made to be a help, becomes only a snare to our destruction.

And yet how is it? To send up a priest to offer up sacrifice, for the congregation, to receive at a man's hand the actual body and blood of Christ, which, because that man gives it, and that man makes it, are to be to us the real body and blood of Jesus Christ — to roll my sins by confession at the feet of a man who claims power to take them away, and to assure my conscience of forgiveness and peace — to rest on the intercession of Mary and the Saints, as necessarily effective and prevalent with God, and then to be secured, by a sacrament, for the last passage — these things are very pleasant to the indolence and materialism which make the human heart of man — but are they consistent with the strict individuality in which every man stands before God! No! True religion is a deep work between a man's soul and God. I must go to God, and I, myself, by my own act, must offer up Christ in faith as my sacrifice, and myself His priest, for Jesus' sake. I must take Christ into my soul, through His Spirit by the invisible acting of my own heart; I must carry all my sins straight to Jesus, and receive back from Him, as the incommunicable witness of the Holy Ghost, through the promise of His grace, the sweet assurance of pardon. I must hear my own name pleaded in the one all-sufficient intercession of the Great Mediator. I must know Him myself; I must go to Him myself; I must be in Him, and He must be in me. And when I leave this world I go forth fearing nothing — trusting Him alone. We must all die alone, and we must all meet God alone—priestless, except as Christ is your Priest; churchless, but as you belong to the great company of God's secret ones; and companionless, unless as you are ranged with the wite-robed saints of God, you must stand before God in your own tremulous individuality.

The adjourned vestry meeting will be held to-morrow, Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock. Reports from the different church organizations will be presented and a large attendance is requested. After the meeting a congregational social will be held.

ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH.

At St. Andrew's church yesterday the Rev. Mr. Potter preached at both services, in the morning dealing with the "Ascension" or "Glory of Christ," and in the evening basing an earnest appeal to his hearers on the text, 1Peter, i, 13. Touching reference was made to the death of Mrs. Harda—a bride of three weeks—popularly known as Pearl Hamilton—whose sudden illness and demise comes as a shock to the community.

Mr. Jas. Morgan sang at the morning service, in a most effective manner, "In the Secret of His Presence," and in the evening Miss Ethel Wrighton sang very sweetly an appropriate hymn, "The Better Land."

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

At St. John's church yesterday morning Barnaby's Te Deum was sung. The choir sung the anthem "O Lord my God," by Barrett.

In the evening Shaw's Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were sung. The anthem was Grainer's "Hosannah." Mrs. Seward took the solo.

CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCH.

Rev. Mr. Jolliffe delivered last evening a powerful address on the conversion of St. Paul. The sermon was a cogent and logical refutation of any scepticism regarding the turning of Saul to Christianity. The sermon was based on the words of the 25th verse of the 26th chapter of Acts.

Mr. Jolliffe first accounted for the change of name from Saul to Paul, and then gave a concise and interesting account of the early training and education of this remarkable man. His early attitude towards Christianity, and the critical point in his career on that eventful journey to Damascus, were well described. Continuing Mr. Jolliffe established the authenticity of the narrative, and the improbability of Paul being deceived, either by himself, or by others, or his professing Christianity to gain money, honour or ease.

The miracle in connection with Saul's conversion was in the manner in which God laid hold of Saul, and not in the way in which Saul laid hold of God. He never faltered in his Christian life. When, in reply to the question, "Who art thou, Lord?" he received the answer, "I am Jesus, whom thou percutest," he believed and went out into the world master of the situation, to speak forth what he knew.

This eloquent discourse was brought to a close by an earnest application of the truths gathered from this notable conversion.

At both morning and evening service the choir furnished excellent music. In the morning anthem, "The Lord is my Light,"—Richard Earle, the solo was well rendered by Miss Belleghem, while the offertory solo, "I heard the Voice of Jesus say,"—Harris, was taken by Mrs. Keough in a manner that called forth the highest encomiums from the congregation.

The evening anthem was "O, Lord, Most Holy," by Franks, while the offertory was the simple hymn, "Abide with Me," sung by the mixed quartette, Mrs. Pearce, Mrs. Killin-Keough, and Mr. Keough and Mr. Davis. Music lovers could not fail to be delighted with the harmonizing and blending of these four voices. Miss Campbell, Gilmour street, presided with her usual skill at the organ in the absence of Miss Stephens.

WHAT IS GAMEY'S GAME SHOWN BY BANK CLERKS

His Suspicious Manipulation of Bank Deposit Slips.

SUBSTITUTED BOGUS FOR THE GENUINE.

Gamey's Banking "Business" Before He Left for Buffalo—An Important Ruling by Commission—Evidence to Discredit Frank Sullivan's Father-in-law Barred—Evidence for Defence Begins.

Toronto, April 28th.—The evidence for the prosecution in the Gamey case was finished yesterday, and the defence began to unravel this remarkable story at the end, namely, Mr. Gamey's transactions at the Ontario Bank on Saturday last, the day proceding his departure for Buffalo. The testimony as far as it went showed that on that day he had called in the morning and asked for a slip showing the deposit of $900 in nine $100 bills, made by Mr. Crossin for the Crossin piano factory on Sept. 11, the day following that on which Mr. Gamey claimed to have divided with Frank Sullivan the $3,000 in $100 Ontario Bank bills received from Mr. Stratton. The denomination was marked thus:—

9 x 100..... 900

900

Mr. Gamey turned to a desk and in a few minutes came back and put in another slip, which was not added up, and on which the denominations were different, thus:—

10 x 5... 50
20 x 10... 200
30 x 20... 600
1 x 50... 50

The teller called to him that the slip was wrong, but he passed out, and when questioned later claimed to have lost the original. In the afternoon Mr. Gamey returned and left a third slip, with the denomination the same as the original, thus:

9 x 100..... 900

900

On the substituted slips the ledger folio number marked on the original was missing, but on each were certain marks which looked like the initials of the teller, which were on the original. This latter point was disputed. What took place on this last occasion, and what were his motives in changing the deposit slips have not yet appeared. Both of these substituted slips were filed as exhibits, and further inquiry about this transaction will be made to-day.

The court adjourned from 11.30 to 2.30 out of respect to the late Mr. Justice Lount. The cases of alleged contempt of court were not considered because the writs had not been served until the morning.

Mr. Johnston—The notice directed to be served on the newspapers, my Lords, could not be served until this morning.

Frank Sullivan's Father-in-Law.

G. B. Wilson, father-in-law of Frank Sullivan, was recalled. Examined by Mr. Ritchie he said he was in Rochester this month. He was there on Friday, the 10th of April. He recollected meeting a man whose name he did not know, and who went with him to the hotel. He never spoke to him after that. He had never mentioned to this man that they were having a great time in Ontario.

Q.—I am just trying to refresh your memory. That he asked you what it was about, and you said that a man in the Government had bought a member by the name of Gamey, and Gamey charged Stratton with the crime? A.—I never did.

He did not know that the man who directed him to the hotel was Mr. Davis, and did not see him there at all.

Q.—Perhaps this may refresh your memory. Did you tell him that you knew all about the business, as your son-in-law, Frank Sullivan, had told you about it? A.—I never had such a conversation.

Q.—Did you tell him that Frank Sullivan had come up to your place at Newmarket and told you that Stratton had bought up Gamey, and that the buying had been done through him? A.—I never had any such conversation.

Q.—Now, did you ever see an agreement signed by Gamey by which he agreed to support the present Government? A.—I never did, nor never knew Gamey's name until ——

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Davis that Frank Sullivan had showed you the agreement which Gamey had signed, in which he agreed to support Ross and the Reformers, in April? A.—I never told anything of the kind.

Q.—Neither on the 10th April nor any other day? A.—Nor any other day.

Q.—I am calling your attention to this, because I am instructed that Davis will say that? A.—If he says it he says what I never told him.

There Was No Conspiracy.

Q.—Perhaps this will refresh your memory; did you tell him that Frank Sullivan had to resign his job in the Parliament Buildings and that he came out to your house so as to avoid being subpoenaed? A.—Never, on oath; I never held any such conversation.

Q.—And never said that Frank was to get five thousand dollars for swearing this matter through? A.—Never.

Q.—And did you not tell him that you were to get five hundred dollars to get out of the way to avoid giving evidence? A.—Never; for I would not attempt——

I did not tell him that I hadn't the agreement, nor that my wife, before she left Buffalo on the return trip, had got a memorandum in regard to paying five hundred dollars in case I kept away. I might have been at the National Hotel on the 16th or the 18th, I would not swear which.

Q.—Do you recollect seeing Mr. Leavitt of the City of Toronto, there, and Mr. Davis also? A.—I never saw them.

Q.—On this occasion on the 18th of April, or whatever day it was, at the National Hotel in Rochester, when Davis and Leavitt were there, did you say to them that if you did not get that five hundred dollars you were going back to give up the whole conspiracy and smash the Government? A.—I never told them; for I never held such a conversation with any gentleman.

Q.—Did you on this occasion, in the presence of Leavitt, while he and Davis were together, make any of these statements similar to those I have examined you about as having been made to Davis? A.—I never did.

Q.—Nor anything to that effect? A.—Nor anything to that effect.

Q.—Neither directly nor indirectly? A.—Never.

A Fabrication.

Q.—If they state that it is so, that is a fabrication? A.—It is a fabrication.

Q.—Do you know a man by the name of Palmer, of Rochester? A.—I never met the name.

Q.—Perhaps I can refresh your memory, I am instructed that Mr. Palmer, the one I refer to, is the agent or manager of the express company in Rochester? A.—I never knew him.

Q.—You recollect your son-in-law, Frank Sullivan, being over there? A.—I do.

Q.—Staying two or three hours and then going away? A.—I do.

Q.—Soon after your son-in-law departed you went to Pennfield? A.—I intended going there anyway.

Q.—He says that Sullivan remained long enough there to give you some money; is that correct? A.—That is correct.

Q.—And then Frank Sullivan took the sleeping car at one o'clock on Sunday morning for Toronto? A.—That is correct. Will you allow me to explain the money part of it?

Q.—If you wish it? A.—I wished my wife to send me some money, and she sent it by Mr. Sullivan in preference to sending it by mail, and he brought it.

Q.—It was five dollars, was it? A.—I think so.

The Chancellor—We had that before.

Mr. Ritchie—It was necessary to have a special messenger for the five dollars, and Frank was the special messenger.

Q.—You recollect the night that Frank left for Rochester? A.—I do.

Never Went to Palmer's Room.

Q.—Do you recollect going to Mr. Palmer's room that night in the National Hotel, or that morning, about two o'clock in the morning, and telling him about the interview that you had with your son-in-law, A.—I never went into his room.

Q.—Did you speak to him? A.—I say I did not speak to him. I might have spoke to him in the house at the table.

Q.—Were you up until one o'clock in the morning? A.—I was up until Mr. Sullivan left for Toronto, and then I went to my room and went to bed.

Q.—How long were you up after Sullivan left? A.—Probably twenty minutes.

Q.—Did you have any conversation from the time Sullivan left until you retired that morning? A.—I did not.

Q.—Not with anybody? A.—Not anybody.

Q.—You did not tell Mr. Palmer on that night that Frank had come there to move you away, and you were going off, and that Frank said the Reformers were going to win? A.—I never, on oath, used such language in the city of Rochester.

Q.—Did you tell Palmer also that Frank had got an agreement from Gamey by which he was to support the Government, and he afterwards destroyed the agreement? A.—I never.

Q.—And you did not tell him that you were to move away because you were to get five hundred dollars to keep out of the road? A.—I never did; I did not move.

Q.—But you did go to Pennfield? A.—Yes, but I did not——

Q.—Did you also tell him that if the true facts of the conspiracy did not come out that your son-in-law Frank Sullivan, was to get five thousand dollars? A.—I never did; so help me God.

Q.—Nothing of that kind? A.—I never conversed on the subject.

Confronted by Mr. Davis.

Q.—Stand up Mr. Davis. (Archibald C. Davis stands up.) Did you meet that man? A.—I met that gentleman in the City of Rochester, but never had any conversation with him on this subject.

Mr. Johnston—Where does he live?

Mr. Ritchie—He lives in Rochester.

At the request of Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Leavitt, who is in the court room, stood up.

Q.—Now, Mr. Wilson, did you meet Mr. Leavitt? A.—I never met that face before, to the best of my knowledge, so help me God.

Q.—Perhaps your memory is a very poor one? A.—Not poor, nothing poor about it.

Q.—You never met him? A.—Not to the best of my recollection.

Q.—I want you to swear positively? A.—That is a rather hard oath.

Q.—Did you ever speak to him? A.—No, I never did.

Q.—Did you ever speak to him about this subject or any other subject? A.—I never did.

To Mr. Johnston he said he was not in the habit of proclaiming to strangers and to the world generally matters connected with himself and other people.

Mr. Davis of Rochester.

Arcar C. Davis sworn.

By Mr. Ritchie—Where do you reside? A.—In Rochester, New York.

Q.—What is your business? A.—Insurance agent.

Q.—Do you know the last witness, George B. Wilson? A.—I met him.

Q.—Where? A.—In Rochester.

Q.—How often? A.—Why, I met him—I would not be just prepared to say how many times—it may have been over half a dozen, half a dozen at the least.

Q.—Where did you first meet him? A.—I was going up West Main street——

The Chancellor—Is this evidence concerning the last witness?

Mr. Ritchie—Yes, my Lord.

The Chancellor—You are going into a matter that I do not think we can touch. This is something that Frank Sullivan told G. B. Wilson and G. B. Wilson told somebody else.

An Important Decision.

After a lengthy discussion between Mr. Ritchie and the Chancellor as to the propriety of admitting evidence in contradiction of Mr. G. B. Wilson's evidence, the Chancellor rules, after referring to two leading English cases on the point, that this evidence is inadmissible.

Mr. Ritchie—That is the only purpose I have for calling Mr. Davis, so he may as well step out of the box. Mr. Leavitt was also here for the same purpose, and I presume I should not call him under your Lordship's approval.

The Chancellor—There was some other evidence you wanted to call.

Mrs. Wilson's Evidence.

Mrs. George B. Wilson said that she left with her husband and her daughter, Mrs. Sullivan, for Buffalo on April 9, the day before Good Friday. Her daughter went out to Newmarket, their home, the day before and made arrangements for a conveyance to drive them to the Metropolitan Railway on Yonge street. The following morning her daughter said they would take a trip to Buffalo. Her daughter had been speaking on a previous visit about a trip on Good Friday. Each paid their own expenses to Toronto, but her daughter bought the tickets for the three of them from Toronto to Buffalo, though she paid for her own and her husband's. She did not remember how much the fare was. She only intended to stay just for the day. She had had no conversation with Mr. Lloyd, Division Court Clerk, although she saw her husband talking with him on the Wednesday before at a funeral. She did not see either him or Mr. Lloyd, the barrister in Buffalo.

Witness said they arrived in Buffalo about noon on Friday, and that with her husband she stayed at her daughter's the night before in Toronto. They registered at the hotel right across from the station, and she stayed until the evening train and came home alone, her daughter seeing her off in Buffalo. She did not know when her daughter came back. She didn't ask either her husband or daughter when she might expect them back—they had no discussion about it. She had not heard from her daughter since.

Burned the Letter.

Q.—When did you next hear from your husband after this? A.—Well, I received a letter, but I cannot tell you the date.

Q.—Have you got that letter? A.—No.

Q.—What became of it? A.—I suppose it was burnt.

Q.—I see. Sensible woman, always burn the letters. How long after you had left him in Buffalo was it that you received this letter from him? A.—Oh, it would be about a week, maybe more.

Frank Sullivan met her in Buffalo at the hotel, but the visit was quite unexpected. She did not know how Sullivan was aware they were at this hotel. Asked if Sullivan's visit was a surprise, she replied she never thought about it at all. She and her daughter were sitting in the window of the hotel after dinner, when her daughter saw Frank Sullivan getting on a car in front of the hotel, raised the window and called to Frank, who then came into the hotel. So far as she knew the meeting was not pre-arranged. He was in Buffalo when she left. She did not think she saw Frank since the visit to Buffalo. She had visited around some since she came back, and went home on hearing they wanted to serve her with a subpoena.

No Promised Pay.

Q.—Did you get any memorandum before you left there showing what was to be paid to Mr. Wilson if he remained away? A.—No.

Q.—Did you get any paper of any kind? A.—No, saw no paper nor heard of any.

Q.—Never heard any discussion as to what was to be got? A.—No.

Q.—You swear to that? A.—I swear to that.

Q.—Ever any discussion as to whether your husband was to get $500? A.—No.

Q.—Who was to supply your husband with money while he was away? A.—Myself.

Q.—How much did you send him? A.—I gave it to my son-in-law to send to him when he needed it.

Q.—How much? A.—$25.

Q.—You heard your husband say he only got $5? A.—I suppose that is all he did get at the time.

Q.—You heard that Frank Sullivan made a special trip to Rochester to give it to him?

Mr. Riddell—That is not so.

Mr. Ritchie.—Q.—Did you hear that? A.—He had occasion to go there.

Q.—Do you know whether he had occasion to go there or whether it was a special trip? A.—I do not know.

Q.—For anything you know it may have been a special trip? A.—Yes.

WHAT IS GAMEY'S GAME SHOWN BY BANK CLERKS

His Suspicious Manipulation of Bank Deposit Slips.

SUBSTITUTED BOGUS FOR THE GENUINE.

Gamey's Banking "Business" Before He Left for Buffalo—An Important Ruling by Commission—Evidence to Discredit Frank Sullivan's Father-in-law Barred—Evidence for Defence Begins.

Toronto, April 28th.—The evidence for the prosecution in the Gamey case was finished yesterday, and the defence began to unravel this remarkable story at the end, namely, Mr. Gamey's transactions at the Ontario Bank on Saturday last, the day preceding his departure for Buffalo. The testimony as far as it went showed that on that day he had called in the morning and asked for a slip showing the deposit of $900 in nine $100 bills, made by Mr. Crossin for the Crossin piano factory on Sept. 11, the day following that on which Mr. Gamey claimed to have divided with Frank Sullivan the $3,000 in $100 Ontario Bank bills received from Mr. Stratton. The denomination was marked thus:—

900

Mr. Gamey turned to a desk and in a few minutes came back and put in another slip, which was not added up, and on which the denominations were different, thus:—

10 x 5... 50
20 x 10... 200
30 x 20... 600
1 x 50... 50
900

The teller called to him that the slip was wrong, but he passed out, and when questioned later claimed to have lost the original. In the afternoon Mr. Gamey returned and left a third slip, with the denomination the same as the original, thus:

9 x 100..... 900
900

On the substituted slips the ledger folio number marked on the original was missing, but on each were certain marks which looked like the initials of the teller, which were on the original. This latter point was disputed. What took place on this last occasion, and what were his motives in changing the deposit slips have not yet appeared. Both of these substituted slips were filed as exhibits, and further inquiry about this transaction will be made to-day.

The court adjourned from 11.30 to 2.30 out of respect to the late Mr. Justice Lount. The cases of alleged contempt of court were not considered because the writs had not been served until the morning.

Mr. Johnston—The notice directed to be served on the newspapers, my Lords, could not be served until this morning.

Frank Sullivan's Father-in-Law.

G. B. Wilson, father-in-law of Frank Sullivan, was recalled. Examined by Mr. Ritchie he said he was in Rochester this month. He was there on Friday, the 10th of April. He recollected meeting a man whose name he did not know, and who went with him to the hotel. He never spoke to him after that. He had never mentioned to this man that they were having a great time in Ontario.

Q.—I am just trying to refresh your memory. That he asked you what it was about, and you said that a man in the Government had bought a member by the name of Gamey, and Gamey charged Stratton with the crime? A.—I never did.

He did not know that the man who directed him to the hotel was Mr. Davis, and did not see him there at all.

Q.—Perhaps this may refresh your memory. Did you tell him that you knew all about the business, as your son-in-law, Frank Sullivan, had told you about it? A.—I never had such a conversation.

Q.—Did you tell him that Frank Sullivan had come up to your place at Newmarket and told you that Stratton had bought up Gamey, and that the buying had been done through him? A.—I never had any such conversation.

Q.—Now, did you ever see an agreement signed by Gamey by which he agreed to support the present Government? A.—I never did, nor never knew Gamey's name until ——

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Davis that Frank Sullivan had showed you the agreement which Gamey had signed, in which he agreed to support Ross and the Reformers, in April? A.—I never told anything of the kind.

Q.—Neither on the 10th April nor any other day? A.—Nor any other day.

Q.—I am calling your attention to this, because I am instructed that Davis will say that? A.—If he says it he says what I never told him.

There Was No Conspiracy.

Q.—Perhaps this will refresh your memory; did you tell him that Frank Sullivan had to resign his job in the Parliament Buildings and that he came out to your house so as to avoid being subpoenaed? A.—Never; on oath; I never held any such conversation.

Q.—And never said that Frank was to get five thousand dollars for swearing this matter through? A.—Never.

Q.—And did you not tell him that you were to get five hundred dollars to get out of the way to avoid giving evidence? A.—Never; for I would not attempt——

I did not tell him that I hadn't the agreement, nor that my wife, before she left Buffalo on the return trip, had got a memorandum in regard to paying five hundred dollars in case I kept away. I might have been at the National Hotel on the 16th or the 18th, I would not swear which.

Q.—Do you recollect seeing Mr. Leavitt of the City of Toronto, there, and Mr. Davis also? A.—I never saw them.

Q.—On this occasion on the 18th of April, or whatever day it was, at the National Hotel in Rochester, when Davis and Leavitt were there, did you say to them that if you did not get that five hundred dollars you were going back to give up the whole conspiracy and smash the Government? A.—I never told them; for I never held such a conversation with any gentleman.

Q.—Did you on this occasion, in the presence of Leavitt, while he and Davis were together, make any of these statements similar to those I have examined you about as having been made to Davis? A.—I never did.

Q.—Nor anything to that effect? A.—Nor anything to that effect.

Q.—Neither directly nor indirectly? A.—Nover.

A Fabrication.

Q.—If they state that it is so, that is a fabrication? A.—It is a fabrication.

Q.—Do you know a man by the name of Palmer, of Rochester? A.—I never met the name.

Q.—Perhaps I can refresh your memory, I am instructed that Mr. Palmer, the one I refer to, is the agent or manager of the express company in Rochester? A.—I never knew him.

Q.—You recollect your son-in-law, Frank Sullivan, being over there? A.—I do.

Q.—Staying two or three hours and then going away? A.—I do.

Q.—Soon after your son-in-law departed you went to Pennfield? A.—I intended going there anyway.

Q.—He says that Sullivan remained long enough there to give you some money; is that correct? A.—That is correct.

Q.—And then Frank Sullivan took the sleeping car at one o'clock on Sunday morning for Toronto? A.—That is correct. Will you allow me to explain the money part of it?

Q.—If you wish it? A.—I wished my wife to send me some money, and she sent it by Mr. Sullivan in preference to sending it by mail, and he brought it.

Q.—It was five dollars, was it? A.—I think so.

The Chancellor—We had that before.

Mr. Ritchie—It was necessary to have a special messenger for the five dollars, and Frank was the special messenger.

Q.—You recollect the night that Frank left for Rochester? A.—I do.

Never Went to Palmer's Room.

Q.—Do you recollect going to Mr. Palmer's room that night in the National Hotel, or that morning, about two o'clock in the morning, and telling him about the interview that you had with your son-in-law, A.—I never went into his room.

Q.—Did you speak to him? A.—I say I did not speak to him. I might have spoke to him in the house at the table.

Q.—Were you up until one o'clock in the morning? A.—I was up until Mr. Sullivan left for Toronto, and then I went to my room and went to bed.

Q.—How long were you up after Sullivan left? A.—Probably twenty minutes.

Q.—Did you have any conversation from the time Sullivan left until you retired that morning? A.—I did not.

Q.—Not with anybody? A.—Not anybody.

Q.—You did not tell Mr. Palmer on that night that Frank had come there to move you away, and you were going off, and that Frank said the Reformers were going to win? A.—I never, on oath, used such language in the city of Rochester.

Q.—Did you tell Palmer also that Frank had got an agreement from Gamey by which he was to support the Government, and he afterwards destroyed the agreement? A.—I never.

Q.—And you did not tell him that you were to move away because you were to get five hundred dollars to keep out of the road? A.—I never did; I did not move.

Q.—But you did go to Pennfield? A.—Yes, but I did not——

Q.—Did you also tell him that if the true facts of the conspiracy did not come out that your son-in-law Frank Sullivan, was to get five thousand dollars? A.—I never did; so help me God.

Q.—Nothing of that kind? A.—I never conversed on the subject.

Confronted by Mr. Davis.

Q.—Stand up Mr. Davis. (Archibald C. Davis stands up.) Did you meet that man? A.—I met that gentleman in the City of Rochester, but never had any conversation with him on this subject.

Mr. Johnston—Where does he live?

Mr. Ritchie—He lives in Rochester.

At the request of Mr. Ritchie, Mr. Leavitt, who is in the court room, stood up.

Q.—Now, Mr. Wilson, did you meet Mr. Leavitt? A.—I never met that face before, to the best of my knowledge, so help me God.

Q.—Perhaps your memory is a very poor one? A.—Not poor, nothing poor about it.

Q.—You never met him? A.—Not to the best of my recollection.

Q.—I want you to swear positively? A.—That is a rather hard oath.

Q.—Did you ever speak to him? A.—No, I never did.

Q.—Did you ever speak to him about this subject or any other subject? A.—I never did.

To Mr. Johnston he said he was not in the habit of proclaiming to strangers and to the world generally matters connected with himself and other people.

Mr. Davis of Rochester.

Arcar C. Davis sworn.

By Mr. Ritchie—Where do you reside? A.—In Rochester, New York.

Q.—What is your business? A.—Insurance agent.

Q.—Do you know the last witness, George B. Wilson? A.—I met him.

Q.—Where? A.—In Rochester.

Q.—How often? A.—Why, I met him—I would not be just prepared to say how many times—it may have been over half a dozen, half a dozen at the least.

Q.—Where did you first meet him? A.—I was going up West Main street——

The Chancellor—Is this evidence concerning the last witness?

Mr. Ritchie—Yes, my Lord.

The Chancellor—You are going into a matter that I do not think we can touch. This is something that Frank Sullivan told G. B. Wilson and G. B. Wilson told somebody else.

An Important Decision.

After a lengthy discussion between Mr. Ritchie and the Chancellor as to the propriety of admitting evidence in contradiction of Mr. G. B. Wilson's evidence, the Chancellor rules, after referring to two leading English cases on the point, that this evidence is inadmissible.

Mr. Ritchie—That is the only purpose I have for calling Mr. Davis, so he may as well step out of the box. Mr. Leavitt was also here for the same purpose, and I presume I should not call him under your Lordship's approval.

The Chancellor—There was some other evidence you wanted to call.

Mrs. Wilson's Evidence.

Mrs. George B. Wilson said that she left with her husband and her daughter, Mrs. Sullivan, for Buffalo on April 9, the day before Good Friday. Her daughter went out to Newmarket, their home, the day before and made arrangements for a conveyance to drive them to the Metropolitan Railway on Yonge street. The following morning her daughter said they would take a trip to Buffalo. Her daughter had been speaking on a previous visit about a trip on Good Friday. Each paid their own expenses to Toronto, but her daughter bought the tickets for the three of them from Toronto to Buffalo, though she paid for her own and her husband's. She did not remember how much the fare was. She only intended to stay just for the day. She had had no conversation with Mr. Lloyd, Division Court Clerk, although she saw her husband talking with him on the Wednesday before at a funeral. She did not see either him or Mr. Lloyd, the barrister in Buffalo.

Witness said they arrived in Buffalo about noon on Friday, and that with her husband she stayed at her daughter's the night before in Toronto. They registered at the hotel right across from the station, and she stayed until the evening train and came home alone, her daughter seeing her off in Buffalo. She did not know when her daughter came back. She didn't ask either her husband or daughter when she might expect them back—they had no discussion about it. She had not heard from her daughter since.

Burned the Letter.

Q.—When did you next hear from your husband after this? A.—Well, I received a letter, but I cannot tell you the date.

Q.—Have you got that letter? A.—No.

Q.—What became of it? A.—I suppose it was burnt.

Q.—I see. Sensible woman, always burn the letters. How long after you had left him in Buffalo was it that you received this letter from him? A.—Oh, it would be about a week, maybe more.

Frank Sullivan met her in Buffalo at the hotel, but the visit was quite unexpected. She did not know how Sullivan was aware they were at this hotel. Asked if Sullivan's visit was a surprise, she replied she never thought about it at all. She and her daughter were sitting in the window of the hotel after dinner, when her daughter saw Frank Sullivan getting on a car in front of the hotel, raised the window and called to Frank, who then came into the hotel. So far as she knew the meeting was not pre-arranged. He was in Buffalo when she left. She did not think she saw Frank since the visit to Buffalo. She had visited around some since she came back, and went home on hearing they wanted to serve her with a subpoena.

No Promise to Pay.

Q.—Did you get any memorandum before you left there showing what was to be paid to Mr. Wilson if he remained away? A.—No.

Q.—Did you get any paper of any kind? A.—No, saw no paper nor heard of any.

Q.—Never heard any discussion as to what was to be got? A.—No.

Q.—You swear to that? A.—I swear to that.

Q.—Ever any discussion as to whether your husband was to get $500? A.—No.

Q.—Who was to supply your husband with money while he was away? A.—Myself.

Q.—How much did you send him? A.—I gave it to my son-in-law to send to him when he needed it.

Q.—How much? A.—$25.

Q.—You heard your husband say he only got $5? A.—I suppose that is all he did get at the time.

Q.—You heard that Frank Sullivan made a special trip to Rochester to give it to him?

Mr. Riddell—That is not so.

Mr. Ritchie.—Q.—Did you hear that? A.—He had occasion to go there.

Q.—Do you know whether he had occasion to go there or whether it was a special trip? A.—I do not know.

Q.—For anything you know it may have been a special trip? A.—Yes.

FENELON OWNS ITS OWN WATERPOWER.

They Own a Roller Mill and an Electric Light Plant.

The corporation of Fenelon Falls is now owner of a water power, a roller flour mill and electric light plant, the citizens on Monday last having carried a bylaw to raise $75,000 for the purchase of Brandon & McDougall's interests in the mill and power. The firm controlled 500 horse power, and will receive $35,000 for their possessions. Under the agreement they will pay the village $1200 per annum rent for the flour mill while they occupy it, the council being at liberty to secure a better paying tenant if possible. It is proposed to erect a power station at an estimated cost of $25,000, and offer electrical power at a cheap rate in order to induce outside industries to locate there. The vote shows that the citizens were eager supporters of the ambitious propositions, the tally being 121 yeas to 30 nays.

Mr. Parks was Advised by a Clergyman to Use Paine's Celery Compound The Life Saving Spring Medicine.

Paine's Celery Compound is more talked of in the springtime in each province, city and town of our Dominion than any other medicine now before the public. It has a place in the homes of the wealthy, influential and intelligent; it is the disease banisher that has the entire confidence of our men and women who toil daily in workshops, stores, offices and homes. When the first warning symptoms of physical weakness and disease are experienced, wise and prudent men and women invariably seek vitality, health and strength in nature's health builder. If the reader of this article finds its difficult to obtain restful sleep, if nervousness and weakness cause alarm, if the blood is impure and sluggish, if rheumatism, neuralgia, kidney and liver troubles are commencing to annoy, follow the example of thousands who have made themselves well by the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mr. G. W. Parks, of Inglisville, N.S., writes thus:

"I was taken sick, which compelled me to abandon my work and seek home and rest. I consulted the doctors who said that I was suffering from typhoid or slow fever. I suffered severely from night sweats, and cold chills during the day. I was nervous, weak and reduced in flesh until I was a mere skeleton. My wife and friends began to despair of my recovery as the medicines I took produced no good, and I was gradually growing worse. Through the influence of Rev. Mr. Tyler I was induced to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial and it truly worked wonders. Five bottles completely cured me. I gained 32 pounds in three weeks, and am now strong and healthy."

BOBCAYGEON TO HAVE A RAILROAD.

The Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool Line.

How the Promoters of the Road Laboured for its Completion—Some Interesting Facts.

(Lindsay Post.)

The announcement made in yesterday's Evening Post that the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Pontypool Railway will be constructed at once comes as a pleasing assurance to the public. Lindsay and Ops will accept it as another step forward in the progress of this town and county. To the people of Bobcaygeon and East Verulam the building of this railway comes as a deliverance. For well nigh forty years these people have been looking for railway connection with the outer world, and at last it is coming, and will be a great boom to the locality. To Manvers and Cartwright also the building of this road means much.

Messrs. T. Stewart, W. T. C. Boyd and H. J. Wickham are to be congratulated on their success, and are deserving of the gratitude of the people. They have had many difficulties to contend with and have had a long hard struggle to make the construction of the road an assured fact, and their ultimate success will be all the more gratifying to themselves. Our townsman, Mr. Stewart, with his usual determination, has stuck to the project since he first became identified with it some four years ago, and has done much toward the present happy condition of affairs.

Mr. Boyd, by his name and influence, and his devotion to the undertaking, has been a great factor in the success of the enterprise. He has well earned the gratitude of the people of his native village. Mr. Boyd is one of those enterprising men whose industry tends to his own deserved success and the progress of the country in which he resides. He has done a great deal to develop the Kawartha Lakes and to bring this district prominently before the people of Canada and the United States. For two or three seasons past he has had a regular line of passenger steamboats plying between Lindsay, Cobeconk, Bobcaygeon and Burleigh. He has also lately purchased the Empress, plying between Burleigh and Lakefield, so that now he has complete steamboat connection between all points on the Kawartha Lakes. The Trent Valley Navigation Company, of which Mr. Boyd is the President, has a bright future before it, and the people will wish it all the success that may come to it.

Mr. Wickham, since he first took hold of this railway, has been untiring in his efforts to see the road constructed. Through good and evil report he has never become discouraged. The success of the road has always been the uppermost thought in his mind. It has been with him the all-absorbing business of his life for a number of years. When a boy in the township of Verulam, he had heard discussed the question of a railway to Bobcaygeon, and he now says that to him the greatest source of comfort is that he has been enabled to do this service to his old friends in Bobcaygeon and Verulam. The Post extends to him its hearty congratulations. The construction of the road will soon be under way, and ere another year is ushered in it is hoped that the road will be ready for traffic from Burketon through Lindsay to Bobcaygeon.

THE OTONABEE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Minutes of the Last Regular Meeting—Road Allowance.

The committee appointed to investigate the Hayes and Duffus road allowance case, reported that it would be better to let the road remain as it is, as Mr. Duffus requires an outlet from his west farm and the road allowance would not be of much benefit to Mr. Hayes, as there would be a great many stones to remove. Mr. Hayes was present, requesting the council to have it surveyed. The council adopted the committee's recommendation, by taking no action.

The committee appointed to examine and report as to digging a ditch on the road to enable Thos. Fitzgerald to drain his land, reported and recommended that the council do not excavate a ditch as it would be of no benefit to the road, but to allow Mr. Fitzgerald at his own expense to excavate a ditch close to his fence so as not to endanger the travelling public; the report was received and adopted.

A petition was received from Road Division No. 26, Roger Devlin's division, asking to have their statute labour commuted. Petition granted, and clerk was appointed to prepare a bylaw.

The Court of Revision was fixed for the 28th May, and ordered to be advertised in Review and Examiner.

On motion Mrs. McDermott was allowed for charity $5 per month. As Campbelltown woods are sold she will now require to buy her own wood.

$2,000 was appropriated for the improvements of roads. Clerk was instructed to order two large drag scrapers, blade for grader and spring for driver's seat.

WHAT IS GAMEY'S GAME SHOWN BY BANK CLERKS

Q.—Why didn't you send it to him yourself? A.—My husband was kind of nervous and all that.

Q.—He didn't look like it in the witness box? A.—I only wanted him to have a little at a time.

Q.—Why, afraid if he got too much he might come back to Canada? A.—He would come if he wanted to; he wanted to visit his old friends.

Mr. Johnston objected.

The Chancellor allowed the examination to go on.

Mr. Ritchie—Q.—Did you ever offer him any money yourself? A.—No, I gave it to him to send.

Q.—Where was it that you gave Frank Sullivan this money? A.—In Buffalo.

Q.—Where? A.—At the hotel.

Q.—What kind of bills did you give him? A.—There were Canadian bills, Ontario bills.

Q.—Ontario Bank bills? A.—I think so.

Many Ontario Bills.

Q.—They seem to be going around quite promiscuously—were they $5 bills? A.——Not all of them.

Q.—Had you at that time any idea how long your husband would stay away? A.—We told him to stay a month if he could.

Q.—You thought the investigation would take a month? A.—I did not think of the investigation.

Q.—You told him to stay a month? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was that agreed to between you? A.—Not particularly.

Q.—Was there any discussion about that? A.—No, I told him to stay a month if he could.

Continuing, she said she gave her husband $15 at the station, and she told him to stay away a month if it agreed with him. She could not remember what was in the letter she received from her husband.

Q.—Did he write complaining that he didn't get the money? A.—I cannot remember. He said he was thinking of coming home.

Q.—Did he tell you he wanted money? A.—I do not think he did.

Q.—Didn't he also say that unless you sent money he would come back to Canada and expose the whole conspiracy? A.—No, I never heard that before.

Q.—That he was not going to stay away—he might just as well have had $5,000? A.—No.

Q.—Is that the only letter you got? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you reply to it? A.—No.

Q.—After getting the letter what did you do with it? A.—After my daughter read it we put it in the fire.

Q.—That letter might have been a letter asking for money? A.—I don't think he did complain. I don't remember that he said a word about money in the letter.

Q.—You didn't go at all events and ask Frank Sullivan to send money? A.—No.

Money Was Rent Money.

Continuing, she said the money she sent her husband was part of $200 she received in the spring as rent for a farm she owned. The tenant who paid her farm rent was Mr. Terry of Kettleby.

Q.—Will you undertake to pledge your oath that before leaving Buffalo you were not told that if you would go quietly away and your husband remain out of Canada you would be looked after and would get something? A.—Nothing of that kind was ever mentioned.

Q.—No suggestion at all? A.—No suggestion whatever.

Q.—Was any money given you just as you were leaving Buffalo) A.—No.

Q.—Nor while you were in Buffalo? A.—No.

Q.—By your daughter? A.—No.

Q.—Or by Frank Sullivan? A.—No.

Continuing, she said she had not seen Mrs. Sullivan since returning from Buffalo, and that it was a younger daughter that read the letter before it was burned. She always burned their letters.

To Mr. Johnston she said the bills were twos and fives and a ten. She had been away about her ordinary business, and knew nothing about the case or that she was wanted at this investigation.

Expert to Examine Books.

Regarding the bank books, Mr. Ritchie suggested that an expert should examine them for the first part of September, and if he discovered anything which he thought relevant or required explanation it should be pointed out to counsel. He did not want that the expert should go into the box, but that he should simply go over the books in the way suggested in order to save the time of court and counsel.

The Chancellor—Go through the books and say if prima facie there is anything that appears to be relevant to his enquiry.

Mr. Johnston—Mr. Barwick may or may not consent.

The Chancellor—Counsel can arrange with the bank.

Mrs. Frank Sullivan.

Mrs. Frank Sullivan said she accompanied her father and mother to Buffalo on Good Friday. She had visited them within a week before that, and had spoken to her mother about a trip to Buffalo. She had said her father was going to Rochester and they would accompany him as far as Buffalo.

When told that her mother had not told that, she said her mother was a little forgetful, and she thought her memory was better. She had invited her mother to go to Buffalo. The court adjourned until 2.30 in the afternoon.

In the afternoon Mrs. Sullivan said that she had been out to see her mother on Sunday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the week of Good Friday. She said that she had talked with her husband during the luncheon recess, but not about this affair, in reply to Mr. Ritchie's remark that her memory had been freshened. When told by Mr. Ritchie that her mother said she had not seen her for a week or ten days, Mrs. Sullivan said her mother had a poor memory. It was not out of the ordinary for her to see her mother three times within one week. She had no other object than just to see her mother. Her husband, who had spent Sunday with her at her mother's, left on Monday for North Bay or Sudbury, and she thought he was still there when she left with her parents for Buffalo. Her father had been talking about going away for his health, her husband had nothing to do with her father's movements. She would not swear whether her father's trip was the subject of discussion with her husband, she did not recollect. She was surprised to see him come out of the station in Buffalo when she and her mother were in the hotel window. He said he had returned to Toronto on Good Friday, and being informed that she was in Buffalo, followed her there. She saw her father off to Rochester the same evening. She and her husband stayed in Buffalo over Sunday, and they came back to Toronto Monday morning. She had not seen her mother until this morning as she had not been well.

WHAT IS GAMEY'S GAME SHOWN BY BANK CLERKS.

did not know that people were endeavoring for some weeks to serve her with a subpoena. She had been in her own house every night. She thought her husband went to see her father on last Saturday. She said her husband had no bank account, but she had a small one in the Bank of Commerce on College and Yonge streets. She was positive that she did not get $500 or any such sum from her husband last Christmas. She never gave her husband power of attorney with reference to her bank account. She never sent a telegram to her husband or father when they were in Rochester.

Mr. Ritchie produced a telegram signed Hattie, to her father, George B. Wilson, in Rochester, dated April 18: "Will be to see you to-night."

Mrs. Sullivan said she never sent such a telegram, and at Mr. Ritchie's request, wrote a copy of it, and signed her name, which is Hattie. The copy and the telegram were filed as exhibits. She knew her husband's handwriting, and the telegram was not his. She did not know that her husband went over to Rochester on the 18th; she thought it was last Saturday, and did not know anything about the date.

Mr. Johnston did not cross-examine Mrs. Sullivan, as she said she had been unwell for some time and was unfit to be out of the house.

THE DEFENCE.

This concluded the evidence adduced by the prosecution. There was considerable delay before Norman W. Linton, collection clerk at the head office of the Ontario Bank, put in an appearance. Mr. Johnston had evidently to telephone to the bank, and when Linton arrived he was at once taken in hand by Mr. Johnston.

Q.—What is your position with the Ontario Bank? A.—I am collection clerk at the head office, corner of Scott and Wellington streets.

Q.—What was your position with the bank last September? A.—Well, I was on the ledger for two weeks while the regular ledgerkeeper was away.

Q.—Turn up the account of the Crossin Piano Company for the 11th September last. Do you find a deposit on that date? A.—Yes, of $900.

Q.—Can you tell who made that deposit? A.—No, I can't tell who made it.

Q.—In order that we may have it on record, just tell us what is the practice of your bank in making deposits? What would be done with that deposit? A.—It would be given to the ledgerkeeper by the teller, and by him entered and foliod and put on file.

Q.—What would represent that deposit in writing? A.—The deposit slip; the teller gives the slip to the ledgerkeeper. When the deposit slip is received the receiving teller enters it in his blotter. The folio of the lodger is put on the left hand corner of the slip.

Q.—Did this deposit slip, dated 11th Sept., 1902, ever go through your books? A.—No.

Q.—You see the letter "H" there? Who would put that on? A.—The teller would put that on.

"That is not an 'H,'" objected Mr. Ritchie.

Witness said it looked to him like an "N."

Q.—Is that Howarth's initial? A.—No; Mr. Kelso could also have initialed the slip, but it is not his initial.

Q.—It is not the genuine initial of either? A.—No; there is no ledger folio on it, either.

Q.—Could it have passed through your hands without those? A.—Possibly, but it is most improbable. If that went on without my folio the supplementary man would pass it back, thinking I had not entered it.

Q.—These slips are the only vouchers held by the bank as to the details of deposits? A.—Yes.

Q.—What would be on the slip to indicate the folio? A.—Just the figures 314.

Q.—Do you always put these slips on a file? A.—Yes, on an ordinary wire file, with sharp points.

Q.—Has this slip ever been on your file? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Is this the slip which you got us a voucher on 11th September, 1902? A.—No.

Q.—Did you authorize any person to make such a slip as that? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Gamey in the bank on Saturday, 18th April? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see Gamey doing anything on that occasion? A.—No, sir.

Q.—What time did you see him at the bank? A.—It was in the morning some time.

Q.—In the afternoon? A.—No, sir.

IMPORTANCE OF DEPOSIT SLIP.

Q.—Do you know the denomination of the bills of the 11th September? A.—No, sir.

Q.—If you had the right deposit slip could you tell? A.—Yes, sir.

A deposit slip was produced.

Q.—Is that your initial, or the teller's? A.—Neither.

Q.—Were these the only receiving tellers on that occasion? A.—Yes, I am almost certain they would be.

Q.—Now, take the slip showing a deposit on the 11th of September, deposited by E. Crossin on the 11th of September, 1902. Have you two deposits for $900 on that day? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Now, if you were to get the original slip, would it appear in the same way as this? A.—No, it would be totalled.

Q.—You only get the totals in your books? A.—Yes.

Q.—Look at that slip exhibit 67, and say whether that ever passed through your bank, as a real transaction? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Now, look at it, has it ever been on file? A.—No, sir.

Cross-examined by Mr. Ritchie:—Q.—Looking at exhibit No. 66, it is quite clear that this is not the original deposit slip? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—That it is not a copy, that it lacks several marks that would be on the original? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Would you say it is not a copy of a deposit slip? A.—It might be a copy, but it is not the slip.

Q.—These initials then, are not your teller's initials? A.—They do not look like them.

Q.—This does not look like an attempt to duplicate your slip? It would have the initials, folio, and other marks on it? A. Yes.

Q.—No one in the bank would be misled by it to think it was an original slip? A.—No.

Q.—They would not think it was the original document of the bank? A.—No, not for a moment.

Q.—Now for exhibit 67, the same remarks apply? A.—Yes.

Q.—You would not think for a moment that it was a copy of a slip that would pass through the bank? A.—No, not for a moment.

Q.—As the thing is here, there is no totals? A.—It would be totaled.

Q.—Now, do you use a blue pencil? A.—I think it is green.

Q.—Now, these initials, are they your ledger keeper's? A.—It is not our ledger keeper's.

Q.—You can't tell the letter? A. A.—No.

Q.—Of what value is a deposit slip? A.—I can't say, except as a reference.

Mr. Johnston then began a re-examination.

Q.—Can you say that the deposit slip is of no practical value? A.—Some banks destroy them.

Q.—Can you say they are of no value? A.—Yes.

Q.—That's your opinion. Now, suppose a dispute arose as to a deposit on a certain date? A.—As I say, it might be useful as reference.

Q.—The receipts given by customers are not always signed? A.—Yes.

Q.—All that is signed are the balances? A.—Yes.

Q.—Nothing but deposits? A.—No.

Q.—What are slips there for? A.—I don't know.

THE $900 DEPOSIT.

Mr. Howarth, the receiving teller in the Ontario Bank, corner Scott and Wellington, was called.

Mr. Johnston—Do you know Mr. Gamey? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see him in your bank on the 11th of September last? A. Yes.

Q.—Anyone with him? A.—Mr. E. Crossin.

Q.—How much did he deposit that day? A.—$900.

Q.—Of what denomination were the bills? A.—$100 bills.

Q.—To whose credit was the deposit placed? A.—E. Crossin & Co.

Q.—Who made the deposit? A.—Mr. Crossin.

Q.—You know his handwriting? A.—Yes.

Q.—That's how you know he made the deposit, from the handwriting on the deposit slip? A.—Yes.

Q.—You have no recollection other wise of who made the deposit? A.—No.

Q.—Did you have the original deposit slip on Saturday, April 18th? A.—I did.

Q.—Where was it? A.—In the vault.

Q.—Was Mr. Crossin's book entered up at the time? A.—I think so.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Gamey on the 18th of April? A.—Yes.

Q.—What time? A.—About 10 a.m.

Q.—Where did you see him? A.—He came to my wicket.

Q.What did he say? A.—He asked me for the Crossin Company's deposit slip of the 11th of September.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I told him to speak to the accountant.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He asked me to speak to the accountant for him.

Q.—Did you? A.—I did.

Q.—What did you say to the accountant? A.—I told him that Mr. Gamey wished to see the deposit slip.

Q.—Who is the accountant? A.—Mr. Brown.

Q.—What did he do? A.—He went to the manager's room.

Q.—What did he say to you after he came out? A.—He told me to show Mr. Gamey the slip.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I got the slip and gave it to Mr. Gamey.

Q.—What did he do? A.—He looked at it, said he would like to make a copy of it, and walked over to the desk opposite my wicket.

Q.—Was there any blue pencil there? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—How long was he there? A.—Two or three minutes.

RETURNED WRONG SLIP.

Q.—What did he do next? A.—Came back and handed in a slip.

Q.—Can you say what was on the slip you handed out to him? A.—Nine $100, date 11th of September, 1902, credit E. Crossin Co., deposited by E. Crossin. I don't know the folio number; that is not in my department.

Q.—Now here is exhibit 67. Is this the slip Mr. Gamey handed to you? A.—Yes.

Q.—In the place of the one you gave him? A.—Yes.

Mr. Johnston read: Credit E. Crossin Co., deposited by E. Crossin, ten fives, 20 tens, 30 twenties and one fifty; no total.

Q.—What did you do when he handed you the slip? A.—I saw at once this was not the slip he had received.

Q.—Had you given him the other slip to take away? A.—No.

Q.—You saw the blue pencil marks and the blue line on the slip? A.—Yes.

Q.—This slip could not have passed through the bank in this shape? A.—No.

Q.—What did you do next? A.—I called Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Was he in a position where he could hear you? A.—I think so. He was only two or three yards from the wicket.

SENT AFTER GAMEY.

Q.—Did he pass out of the bank? A.—Yes.

Q.—Other customers in the bank at the time? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did he do? A.—I turned to the back of the cage and spoke to the messenger.

Q.—What was his name? A.—Mr. Barton.

Q.—Did you explain to him what had occurred? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did he do? A.—He went out to the front of my wicket and looked for the lost slip.

Q.—Did he look where Mr. Gamey had been standing? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I spoke to Mr. Brown, the accountant.

Q.—What did he do? A.—He reported to the manager.

Q.—You were then called in? A.—Yes.

Q.—You told the manager about it? A.—Yes.

Q.—And the messenger? A.—He was despatched to find Mr. Gamey.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Gamey later that morning? A.—Yes.

Q.—How much later? A.—About half an hour.

Q.—Who came with him? A.—Mr. Crossin.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said it was funny, but he thought he had given me the original slip. He couldn't understand it, he said.

Q.—Did you say anything to him? A.—No.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I looked for the slip.

Q.—Find it? A.—No.

Q.—The messenger reported in the meantime? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you do when you could not find the slip? A.—I went up with Crossin and Gamey.

Q.—What did Gamey say? A.—He said he might have lost it on the street. Q.—What route did you take? A.—Wellington to Scott, to Colborne, up to King, to Yonge, to Bay, and thence to Adelaide street.

Q.—Did you go to Crossin's office? A.—Yes.

Q.—Find trace of original slip? A.—No.

Q.—Did Gamey say anything again about losing slip? Which side of Scott street did you take? A.—North side.

Q.—Did he make excuse again? A.—Kept saying he could not understand it.

Q.—Did he search his pockets? A.—Yes.

Q.—Where? A.—In Crossin's office.

Q.—Anything said between you and Gamey? A.—I asked him who put initial on the slip. He replied that he had.

Mr. Johnston, showing witness exhibit 67—Is that the slip he gave you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was it freshly written? A.—Yes, the ink was a light blue.

Q.—What is it now? A.—It's dark.

Q.—Did he give you any explanation? A.—Yes, he said he wanted a copy of the original slip.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I said it wasn't a copy. I said the denomination of the bills was not right. He said that he could not understand that, but that he must have had another slip in front of him when he wrote it.

Q.—Had he any other slip from the bank that morning? A.—No, he got only one from me.

Q.—Did he say any more? A.—Yes; he said the total amount was the same, so it didn't make any difference.

Q.—Did he ever get a deposit slip before? A.—No.

Q.—Did you report to the manager? A.—Yes.

Q.—He instructed you to go to Mr. Barwick's office? A.—Yes.

Q.—Mr. Barwick is the bank's solicitor? A.—Yes.

Q.—See Gamey again? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—At 2 p.m.

Q.—What did he do when he came back? A.—He handed a slip to the accountant.

Q.—Did you see him hand a paper to Mr. Brown? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see Mr. Brown Afterwards? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see this exhibit 66? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—After Gamey went out.

Q.—Shown to you by whom? A.—Mr. Brown.

Q.—What was the deposit? A.—Nine one hundred dollar bills.

Q.—Shortly after 2 o'clock? A.—Yes.

Q.—Is that the original slip, September 12th 1902? A.—It is not.

Q.—Was it in that condition when you saw it on Saturday, crumpled? A.—Yes.

A.—Yes.

Q.—Is that your initial, if it is one? A.—No.

Q.—Look at 67; is that your initial if it is one? A.—No.

Q.—All deposit slips have initial? A.—Yes.

Mr. Johnston here produced one of the blank deposit slips of the bank, and, after making some figures on it, asked the witness to mark it as he would do when it passed through his hands. It was checked by Mr. Howarth in the usual way and put in as exhibit 65.

BOTH BOGUS SLIPS.

Q.—These slips, then, Mr. Howarth, are both wrong? No. 67, the bogus one, for obvious reasons, and No. 66, for what reason? A.—Because it has not my initials, nor has it been checked in the usual way. The long blue line is made by the accountant when he checks them over in the morning.

Mr. Johnston then requested witness to see that Mr. Bartlett, the bank messenger, and Mr. Brown, accountant, were present in the morning for examination. Court then adjourned until to-morrow at 10 a.m.

KIDNEY TROUBLE EIGHT YEARS.

Lumbago and Tired, Worn out Feelings Were the Portion of a Toronto Machinist.

He is Well now—Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets Have Cured him.

Mr. Jas. J. Walsh, a machinist in the employ of the Kemp Manufacturing Company, and whose home is 391 Adelaide street west, Toronto, told the story of his cure as follows:

"For eight or nine years I have been troubled with my kidneys. I first had a severe attack of lumbago, then was troubled with intermittent pains in my back, and felt tired and worn out all the time. I used a number of remedies, but did not get much benefit from them. I heard of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, and decided to try them. I have taken in all three boxes, and can positively state the Tablets have completely cured me. I recommended them to my brother and they have cured him already. They are certainly splendid."

Every form of kidney trouble, from backache to Bright's disease, is cured by Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, and the cure is permanent. Price 50 cents a bottle or three for $1.25 at druggists. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto. 11

A Satirical Reward.

There was perhaps more satire than gratitude in the reward bestowed by a French lady on a surgeon for bleeding her—an operation in which the lancet was so clumsily used that an artery was severed and the poor woman bled to death. When she recognized that she was dying, she made a will in which she left the operator a life annuity of 800 francs on condition "that he never again bled anybody as long as he lived."

The Second Fiddle.

"Mr. Henpecque, let me introduce you to the Count de Dieppe."

"Ah, eet ees ze honor to meet a musician. I hear, sar, sat you an' your family play ze music."

"Why, I don't know the first thing about music."

"But I hear eet all around sat you play second fiddle to your wife!"

She Tipped Him Off.

Mrs. Meekins—What a frightful brute that Mr. Blood must be! His wife tells me that her mother is afraid to open her mouth in his presence.

Mr. Meekins—Is it possible? Why, he must be a regular terror. (Musingly) I wonder how the fellow manages it.

Nine out of every ten men have been guilty of transgression against nature in their youth. Nature never excuses, no matter how young, thoughtless or ignorant he may be. The punishment and suffering corresponds with the crime. The only escape from its ruinous results is proper scientific treatment to counteract its effects. The DRAINS, either by nightly losses, or secretly through the urine, must be stopped—the NERVES must be built up and invigorated, the blood must be purified, the SEXUAL ORGANS must be vitalized and developed, the BRAIN must be nourished. Our New Method Treatment provides all these requirements. Under its influence the brain becomes active; the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and sores disappear; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. HAVELOCK CITIZENS SUFFER BY FIRE.

A Serious Conflagration Occurred Their Yesterday.

A fire which did damage to the extent of $3,000, or more, broke out in Havelock at six o'clock yesterday evening, and for a while it looked as if the entire village would be swept away by the fiery element.

The people of the hustling little village became somewhat alarmed, and a message was despatched to Peterborough asking for the assistance of the fire brigade. The alarm in town was sounded and preparations were being made to entrain, when a second message was received stating that the danger was past.

The fire broke out in the dwelling of Mrs. Boyce, who conducts a grocery on Ontario street.. She had left a coal oil lamp burning while she was out of the house for a short time. The curtains in the window ignited and a blaze started. This was fanned by a stiff breeze that was blowing through the house, the front and back doors having been left open. Mrs. Boyce's house and store, together with contents, were completely consumed. The house and shop of Mr. S. S. Joyce near by, was destroyed by fire, although the greater portion of the contents were saved. The blacksmith shop of Mr. Herb Williams was also destroyed.

The citizens worked as best they could with their limited fire-fighting apparatus, and succeeded in getting the fire under control. The buildings were all frame structures and burned very rapidly.

Mrs. Boyce had insurance amounting to $900; Mr. Joyce was insured to the extent of $500; while Mr. Williams was protected by insurance to the extent of $200.

Bell, farmer, Smith; Robert Clinkscale, carpenter, Peterborough; A.W. Cressman, merchant, Peterborough; R. J. Frost, jeweller, Peterborough; J. W. There were no representatives of the bar present.

THE FRASER MISSION BAND'S ENTERTAINMENT.

Mrs. Adam Ferguson's Oration Some Excellent Singing.

That the presentation of "The Story of Kardoo," by the Fraser Mission Band in connection with St. Paul's Presbyterian church was a great success was shown by the large number of people who turned out last night in the South Ward Mission church to hear a repetition of that most interesting service of song.

Besides promoting social intercourse and advancing the spiritual life of their denomination the Fraser Mission Band always succeeds in giving a most excellent entertainment. Last night's presentation which was heartily endorsed by an appreciative audience, was no exception. While considerable interest naturally centred in Mrs. Adam Ferguson, who took the role of "Kardoo," a young Hindoo girl, yet the honours of the evening were fairly distributed among all taking part.

At intervals during Mrs. Ferguson's recital of the story of her life, the chorus sang appropriate selections. Miss Effie Best and Miss Ethel White sang solos while the chorus was composed of the following:—The Misses M., F., and A. Hamilton, F. Cameron, A. Bradd, M. Meldrum, M. Paterson, E. Carey, J. and L. Hall, A. and M. Macdonald, M. Hall and the Misses Shackley, while Miss G. Dennistoun presided at the piano in her usual excellent manner. Becomingly dressed in red, "Kardoo" gave her oration, telling how at the age of eleven years she became married to a full grown man, as is the Hindoo custom; how her father murdered his wife, because her face was seen by man, the punishment for which in Hindustan is death, and how her husband was killed. Mrs. Ferguson then went into the awful details of the events which occurred at the funeral pyre, for as her husband predeceased her she had to be burned with his body. By what was little short of a miracle she was saved and found herself, on coming back to consciousness in the house of a missionary, who taught her to worship the one and only God, and to forsake the mud idols, which are worshipped by adherents to the Hindoo faith. Long and continued, and it must be said well deserved applause greeted the youthful performers as the curtain fell.

MR. ROBERT GIBB'S LIVERY BUSINESS.

He Will Offer it for Sale by Public Auction.

As will be noticed in another column of the Examiner, Mr. Robert Gibbs, Peterborough's well known liveryman, has decided to sell by public auction his livery business. The sale will be conducted by Mr. John Haggart on May 14th, when Mr. Gibbs will dispose of horses, carriages, etc. It is Mr. Gibbs' intention to retain the hack business, however, and he will at once proceed to place a first class hack service at the disposal of the people of Peterborough. Mr. Gibbs will go out of the livery business entirely.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Mr. L. F. Clarry, of Hastings, was in town to-day.

Mr. Jack Primeau was in Lindsay on Sunday.

Mr. George H. Watson, K.C., Toronto, is in town attending the Spring Assizes.

Mr. J. Hague Sawers, of the local Ontario Bank staff, is able to resume his duties after a short illness.

Messrs. Robinson Bros., the proprietors of the Hotel St. Lawrence, Port Hope, are seriously considering the improving and enlarging of their hotel.

A NEW OFFICE.

Messrs. McMillan, Maguire & Co. to Open in Peterborough.

Mr. D. F. Maguire, of Toronto, was in town to-day. He is a member of the firm of brokers of McMillan, Maguire & Co., of that city and it is their intention to open out an office in Peterborough very shortly. Mr. Maguire was to-day looking up suitable quarters and it is altogether likely that the new brokers' office will be on Simcoe street, along side of that of Messrs. Dever & Co.

WM. BELL'S CONDITION IS VERY SERIOUS.

Fourteen Pieces of Bone Were Removed From His Skull.

The condition of Mr. William Bell, who was injured yesterday afternoon at the Cereal Company's new dam, is quite serious, and very little hope is held out by his physicians for his recovery. Dr. Grey and Dr. Young yesterday afternoon operated on the unfortunate man and removed fourteen pieces of bone, being pieces of his skull that were crushed in against the brain tissue. The operation was a most delicate one and was quite successfully performed, but the accident was of such a serious nature that Mr. Bell's recovery will be little short of miraculous.

A LECTURE ON WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

Was Given in the Charlotte Street Sunday School.

Yesterday evening in the Charlotte street Sunday School, Mr. C. E. Brown delivered a most interesting and instructive, yet at the same time simple lecture on "Wireless Telegraphy." The lecture was given under the auspices of the Charlotte street Epworth League, before a large number of people.

On the conclusion of the lecture a vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. Arnold Preston, and seconded by Mr. N. Hendron, was tendered the lecturer for his excellent discourse. A male quartette, consisting of Messrs. A. W. Wilson, A. Prest, N. Hendron and S. Armstrong, gave some excellent selections, which the audience heartily applauded.

Rev. Mr. Jolliffe, pastor of Charlotte street Methodist church, acted as chairman.

—The belated sucker (sipho suckeranus) has ascended the creek that runs through the town, and is in evidence in shoals between the Hunter street bridge and the dam. The small boy and the idle big boy are snaring him with hooks, very kindly assisted by pedestrians, who pause, and leaning on the railing, enjoy the sport, a good deal better than the spitted sucker.

—It is reported that several mechanics have arrived in town to work on the extensive new buildings to be erected for the Canadian General Electric Company, but will not, in some cases, make a very long stay. THE MIDLAND LEAGUE.

The Midland League was reorganized on Friday night in Port Hope and will comprise four clubs, Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg. Messrs. Workman and Cinnamon, who represented the local club, says the Lindsay Post, put up a strong fight to get Lindsay admitted, but the majority ruled when a vote was taken and Lindsay was left out. The discussion lasted over three hours and despite the arguments put up by our delegates, the Port Hope, Cobourgs an Bowmanville men thought the distance too far, saying it would take a whole day to go to Lindsay, while a half-day would answer for the other towns. They however promised to give the local teams a couple of exhibition games through the summer. Workman and Cinnamon returned from Port Hope this morning feeling jubilant because they had accomplished something. We are informed, continues the Post, by Manager Simpson this morning, that a meeting of the club will be held on Monday evening and steps will be taken to form a league comprising Cannington, Port Perry, Lindsay and perhaps a Peterborough team.

* * *

It is said that one of the teams in the Midland District Baseball League will have a pitcher who won his spurs in an American League.

* * * *

The Auburns defeated the Quakers at the Oval on Saturday at a friendly match.

* * * *

The baseball clubs of the town are asked to send representatives to the meeting to be held in the Oriental Hotel this evening.

* * * *

A meeting of the Intermediate Baseball League will be held this evening in the Y.M.C.A. building at 7.30 o'clock. There will be practice at 6.30 o'clock this evening. All ticket money and subscriptions are to be reported.

LACROSSE.

Some twenty eight players were out for practice last night, and the boys handled themselves nicely. They are improving wonderfully in the game and will no doubt give a good account of themselves in Lakefield on May 25th. Mr. Jas. Davis has been appointed field captain. Another practice will be held on Monday night. —Lindsay Post.

The Port Hope Guide concerning lacrosse in that town says:—

"But, right here, Port Hope is going to have a fast team. We are not in a position to give the line-up, but one thing sure, is that it will be a good one. There have been several rumours as to where Roach will play but "Tony" is in town now and it is his intention to stay here.

"The Beavers have the use of the Park for morning of Victoria Day, but as yet have not been able to secure a team. They are corresponding with Brighton and may probably be able to bring them here.

"The "Vics" have a chance for three good games for Victoria Day. A game was partly arranged with the Oshawa Juniors for the morning but as the Beavers have secured the Park that had to be dropped. Campbellford would like them to go down there and play for a trophy, and the Peterborough T.A.S. II. team want them out there. It is altogether likely that they will go to Peterborough."

FOOTBALL.

The Y.M.C.A. has entered two teams in the Midland Football Association. These are in Groups 2 and 3, as will be shown by the schedule, to be seen elsewhere in these columns. The prospects are very good, and there is plenty of opportunity for places on either of the teams for fellows who turn out regularly to practice every night.

ADJOURNED VESTRY MEETING.

Business of Ecclesiastical Year Concluded.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEES

In Memory of the Late Mrs. Beck—Various Auxiliary Church Organizations Present Reports.

The adjourned Easter vestry meeting of St. John's, was held in the school house last night. There was a good attendance, the ladies of the congregation being well represented.

After devotions, the Rector, who presided, called for REPORTS.

Miss Menk, secretary, through the chairman, presented the report of the Mission Band. The report showed that during the year the Board had raised $79.21, which had been expended in assisting home and foreign mission fields.

Mrs. P. Campbell, reported for the Woman's Auxiliary, showing that during the year there had been collected $362.19, and there had been devoted to missions, etc., the sum of $345.43, leaving a credit balance of $16.76.

Miss Rogers presented the report of the King's Daughters. A total revenue of $111.25 was realized, and an expenditure of $78.45, devoted to various charitable and church purposes, left a balance of $32.80 in the treasury.

Miss Dawson, for the Girls' Guild, reported in detail the work done by the guild. The sum of $294.13 had been realized, and a reported balance of $57.05, showed an expenditure of $227.08.

On behalf of the choir, Mr. A. A. Hollingshead presented a verbal report, and conveyed the thanks of the choir for the interest its friends and the congregation had taken in its welfare.

The Rector reported on behalf of the Sunday school, which was doing good work. During the year the library had been greatly improved and there was reported to be $190 in the treasury. The Rector paid a warm tribute to Mr. W. H. Walkey, who had for so long been the efficient and faithful superintendent. On his resignation at Advent, Mr. Davies had succeeded, and he had hardly been settled in his work ere he was called from town. Then the superintendency fell upon the Rector's shoulders, and he was doing the work the best he could, but it was obviously too much for one man to conduct several Sunday services and attend to the Sunday school. It left him so fatigued at night that, as last Sunday night, he was unfitted for work, and any shortcomings that might be observed, should be credited to that source. Some effort should be made to secure the services of an effective Sunday school superintendent.

Mrs. E. Brown, through Mrs. Davidson, presented the report of the Chancel Guild. The receipts were $71.44; the expenditure $44, and the credit balance $27.44.

The sidesmen for the year were appointed as follows: Messrs. H. Rush, Dr. Burnham, H. D. Burnett, A. H. Stratton, Jos. Mills, R. H. Kells, E. M. Poussett, P. Campbell, and Robt. Fair.

The ushers appointed were: — Messrs. McFarlane Wilson, J. E. Johnston, C. H. J. Mitchell, J. Cocks, H. Rush, jr., E. Lush, W. Sailsbury, Jas. Bell, Jos. Bell, W. E. Conway, H. Long, W. H. Cavanagh, C. Graham, and W. H. Walkey, jr.

RECTORY SITE.

The Special Committee appointed at the Vestry meeting on April 13th, reported, suggesting two suitable sites for the new Rectory. After considerable discussion and the presentation of the views of the Rector;

On motion of Mr. H. Long, seconded by R. Fair, the site at the north-east corner of Sheridan Terrace and Brock street, was selected.

Dr. Boucher presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending that a portion of the surplus be used to acquire propretary pew, No. 29, and that in view of necessary expenditure on grounds and to the church building, the balance be left at the disposal of the wardens; that the salary of choir master and organist be increased by $50 each per annum, and that $200 per year, duty from May 1st, be granted for the necessary expenses of the choir, on condition that the envelope subscriptions be increased by $100 and that an increased allowance for rental of Rector's residence be made—from $120 to $200.

When the financial statement for the year was submitted, the Rector explained that on Sunday morning last he had made his annual statement of the condition of parochial interests, and he had been able to make a gratifying report. He had also stated that later contributions had brought the Easter offertory up to $320.

The several reports were adopted. Mr. W. H. Walkey was re-appointed Vestry Clerk.

The following were appointed the Advisory Committee: Messrs. Alex. Elliott, H. Rush, H. Long, R. M. Denistoun, D. Hughes-Charles, W. Conway, R. Fair and P. Campbell.

The Envelope Committee is composed of Messrs. A. A. Hollingshead, H. Morphet, F. A. Lount, H. Clurton and F. D. Kerr.

Messrs. F. A. Lount and A.A. Hollingshead, who were auditors last year, were re-appointed.

Votes of thanks to the choir and choir master, to Mr. J. Butcher, sexton, for his admirable care of the beautiful grounds of St. John's, to Miss English, for occasional assistance at the organ, and to Mr. John Crane, for similar appreciated services, were passed.

A MEMORIAL RESOLUTION.

The following resolution, moved by Mr. Yokome, seconded by Dr. Boucher, was unanimously adopted by a standing vote:—

"That this adjourned meeting of the vestry of St. John's church, Peterborough, held on Monday, April 27th, 1903, in anticipation of a more enduring memorial, hereby place upon the records of this Parish, an expression of its earnest appreciation and cordial recognition of the invaluable services the late Mrs. Beck, during her life, rendered the Church and all its interests, and also its deep sense of the irreparable loss sustained by the withdrawal of her person and influence.

"In her thirty years of association with this Parish, she was ever actively engaged in co-operation with the efforts of her husband, the late rector of Peterborough, Rev. J. W. H. Beck, in assisting to promote the religious and material interests of St. John's, not only through all recognized Church agencies, but in a more individual capacity, in the practical administration of an ardent charity, and in every other way in which Almighty God permits and owns the offices of an untiring zeal for His glory and an unwavering fidelity to His cause.

"And that a copy of this resolution be inscribed upon the records of this Parish."

The mover in introducing the above resolution, Dr. Boucher in seconding it and the Rector in supporting it, spoke in the most earnest manner of the splendid work the late Mrs. Beck had wrought in the congregation of St. John's. While she was most energetic and untiring in church activities, her abounding charity exercised often at great personal sacrifice in the dead hours of the night, in storm and wind, and bestowed upon all, irrespective of creed, was one of the reasons why she would be so greatly missed.

The meeting adjourned with prayer.

HELD THEIR ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING.

The George Street Methodist Church Epworth League.

The annual business meeting and election of officers of George street Epworth League was held last evening. Reports from the various departments showed that very satisfactory work had been done by the different committees. The membership had been augmented by the addition of some thirty new members, and the Treasurer reported a balance on hand of $18.00. The Missionary Committee in addition to holding several missionary meetings reported having received $47.55, which, with some arrears, would bring the amount for missions up to $50.00. The Flower Committee reported distribution of flowers to the sick, while the Visiting and Relief Committee had made regular visits to the hospital and Protestant Home, distributing flowers in addition to clothing and help, supplied several poor families. This latter Committee also visited the Protestant Home and provided a programme and refreshments for the old folks there. The Literary Committee reported several very successful meetings, among which were lectures by Dr. Birnie on "The Eye and the Ear"; Mr. J. Munyon's Remedies for Children.

"Train mothers to intelligently look after the health of their families and the well-being of a nation is assured." —Munyon.

It has assuredly been a labor of love for me to study the diseases of children with a view to their relief and cure. Many grown people will stubbornly cling to the debilitating drugs and nostrums that are a relic of barbarism, but I hold that it is almost a crime to give them to children at the risk of physical and mental degeneration. My remedies for children's diseases are effective and prompt, but they are entirely harmless. Every thoughtful mother should have a Munyon Family Medicine Chest, and should never fail to keep it supplied with Munyon's Cold Cure, Cough Cure, Sore Throat Cure, Fever Cure, D. D. & C. Tablets, Croup Cure, Cholera Morbus Cure, Constipation Cure, Worm Cure, Face and Skin Ointment, Munyon's Balm and Munyon's Plasters. This chest will prove an unfailing silent friend in the hour of need. A few doses of the proper remedy given at the right time will prevent long and dangerous spells of sickness, and save many doctors' fees.

MUNYON'S REMEDIES.

Munyon's Medicine Cases, $2.50, $5 and $10.

Munyon's Cold Cure prevents pneumonia, and breaks up a cold in a few hours. Price 25c.

Personal letters addressed to Prof. Munyon, Philadelphia, U. S. A., containing details of sickness, will be answered promptly and free advice as to treatment will be given. 12B

THE JOKE AS A POWER.

It Is Rapidly Becoming Mightier Than the Pen.

Men who fear nothing else shrink from a joke upon themselves. Soldiers who do not flinch before opposing guns dread to be made ridiculous. Woe to the national hero who makes one trifling mistake which may subject him to clever caricature! His meritorious career is henceforth shadowed by one colored illustration. A comic paper will tip the scales of justice, snatch the victor's prize from his extended palm and rob the orator of choicest laurels. A brilliant satire will mar the fortunes of the greatest statesman, a laugh will turn the tide of a political convention.

Indeed the joke is fast becoming mightier than the pen. The orator has learned its value, and even the clergyman resorts to it when he desires to stir the flagging interest of his flock. It furnishes sufficient excuse for the impertinence of children, and in its name the daily papers deride the highest national dignitaries.

What is the meaning of its steady growth in power and what results may we predict from its humorous tyranny?

Is there a chance that our keen relish for fun may finally produce a kind of humorous dyspepsia resulting from overindulgence, unless with epicurean discrimination we demand quality, not quantity, and stubbornly refuse to swallow other than that which should appease a wholesome, nay cultivated appetite in jokes?—Caroline Ticknor in Atlantic.

Trifles as Irritants.

We are so constituted that what is occurring at the moment interests us often out of all proportion to its importance. For example, we are thrown off our balance by the merest trifles perhaps which occur today, but which in a week's time may have no significance whatever. Obstacles which seem like mountains when we meet them dwindle away to molehills when we get away from them.

Even what seems tragedy at the moment in the future may be the most innocent comedy.

Most of us are so constituted that we will make almost any sacrifice for present peace. It would seem easier to have an arm or a leg amputated two years hence than to lose a finger today! It is human nature to shrink from pain, and we purchase release at almost any cost. If we could only train the mind to look at today's trouble and annoyance from the standpoint of the future, it would be much easier to bear.—Success.

Locked In With a Maniac.

The writer was once closeted with a patient whom he had no suspicion of being mad until the latter got out of bed, turned the key of the door and preferred a mild request to the writer to have his throat cut, handing him at the same time an open pocketknife, which he produced from underneath his pillow. I objected to the knife as being too small for the purpose and begged to be allowed to go for my case of amputating knives, with which, I explained, the operation could be performed with greater neatness and dispatch. He unlocked the door at once, binding me over to secrecy and urging me to lose no time in returning. I drove home, reported the case to the authorities and came back with assistance. He was secured with great difficulty and sent to the asylum.—London Tit-Bits.

Harmony In the Leaves of a Tree.

One of the remarkable characteristics of a tree is the process of leafage, and if we examine the bough upon which the leaves grow the admiration of the scientific agriculturist will become thoroughly aroused over the perfect consistency and artistic skill manifested in the arrangement of each spray and the exact number of leaves arranged with the most exquisite art and regularity. Every group of leaves forms merely long lines—some short and each one different—no two alike, no two in the same position, yet all so perfect and harmoniously blended that there can be no antagonism, no sameness and all those thousands and thousands of strange and delicate forms grouped together, neither confused nor ill arranged.

A Famous Portrait Painter's Opinion.

The famous artist Von Lenbach had one great dominant principle—that out of nature one should grasp and hold fast but one thing in portraiture, the head; that this exponent of the soul must stand out in undisturbed unity; that accessories of whatever kind, whether dress or form, must distract and weaken the impression that the head should produce; that a portrait to attain its highest aim and significance must look out from a background of nothingness and must be shorn of every detail that interferes with this unity of purpose.—Cosmopolitan.

European and American Oysters.

The oysters of America and Europe differ greatly. European oysters are smaller and have a coppery taste. Our southern oysters are larger than the northern. They are dredged along the coast and transferred to oyster beds in creeks close to shore, where they fatten. In London oyster salesmen sometimes keep oysters for a few days in water to which oatmeal has been added, for the purpose of rendering them more delicate and of better flavor. When out of season—during spawning time—the oyster is soft and milky and not fit to be eaten.

The Cook Stays.

Mrs. Newbride—How does Mrs. Henry Peck manage to keep that cook of hers?

Mrs. Oldhand—She threatened to leave, but Mrs. Peck would not give a recommendation, and she wouldn't go without one, and they are both stubborn.—Judge.

Tact.

"It is difficult to say what tact is," Archbishop Langley replied when asked to define it. "Here, however, is an instance of what it is not: Only this morning a clergyman in my diocese wrote to me, 'In consideration of your grace's many infirmities and failing powers.' That was not tactful."

TIMIDITY AND TALENT.

A Lack of Courage Is the Death of a Great Deal of Ability.

A great deal of talent is lost to the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obscure men who have only remained obscure because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort and who, if they could have been induced to begin, would in all probability have gone great lengths in the career of fame. The fact is that to do anything in this world worth doing we must not stand shivering on the brink and thinking of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can. It will not do to be perpetually calculating risks and adjusting nice chances. It did very well before the flood, when a man could consult his friends upon an intended scheme for a hundred and fifty years and then live to see its success for six or seven centuries afterward. But at present a man waits and doubts and hesitates and consults his brother and his uncle and his first cousins and particular friends till one fine day he finds that he is sixty-five years of age; that he has lost so much time in consulting first cousins and particular friends that he has no time left to follow their advice.—Sydney Smith on "Courage In the Use of Talent."

Danger In Nightmares.

"I believe that dreams sometimes kill," said a prominent specialist on nervous diseases the other day. "Of course I don't know that they are fatal, but I have every reason to think so. I had a woman patient whom I was treating for a number of complications, including a weak heart. She could not bear any excitement, and I often warned against exposing herself to sudden fright. She complained of having nightmare and said she often woke up in a state of terrible fright so weak that she could not call for help. One morning she was found dead in bed with an expression of abject terror on her face. I have no doubt that she died from fright produced by a nightmare.

"Persons subject to nightmare who have weak hearts should avoid sleeping on the back. They should lie on the right side and have the right arm extended so they will wake up if they turn over. Most nightmares are the result of sleeping on the back or the left side, where the heart is so compressed that it has little room for free action."

Biased Her Way.

There is a story about Alaska and its people in which is mentioned a man who chose a bride from among some of the Indian tribes up toward the Chilcoot pass. He took her to a large city, Montreal, perhaps, and left her in a splendid hotel while he went out to see some one about a dog. She missed him sadly. She sat at the window looking out on the street four stories below. Solitude became intolerable. She decided to find her husband. There was an elevator, but she didn't care for it. Softly as moccasins could carry her she issued forth. When she had gone out, a bellboy saw queer marks on the balusters and doorcasings. The Indian bride had biased her way with a tomahawk so that she could find her way back. The Indian bride was merely living up to her education, for it is very necessary to know how to blaze a trail in Alaska.

Men Crotchety at Breakfast.

"If waiters had their way, men would not be permitted in a restaurant before the dinner hour, or at least before lunch," said the proprietor of a cafe on upper Broadway.

"Why? Simply because they are so cross at breakfast. No, it isn't the question of tips altogether, although I never saw a waiter refuse a quarter. But the fact is men are crotchety before they get their breakfast. If they have to wait five minutes, it seems an hour to them, and even the morning paper seems to lose its charms unless breakfast is on the table. There is no meal in the day where the waiters get so many 'kicks' as they do at breakfast, and the men are always more ill tempered than the women."

A Lincoln Story.

Abraham Lincoln had a rule for evading difficulties. At a cabinet meeting one day, it is related, Mr. Seward jokingly remarked, "Mr. President, I hear that you turned out for a colored woman on a muddy crossing the other day." "I don't remember," answered Lincoln musingly, "but I think it very likely. I have always made it a rule that if people won't turn out for me I will for them. If I didn't, there might be a collision."

SUFFERED FOR SIX YEARS.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. Huffman, of Napanee.

And now she Recommends Them to Other Young Ladies or Married Women.

Napanee, Ont., April 26, —(Special.) That Dodd's Kidney Pills are one of the greatest boons ever conferred on suffering womankind, is the experience of Mrs. John C. Huffman, of this place. For the benefit of her sister women she has given the following statement for publication:—

"I had been troubled for about six years, and the pain was so great I could not stand it. I could not entertain any company.

"One night when I was feeling miserable I read of some wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I decided to try them. The first box brought an improvement, and by the time I had taken six boxes I was completely cured.

"I can recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to any person suffering from Kidney Disease and I make this statement hoping that it will help other young ladies or married women."

Mrs. Huffman is only one of many women who have proved that many female complaints are the result of disordered Kidneys and are as such easily curable by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Business vs. Biliousness.

The man who is subject to biliousness cannot attend to business—biliousness demands all his attention. Biliousness arises from the retention of waste and foreign matter in the system, natures drainage being clogged.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt

goes to the root of the trouble and eradicates the cause—persuades the stomach and bowels, in a gentle but insistent manner, into healthy action, Abbey's clears the bile from the system in nature's own way, bringing health, a clear head, a clean stomach and energy for work.

THE CHINOOK WINDS.

Mr. Stupart Gives Reasons for Inequalities in B.C.'s Climate.

In a recent lecture, Mr. Stupart, director of Canada's Meteorological Survey, said that what was known in Europe as the Fohn and in America as the Chinook wind, was frequent on all ranges of British Columbia, as well as on the Alberta prairies.

The Chinook was directly connected with the regular wind system of the cyclonic areas which at intervals pass the continent from the Pacific, attended in districts to the southward by westerly winds, the strength of which is proportionately to the energy of the cyclonic disturbance. The pressure of the atmosphere decreases upwards; when, therefore, a mass of air is forced by any cause to raise itself from the surface of the earth to a certain height, it is submitted to a constantly diminishing pressure, and accordingly expands, and as every expansion is a work which is accomplished by a consumption of heat, the air cools as it rises, so long as the cooling is not greater than will allow the air to retain its watery vapor the temperature will continue to fall at the rate of about 1 Fahr. for every 180 feet rise; but as soon as the dew point is reached the water vapor passes to the fluid or solid state, clouds are formed and rain or snow falls. The confined heat is set free, and the cooling from this moment proceeds more slowly, and it may be within the limits of which we have experience be stated as about 1 Fahr. for every 180 feet.

"When a mass of air, on the contrary, sinks towards the surface of the earth," Mr. Stupart continued, "it comes under higher pressure, is compressed and, consequently, heated. Its temperature will rise more and more above the dew point, and the moisture will, with continually increasing ease, be held dissolved in the state of vapor. The heating during the whole descent will be 1 for every 180 feet.

Properties of Chinook.

"These physical laws, first applied by Dr. Hann, of Vienna, explain the properties of the Chinook. The air comes from the Pacific, saturated with moisture, is precipitated in the form of rain on the low levels and snow at higher levels, and then, rushing through the passes and over the summits of the mountains, descends into the eastern valleys at a considerably higher temperature than it had at a corresponding altitude on the western slopes.

"The Pacific winds are deprived of their moisture as they ascend the western slopes of the Coast Range, and a wet climate results along the Coast and in the Lower Fraser valley, but the air, after passing over the Coast Range, either flows eastward or is drawn down to lower levels, becoming drier and warmer, and the interior plateau between the Selkirks and the Coast Range possesses a comparatively dry climate. Impinging on the western slopes, first of the Gold Range and then of the Selkirks, the air is again forced upwards with a lowering temperature, and a large snowfall results in winter, and a good deal of rain falls in the warmer seasons. After passing the summit of the Selkirks, the air, being no longer forced upward to the higher levels, ceases to deposit moisture until it again impinges against the still more lofty Rockies.

"The lower Fraser River and the Coast neighborhood of British Columbia possesses a much more equable climate than other parts of the Province. The annual mean temperature is between 48 and 50. The winters are not cold, the January temperatures being nearly the same as London, England.

Different Climate Eastward.

"Passing to the eastward of the Coast Range, we find a different climate; the summers are warmer and the winters are colder than on the Coast. As regards temperature, December and January may be fairly compared with the corresponding months in the Niagara District, and indeed the whole summer may well be compared with Southern Ontario, except that the air is much drier and the precipitation is scant; in addition to this, the spring is earlier.

"Griffin Lake is situated about 100 miles to the eastward of Kamloops, among the foothills of the Selkirks, and the effect of this greater distance from the high Coast Range and increasing altitude is shown in a somewhat lower temperature than at Kamloops, and a larger amount of precipitation. The snowfall here aggregates about 120 inches each winter.

"As the Selkirks are ascended the effect of increasing altitude becomes manifest, and at Glacier House, at the base of Mount Sir Donald, the mean monthly temperature averages nearly 8 degrees lower than at Griffin Lake, and the precipitation being comes greater owing chiefly to an exceptionally heavy snowfall between October and April; the fall aggregating as much as 36 feet.

Warm Days, Cold Nights.

"July and August are months with a mean temperature rarely exceeding 57 degrees or 58 degrees, and with pleasantly warm days and usually bright sunshine, followed by cold nights, the marvelous scenery of the Selkirks and the great Illecillewaat Glacier can be thoroughly enjoyed.

"East of Rogers' Pass, in the valley of the northward-flowing Columbia, again is found the Chinook effect, as evidenced by drier weather and a greater preponderance of clear skies than on the Western slopes. The level is still high, however; the lofty Rockies are not far to the eastward, and the distance from the coast is not so great that except when the Chinook is blowing, the character of the winter betakes rather of the Continental than the Coastal type. At Donald nearly all months are characterized by a large daily range of temperature, and that occasionally in winter extremely low temperatures are recorded."

LAME AND ACHING IN BACK AND LEGS

In Quick Time Mr. Oughtred and his Neighbor Were Cured by Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Constipation, clogged kidneys and sluggish, torpid liver are derangements which usually accompany one another. Because of their direct and combined action on the kidneys, liver and bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the most prompt and thoroughly effective treatment for these ailments that money will buy. This statement is fully borne out by the letters of recommendation which are daily received at these offices. Here is one:

Mr. J. W. Oughtred, farmer, Marbleton, Wolfe Co., Que., writes: "Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills deserve to be recommended. I was lame all through my back, legs and arms, and had a continual dull pain in my bowels. Every little thing I did required great effort, I was so sore and lame. I took lots of other pills, but they only made me sick. When haying time came on I had sixty tons of hay to pitch, and felt that I could not possibly do it.

"Just at this time Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills came to my notice and did me so much good that I worked at the haying and did lots of other hard work with ease. I sent and got five boxes, and gave away one box to a neighbour, who was suffering so badly with backache that he could not do any work. He afterwards told me that they were the best pills he ever used, and is now real well. I found that by taking two a week they kept me feeling well. Other pills give me sick headaches, but Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure sick headache and suit me better than any others."

Burdock Blood Bitters

BUILT UP THE SYSTEM AND ADDED TEN POUNDS IN WEIGHT.

Mr. Ed. J. Harris, Newbridge, Ont., was in poor health, but has now been restored to full health and vigor. Here is what he writes us: "Last spring I was in a very critical condition, my system was all run down. I felt drowsy and miserable, and thought I would surely die if I did not get something to build me up. After reading one of your almanacs I decided to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and before I had taken two bottles I had gained ten pounds in weight, and am now in perfect health, and I can certainly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters to build up the system."

"Do not talk to me in that way, Lola; I do not like it," she said. "You pervert the right order of things—which is, that women shall be wooed, not wooers."

"Times are changed, Dolores. That was the custom once."

"And always will be," returned Dolores, "while women retain—"

"My dear, do not preach to me; it is all thrown away—completely and entirely thrown away. Let me tell you about the baronet, Sir Karl Allanmore. I fell in love with the name the moment I heard it, no matter what I may do with the owner. Mamma and I of course had a dispute over it. She said he must have had German ancestors. I said that his proper name was Charles, and that he called himself Karl because it suited him. I feel sure that I am right."

"I am called Dolores, yet I am not Spanish," said Miss Clifden, and Lola looked at her with a grim little smile.

"Every one wonders how you found your name, Dolores. But do let me tell you about my baronet. It is said that Sir Karl is one of the handsomest, most debonair young men in England, moderately rich, though by no means so wealthy as Lord Rhysworth, and everything that is most delightful."

"Have you ever seen him?" asked Dolores, interested in spite of herself.

"No, not yet; but I hear that Lady Fielden gives a fete to the school-children next week, and we are all sure to go; so we shall see him then. Lord Rhysworth will be there also, I should imagine, and everybody else. The most important question to me is, what shall I wear? I have some exquisite costumes, but am quite undecided about them. Will you come over to Beaulieu and give me your opinion?"

"I do not understand much about dress," answered Dolores. "If you are so bent upon conquest, you must wear the dress that suits you best."

"I shall be very good-natured," said Lola. "If, as is not at all improbable, both Lord Rhysworth and Sir Karl admire me, I shall make one over to you."

"You are very generous."

For a moment Dolores was inclined to be angry with the girl whose opinion of her own attractions was so great.

"I like fair play," continued Lola, with a righteous air; "and I shall certainly make a point of never forgetting you."

"You seem to think it out of the question, then," laughed Dolores, "that any one should admire me?"

The utter vanity of the French girl amused her exceedingly.

"I do not say that," replied Lola, with an ear of forbearance quite as amusing to Miss Clifden as her previous speech had been. "Your style of beauty always has some admirers."

"While yours is irresistible, I suppose?" said Dolores; and the look of self-complacency on her companion's face told her that she implicitly believed her words.

CHAPTER III.

Lady Fielden's school fete was attended by the elite of the neighborhood, and was the very perfection of such an entertainment. The day was beautifully fine, with a bright, warm sun, a sweet, odorous wind, a deep blue sky, and the atmosphere so clear that the view all round the country was magnificent. Every detail of that day came back to Dolores. Her father was tired and not very well, and Madame de Ferras offered to take her with Lola. The carriage called at White Cliffe, Madame de Ferras looked very distingue and aristocratic in her velvet costume, and Lola very lovely in a dress of some rich silk material trimmed with lace. Her first, eager breathless question was—

"Do you like my dress? Now, Dolores, do not speak hastily, but look at it, and tell me candidly if you like it."

It was impossible not to like it, the costume with its rich hues was so admirably suited to the dark, glowing beauty of the wearer; and Dolores praised it highly. With an air of intense relief Lola sunk back in the carriage.

"I am glad. I must own that I looked forward with some little anxiety to what you would say."

Her critical eyes noted every detail of Dolores's dress, which was white, with picturesque dashes of blue—quite different from her own splendid attire, but far more elegant and becoming.

"She evidently goes in for simplicity," said Lola to herself—"the very opposite of myself. So much the better."

Dolores remembered how anxiously Madame De Ferras had looked at her daughter as she said to her—

"Ah, Lola, if you would but think a little more of serious things and less of vain nonsense!"

To which Lola retorted with a charming smile that a lecture was hardly appropriate on such a day. Dolores recalled the pained expression on madame's face.

"I would not have spoken to my mother in that fashion," she had said to herself.

Of all pretty scenes, a school-treat on a bright, summer day is perhaps one of the most charming. They were indeed the queens of the fete; and opinions were divided about them. Some of the men admired the fair Dolores, others the dark, glowing beauty of Lola De Ferras. All kinds of fancied names were given them. "The Rose and the Lily." "The York and the Lancaster Roses," were among the number. It was unanimously declared, however, that two more beautiful girls could not be seen.

They had been there more than an hour before Sir Karl Allanmore appeared; and that hour had not been entirely satisfactory to Lola. It was true that she had been surrounded by admirers, but she was eminently practical—none of these were eligible men. She had been longing in her heart to see Lord Rhysworth or Sir Karl.

She was looking her handsomest and best when at length the baronet arrived. She was standing before a group of tall fuchsias, which with their crimson and purple bells formed a pleasing background for her. The rich dress of silk swept the ground, and every line of her graceful figure was shown to advantage by the well-fitting costume. On her dark, beautiful face there was the faintest shadow of fatigue, which softened it wonderfully. The weary look passed from it, and a light that made it dazzlingly lovely came into it when Lady Fielden advanced to her, walking by the side of the handsomest man she ever remembered to have seen.

"Miss de Ferras," she said, "Sir Karl Allanmore wishes for the pleasure of an introduction to you."

Lola looked up and saw a laughing debonair face, bright as a May morning, with keen blue eyes and a perfect mouth. The young baronet was tall and well made, with a head proudly carried, and something of a soldierly bearing, his whole appearance giving one the impression that he enjoyed life immensely.

"Would you like to walk as far as the river?" he asked; and she answered that it would give her great pleasure to do so.

They went away together; and the world looked quite different to Lola de Ferras. It seemed brighter and better. Everything appeared couleur de rose while he was talking to her. She was saying to herself that she could not now take any trouble to cultivate Lord Rhysworth's acquaintance, that she was quite content with the attentions of one whom she had hitherto considered as second on the list.

They walked down to the bank of the river.

"I am quite a stranger in this neighborhood," said Sir Karl; "but I must say I admire it. It is picturesque, well wooded, with plenty of water. How beautiful this river is? Do you know my place at all, Miss de Ferras?"

"I know it well," she replied, secretly vowing to herself, if it were in any way possible, she would one day be mistress of Scarsdale.

"I have not yet had time to see much of my neighbors," he continued; "but I shall hope to visit Beaulieu soon."

"I am sure mamma will be pleased to see you."

She spoke demurely enough, but the flash of her dark eyes expressed more than any words could convey.

"May I hope for a welcome from you as well?" added Sir Karl, laughing with the gay, half assurance that suited him so well.

"I cannot promise that," she replied. "You will have to deserve it."

"I will do my best," he said, more gravely.

He was not that most despicable of all creatures—a male flirt; he was neither a coxcomb nor a dandy; he was neither inconstant nor insincere; but he could no more help admiring, liking, and talking to pretty girls than a butterfly can help hovering around the sweetest flowers. He never talked of love, but there was a gallantry and deference in his manner which charmed every woman with whom he came in contact. It impressed the very susceptible nature of the beautiful French girl as nothing else had ever done.

"You speak English well," he remarked to her.

"I have been more in England than in France," she answered.

"Which country do you like the best?" he asked.

Her eyes flashed with a bright light and her lips quivered with emotion. She was so completely transformed that he was startled by her loveliness.

"Which?" she said. "It shows what strangers we are that you should ask such a question. Do you think there is any comparison between this cold, dreary, misty England, where you never see the sun except through a veil, and my beautiful, sunny, fair France? I love every inch of her soil. It seems to me the very home of poetry and romance."

"We have poetry and romance also in England," remarked Sir Karl.

"Yes, but your poetry is all sad, and your romances are tragedies," she replied. "Think of the grand, old cathedral cities of France; think of the fair rivers and the noble mountains; think of the azure skies, the vines and olive-trees! Who could compare this misty, gloomy land with bright, fair France?"

She spoke with such enthusiasm that Sir Karl was interested.

"You speak eloquently," he said.

"Because I love France," she answered. "As between the lands, so between the people—there seems to be no comparison. Here in England your people are dense, dull, phlegmatic, cold, and proud. Your peasantry are boors; there is no politeness in the whole nation, unless it is amongst the higher classes. In France every man is more or less a gentleman; even the artisans and laborers are polite and courteous. If you happen to stumble against an Englishman on a narrow foot-path, he considers himself insulted, and revenges himself with an imprecation or a scowl; if the same thing happens to a Frenchman, he is so courteous, so polite, that you almost seem to have done him a favor."

"It may be so," he answered, piqued by her words. "But you cannot deny to us Englishmen two great virtues, honesty and bravery."

"I do not often read the newspapers," she said; "but I could judge best by the police reports. The little I have read has not given me an exalted idea of Englishmen."

"You are prejudiced," he remarked smiling.

"Am I. I shall hope to meet some Englishmen who will remove the prejudice?"

"I hope I shall be one of the happy band," he said, laughingly. "I shall do my best; and I shall say to myself, that in trying to please you, I am rendering a national service."

"There is one thing I must say about England," she continued. "It is a most hospitable nation—indeed, the most hospitable people in the world. Strangers came to you from every land—kings driven from their thrones, peers from their ancestral homes, all grades of political refugees. England, like a kindly matron, opens her arms to all, bids all welcome, treats all generously, never gives up those who cling to her, or who seek to hide their wounds in her bosom."

"I am glad you allow us even that much praise," he said, calmly; then after a few moments, he exclaimed suddenly: "Look! What a pretty picture, Miss de Ferras! Who is that—that young lady, I mean, in white and blue?"

She looked up with sudden misgiving, and saw that he was attentively watching Dolores. A sudden chill came over her, and her dark, brilliant face grew pale.

"That," she said, "is Miss Clifden—Dolores Clifden; have you not heard of her?"

"Dolores Clifden," he repeated, slowly. "Is she the daughter of Old Squire Clifden at White Cliffe? I have heard of her."

"Yes, that is Dolores Clifden," said Lola.

If he had been more shrewd, he would have detected a ring in her voice which betrayed her thoughts.

"Do you know her?" he asked eagerly.

There was an expression of proud surprise in her eyes as she answered him.

"Certainly I do. Are you not aware that we are called 'The Red and the White Roses?' But I am forgetting—you are only a stranger amongst us."

"I shall not be a stranger long, I hope," he returned. "I have never seen so many beautiful faces before."

"Do you like beautiful faces?" she asked.

He looked at her and laughed.

"Does a butterfly like flowers? I have been a beauty-worshipper all my life."

"Then we shall agree," said she, "for I think beauty—great personal beauty—the highest of all gifts and the most enviable."

He stopped abruptly and spoke almost eagerly.

"Ah, no; you misunderstand me! I do not mean that," he said. "I admire beauty, perhaps no man more; but I never said and never thought, and never could think it was the highest earthly gift. There are others I value more. I could admire a woman for her beautiful face, but I could never love or marry her for that alone."

She made no reply and he stood watching the sunlight on the fair face and white dress of Dolores. Suddenly he requested—

"As you know her, Miss de Ferras, will you introduce me to her?"

She could not refuse, yet she did not wish to consent. He saw the half-hesitation on her face, but saw no clew to its cause. He thought she was tired.

"Is it too far for you to walk through the glade?" he asked. "If so, never mind."

But it had suddenly occurred to her that, if he really wished for this introduction, it would be better if she should undertake it. She would know then all that passed. She turned to him with a charming smile.

"I shall be delighted," said she. "Nothing will give me greater pleasure. I am not at all tired, and the walk by the river is beautiful."

He thought that he had never met a more amiable girl, and his heart warmed to her, but his eyes still lingered on the fair, delicate face under the trees.

"So they called her the white rose'?" he said; musingly.

"Yes," Lola replied and then added, quickly, "and they call me the 'red rose'."

"All I can say is that I am very glad that I did not live in the days of the Wars of the Roses — I should not have known whether to wear the red or the white!"

"You would have made up your mind in time," she said, thoughtfully. "Every man does who has a mind worth making up."

"Do you think so? At any rate, I am well content not to be obliged to make any choice—in fact, I could not. The 'white rose' is irresistible, the 'red rose' "—and he bowed low to her—"charming. If I had been in the place of Paris, I could never have given the apple—each style is so perfect in its way."

"I respect Paris," Lola rejoined, quickly. "He made up his mind at once. I like prompt decisions."

"Do you?" he said, with some astonishment. "I should say that you are likely to be gratified. So far as I have seen the world, there are far more quick and hasty decisions than slow and wise ones."

"I have had the first chance," thought Lola, "and I will make the most of it. I will be so charming and so amiable, that he will be compelled to recognize the difference between a white rose and a red one."

Sir Karl talked for a few minutes to Dolores, Lola listening with sharpened ears. But he said very much the same as he had said to her.

He told Dolores that he had had no time to call at White Cliffe, but he should do so at once; he regretted not having been at home when the Squire had called. He liked the simple, girlish way in which she said:

"You will find White Cliffe a very quiet, old-fashioned place. It is one of the oldest houses in the county."

"That is just the kind of place I like," he answered. "One seldom sees anything quiet or old-fashioned in these days. I am often half undecided as to whether the olden days were not the best."

"I am sure they were not," remarked Lola. "I think every age improves; and I am quite satisfied with the one in which I live."

"I am very glad to hear it," said Sir Karl; "and you, Miss Clifden?"

"I am very happy," she replied, "and think no age could be better than this."

Blood Disorders

are simply kidney disorders. The kidneys filter the blood of all that shouldn't be there. The blood passes through the kidneys every three minutes. If the kidneys do their work no impurity or cause of disorder can remain in the circulation longer than that time. Therefore if your blood is out of order your kidneys have failed in their work. That Lame Back

You can hardly straighten up, the back feels so sore. There's a chance that it is kidney trouble, and that is something which it is dangerous to neglect. The best medicine for disease of the kidneys is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The use of this medicine has resulted in some remarkable cures. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands, purifies the blood and relieves the kidneys from clogging impurities.

"I feel it my duty to let you know that I have recently advised a young gentleman who was suffering badly with kidney and bladder disease to try your 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Frank Startz, M. D., of Flatonia, Fayette Co., Texas. "He bought four bottles from our druggist here, and after he had used the first bottle he began to improve. Sometimes he was unable to walk ten steps; now he can ride any horse without any pain in his back and he looks as well and sound as a young boy. His age is only 16. He has suffered for nearly three years, and several other doctors called the case incurable, but I had confidence in Dr. R. V. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I have been offered one hundred dollars several times already for my kind advice, but I would not accept it because I want everybody to know what Dr. Pierce's famous medicine can do.

"This testimony is absolutely true, and the reason I haven't mentioned the young gentleman's name is because he don't want to have his name published."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." The sole motive for substitution is to enable the dealer to make the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious preparations.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets stimulate the action of the sluggish liver. They should always be used with "Discovery" when there is need of a laxative.

QUOTATIONS ON THE WALL STREET MARKET.

A "Slump" Followed by Quick Strong Re-action.

The Quotations of th Leading Stocks —Market Letters.

The Wall Street stock market opened at about the same as last night's closing prices. The market was steady for the first hour, after that a sagging tendency was discernable. This later developed into a slump, which in turn was followed by a quick and strong reaction. All stocks closed up, some at the highest prices of the day.

One feature of the market was the drive by bears against Southern Pacific, which incurred a number of stop lose orders. This stock opened at 56 3-8, dropped to 52 1-2 and closed at 55 1-2.

New York, April 28.—The market today will probably be narrow and reflect an indifferent sentiment on preset trading public for whom nothing presents itself in way of sufficient inducement to take hold of market on other side. London is non-committal this morning with net results about evenly divided but if anything rather below our closing. Political influence covering Manchurian discussion seem to have narrowed down to diplomatic chances and we consider this fact indicitive of a peaceful outcome. Export of gold in view of low money rates here are not unlikely on payment of loans made during money stringency and also from fact that high-priced cotton has made experts moderate, a condition which also prevails in cereals. The impression s that outward movement will b eligh tof yellow metal, if it takes place at all, local money conditiulons will undoubtedly continue easy for call money during May though a relaxation in time rates is not expected.

LIZARDS IN SAMOA.

The Way They Shed Their Tails and Feel the Kittens.

A writer of Samoa writes in an interesting way of the lizards, little fellows about two inches long, prettily colored in a light and dark shade of brown. They can run up a window pane quite as easily as can the flies on which they feed.

"When alarmed, the lizards are off like a flash of light and will take the most reckless leaps. I have seen them land safe at the end of a twenty foot jump. Yet when cornered they have no hesitation in snapping off the most of their tails.

"That was a maddening puzzle to my small cat. The sight of a mo'o anywhere was an immediate challenge to the kitten. She would immediately start on the hunt, for the most part a fruitless chase, for the little lizard could skulk off faster than two cats could pursue. Yet when the kitten did succeed in landing on the lizard there followed a scene of bewilderment. The mo'o invariably snapped off its tail, which was left wriggling in one part of the veranda, while the lizard ran off a short distance and awaited developments.

"The kitten never knew whether to catch the lizard or the tail. If the mo'o moved, the kitten went for it, but she always stopped short to keep an eye on the wriggles of the tail. As soon as she turned back to take care of the tail the mo'o got in motion and had to be looked after. Hundreds of times I have watched the dilemma, and the ending was always the same—the lizard got away and the kitten had to be content with the bony tail. But there were lots of lizards about my house sprouting new tails."—Youth's Companion.

How Trees Differ as to Their Roots.

Trees whose roots are of the same length and fiber do not thrive as well as those which are unequal, because they develop better when their roots reach for nutriment in different strata or depths of the earth. The oak could not live in soil where the pine would thrive luxuriantly. This is owing to the nature of the trees. One requires the most solid nutriment. The pine requires light, sandy soil and the atmospheric conditions of sunshine and rain. The oak, maple, elm, hemlock, birch and beech all require warm and clean soil. Trees are noted for picking out the attractive places, and where there are flourishing forests may be found the best land and the soil always productive.

Too Much For Patrick.

The other day a little red faced Irishman approached a postoffice which had three letter boxes outside. One was labeled "City," another "Domestic" and the third "Foreign." He looked at the three in turn and then, as a puzzled expression crossed his face, scratched his head.

"Faith," he was heard to mutter, "I don't know in which wan to put th' letter! Sure, Katie's a domestick, an' she lives in th' city, all right, an' she's a furriner, too; but, begobs, I dunno how th' thing can go in both of th' three holes at wance!"

HELD THEIR ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING.

The First Reader Addressed the Meeting.

Lengthy Discourse on Church Work—New Organization of Only Two Years Standing.

First Church of Christ Scientists, 378 Aylmer street, held their annual business meeting Monday, April 27th, for the purpose of receiving reports of officers, and to elect officers for the ensuing year. The financial rreports of both Sunday School and Church show them to be in a very prosperous condition.

There is a substantial balance on the right side after all expenses have been paid.

Preceding the election of officers the First Reader addressed the meeting as follows:—

Officers and Members of First Church of Christ Scientist.

Beloved Brethren,—We are again assembled in our annual meeting, for the purpose of electing officers, and doing other business in connectiuon with this church.

About two years ago we united together and organized First Church of Christ Scientist, Peterborough, Ontario, a branch of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts, known as the Mother Church, for the purpose of propagating the doctrine of Christian Science, as taught by "Science and Health, with key to the Scriptures," by Rev. Mary B. G. Eddy, which claims to give the spiritual interpretation of the Scriptures, so as to free mankind from the bondage of materialism, overcoming sin and its effects, sickness and all discord. Our stock in trade is our understanding of God and trust therein as All Good, All Wise, and All Loving Father and Mother. Then Brethren, is it not wise on this occasion to take stock, and ascertain as individuals, and as a body, does this way of teaching the Scriptures, and following Jesus Christ, pay? Does it produce what it claims, the bringing of "Peace on Earth, and Good Will Toward Man," as Jesus said "The Kingdom of Heaven on Earth," health and holiness? Permit me to briefly call your attention to a few facts in connection with us, as a body, facts which you are all familiar with. You know as mortals, we are apt to forget the goodness of God to us. It may do us good to recall some of the blessings we have received through Christ. Our text-book "Science and Health" t ells us "We should put the finger on the lips and remember our blessing."
